2,000 AMERICANS NOW IN PARIS FOR LEGION SESSIONS

Cold Rain on Last Day of Mobilization for Convention Recalls Chill Days of 10 Years Ago.

WAR LEADERS PAY TRIBUTES TO DEAD

Enthusiasm of French as Whole Genuine — Discordant Communist Note Becoming Less Violent.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 17. — Armistice weather—that cold, penetrating, chilling rain—closed in on the American Legion today.

The Legionnaires arriving at Paris on this, the last day of peacetime mobilization for their pious pilgrimage, found that it chilled them just as it did 10 years ago in the trenches and as they went over the top in that fateful forest. Three thousand Legionnaires arrived after having landed from the steamships Tuscania, Coronia and Pocahontas at Havre, and the steamship Republic at Cherbourg.

Cold rain pelted down upon Marshal Foch, Gen. John J. Pershing and National Commander Howard P. Savage as they paid homage to the American war dead at Suresnes Cemetery.

22,000 Men, 6000 Women.

But the gang is all here and the rain has neither dampened the enthusiasm of the delegates nor chilled the warmth of the French welcome. Twenty-two thousand men and 6000 women forming the delegations of the American Legion and its Auxiliary now are here for their respective conventions which open Monday.

The big charge up Montmartre Hill began this evening before the cabarets were opened and there were long line-ups at places Legionnaires remembered from former days here.

Cafes were rushed all evening and every tired business man's place in town played to standing room only. All the cinemas were filled and many of them showed the film of the big victory parade that followed the Armistice, with explanations in English and French.

The Legionnaires made the staid old French people stare, but finally smile as groups, with caps at all angles, marched along singing their songs, shouting poor French and having a general good time.

The ceremony at Suresnes Cemetery was the most important function today. There Commander-in-Chief Savage, speaking directly to the dead, rather than to the living audience, said that the Legion had kept the faith which the dead comrades had entrusted to it.

Tributes to American Dead.

Marshal Foch, in a strikingly brief address, said of the American war dead:

"On the day they saw the justice, liberty and peace of the world menaced by violence and might nothing could stop them. They took up their arms."

"No soldier would wish a sweeter resting place than in the field of glory where he fell," Gen. Pershing said. The people of two nations watch over him in ceaseless solicitude and to each he becomes a symbol of mutual gratitude."

Pershing, Savage and Marshal Foch made the only addresses, with French military and civil leaders present. The ceremonies were presided over by Sheldon Whitehouse, American Charge d'Affaires. Among those attending included Gen. W. Harts, military attache; Gen. Milton Foreman, Gens. Debeny and Beauraud, Col. T. Bentley Mott, Prefect Bowju of the Seine Department, and Capt. l'Hopital, aid to Marshal Foch.

The ceremonies were opened with an invocation by National Chaplain Wolfe.

Chaplain Dubell, former chaplain in the 114th Infantry, pronounced the benediction and Hugh Bove of the Paris Post of the American Legion, high on the hill above the cemetery, sounded taps.

Never before has Paris been so profusely decorated since the Armistice celebration or the Victory Parade on July 14, 1919. The enthusiasm of the French people as a whole is really genuine. The only discordant note comes from the communist publications, but they are much less violent in tone than a few weeks ago at the height of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration.

WOMEN'S EDITOR DESCRIBES FALL IN FRENCH PLANE

Kansas City Star Writer Freed From Wreck Before Fire Broke Out.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Miss Nell Snead, one of seven passengers who crashed in an airplane 15 miles south of Boulogne, France, while on the way to London, Sept. 3, returned today from Europe to tell of her experiences. Miss Snead is editor of the women's page of the Kansas City Star.

"Luncheon was being served—an excellent French meal. We had coffee and the liqueurs had been placed on the table," she said. "There were seven passengers.

"Suddenly someone noticed that one of the wings of the airplane was covered with some sort of mist, obviously vaporized gasoline. Then the pilot came into the dining compartment at the wing. He went back to the steering compartment and his assistant hurried in, looked, and went back.

"The plane began to wobble. We could feel we were dropping. The steward came in from forward and threw down both hands as a signal that we were going to fall.

"None of us stirred. Nobody spoke. Neither of the women screamed. We just waited. To me it seemed we did not wait long. I did not feel a crash or feel anything.

"My next recollection was hearing some one say, 'Get these women out of here. This is going to burst into flames any minute.' Then the voice said, 'This one is dead'—meaning myself."

Miss Snead said she had suffered only a wrenched shoulder and scratches.

SOLDIER'S RULES FOR WIFE FAIL IN COURT

Army Captain, Hero in Novel, Is Denied Divorce on Ground of "Willful Absence."

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17.—Capt. Herman N. Archer, hero in fact of Richard Harding Davis' novel "Mr. Archer, U. S. A." was denied a divorce here today when court found that Archer's own set of army rules for a soldiers wife did not constitute grounds for divorce. Instead the court has offered Mrs. Archer a divorce.

Capt. Archer, soldier of fortune, author and Davis' hero, charged Mrs. Archer with wilful absence. One of Archer's army set of rules for a soldier's wife was that "she agrees to marry the map."

"Mrs. Archer did just that," common pleas Judge Samuel H. Silbert, who heard the case wrote in the opinion today. The decision held that evidence did not show she had been absent wilfully from her husband, that when Archer was moved from one army post to another she followed him and taught dancing to help earn a living.

Instead, the opinion held that Archer, as he gained fame as an author and advance in the army ranking lists to a captaincy, "ceased to be proud of his wife and deserted her."

Mrs. Archer was offered a divorce in the ruling and her attorney here said she wired him from San Francisco tonight to accept the offer. The understanding tonight was that Mrs. Archer was to receive $50 a month alimony until she remarries and $300 attorney fees.

The Archers were married 20 years ago. He filed suit for divorce here last spring.

Judge Silbert's decision paid Archer a compliment in character, saying, "Capt. Archer is a man of picturesque character, good habits and is known as a regular he-man. But he is a failure as a husband."

Capt. Archer is an instructor in military tactics, Princeton University. Other rules of his for a soldier's wife:

"She can't feel skittish about her old man turning up, or worry even though he is out with another girl.

"If he is promoted and she is taking in laundry, she must continue to take it in quietly.

"Do whatever he commanded and not question it."

STATE EX-OFFICIALS SENTENCED

Two Nevada Men Receive 5 to 15-Year Terms for Misappropriations.

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev., Sept. 17.—Ed Malley and George A. Cole, former State officials, were sentenced to serve from five to fifteen years in the State penitentiary today.

They were convicted last week of misappropriating $516,322 from the State Treasury. Malley formerly was State Treasurer and Cole was State Comptroller.

CALL UPON SMITH TO FOLLOW M'ADOO IN QUITTING RACE

Senators Harris, Georgia, and Fletcher, Florida, Hope Thus to Reunite Democratic Factions.

CARAWAY ALSO TAKES THEIR VIEW

Gov. Smith Silent on Plain Hint in McAdoo's Letter That He, Too, Drop Out of Running.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—A call for Gov. Smith of New York to follow the lead of William G. McAdoo and withdraw from the race was made here today by Senator Harris of Georgia, who said that unless Smith does so "the next Democratic convention will see a repetition of the Madison Square Garden fight."

"The only hope of Democratic success is for us to unite on some man the Smith and McAdoo factions can agree on," Harris said. "I have nothing but the kindest feelings toward Gov. Smith. He has made a splendid Governor. But Mr. McAdoo made one of the greatest Secretaries of the Treasury the country has ever had and his claims on the party are just as great as those of Gov. Smith.

"I am not supporting any candidate but I recently visited fifty counties in my State and found all sides that a large majority of the people of Georgia are opposed to Gov. Smith's nomination."

Sen. Fletcher of Florida agreed with Harris, declaring McAdoo "sacrifices himself in order to avoid any clash such as that at Madison Square Garden," and that Smith "should do the same thing and just wipe off the slate."

"If Gov. Smith, whose prominence is such as to entitle him to be a candidate, should feel impelled to follow Mr. McAdoo's example the next Democratic convention will name the next President of the United States," said Senator Caraway of Arkansas.

The McAdoo announcement will have little effect on the Democratic presidential situation in the opinion of Senator Dill of Washington, who said today he had not considered McAdoo as an active candidate for some time. McAdoo's withdrawal, Dill declared, would make no difference in the opposition to Gov. Smith. This opposition is based on issues and is not centered in McAdoo or any other single candidate.

McAdoo's Withdrawal.

McAdoo's announcement that he would not run had been awaited for a long time by Democratic leaders. It came in the form of a letter to George F. Milton, publisher of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News, in response to a letter from Milton urging him to announce his candidacy and take the leadership of "progressive Democracy."

Those who interpreted the McAdoo pronouncement as an invitation to Smith to remove himself from the field pointed to the former Treasury Secretary's statement that the 1924 Democratic campaign had been "rendered abortive by the unfortunate injection, against my opposition, of the false religious issue into the Democratic national convention," and his further declaration that if there was a repetition of this next year "the party would be reduced again to impotence."

"Everything possible should be done to prevent the 1928 convention from degenerating into a struggle of individuals for personal preferment at the expense of principles and policies of fundamental importance to party character and to the welfare of the nation. Principles and policies must come first. Personal ambitions, however legitimate, and every selfish purpose should be subordinated to them."

Declaring that he probably could do more to advance the objects of the party as a private citizen than as a candidate for the presidency, McAdoo said he preferred to stand aside in order that the field might be left clear, "so far as I can clear it."

Won't Aid Smith.

While not mentioning him by name, McAdoo made it fairly clear in his pronouncement, as he had previously in conversation with his friends, that as a private citizen he would continue to oppose the candidacy of the New York Governor. Moreover, he indicated that he would oppose any wet candidate.

The announcement by the former Secretary of the Treasury served to revive here a general discussion

HEAT MAKES NIGHT-BLOOMING CEREUS OPEN NINE BLOSSOMS

Unusual Number of Blooms Appear on Rare Plant in Julius A. Baer Family 25 Years.

Stimulated by the heat of the last two weeks, a night-blooming cereus at the Conway road home of Julius A. Baer opened nine large white blossoms last night. The usual number of blossoms on this plant, at its infrequent periods of blooming, is three or four.

The rare plant has been in the Baer family nearly 25 years, and has bloomed every two or three years. The blossoms grow from the leaf, not from the stem, and a leaf which has once flowered will not repeat the process for 20 years or so. The plant was brought from Hawaii.

DETROIT OFFICIAL ARRESTED, $18,000 IN LIQUOR SEIZED

Public Administrator and Friend Arrested in Chicago Hotel by Federal Dry Agents.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Arthur A. Koscinski, Public Administrator of Wayne County, Michigan, Detroit, and Alex Mowakowski, also of Detroit, were arrested by Federal prohibition agents today as the owners of 12 trunks of liquor found in Koscinski's room in a loop hotel.

The liquor, valued at $18,000, was to have been used during the convention of the Polish National Alliance at the hotel next week, Federal Agent Frank White said Koscinski told him.

The trunks were trailed from a railroad station to the hotel following their arrival today, and seized immediately after the two men were arrested.

Fog at Sea Forces Naval Aviators Off Course—Bodies Found With Parachutes Unopened.

By the Associated Press.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 17.—Seven persons were killed today and five injured when a Fokker airplane, which had flown over all the airways of Europe and had made one famous trip from Holland to West Africa, crashed in an apple orchard near New Market, N. J.

The fuselage telescoped, crushing all inside the cabin. The machine was owned by the Reynolds Airways and was brought to this country from Holland about two months ago. It set out from Hadley Field this afternoon with its load of passengers seeking their first thrill in the air.

List of Fatalities.

The dead:

Harry A. Chandler, New Brunswick, pilot.

J. V. "Charley" King, Plainfield, mechanic.

Russell Campbell, Plainfield, treasurer and superintendent of the Suburban Transit Co.

Russell Campbell Jr., 7, Plainfield.

Miss Helen R. O'Neil, Newark.

Mrs. Fred Donovan, Plainfield.

Frank Heater, New Brunswick.

Heater and Miss O'Neil died in Muhlenberg Hospital. The others were dead when taken from the plane. All the victims were caught in the wreckage in such a way that it was with difficulty they were taken out.

Coroner Edward Gowen, of Middlesex County took charge of the bodies and removed them to his morgue at New Brunswick. He said he would have no announcement as to inquest or investigation until he had conferred with the County Physician and other officials.

Injured Taken to Hospital.

The injured, who were brought to Muhlenberg Hospital in this city, are: Matthew Lutz, New Brunswick; Louis Pellis, New Brunswick; Lorraine Donovan, Plainfield; Verna Donovan, her sister; Bessie Heater, 16, daughter of Frank Heater.

The airplane had been making sightseeing trips 20 minutes long for $20 a passenger. Today, however, was bargain day at Hadley Field and the rates were put down to one cent a pound, according to a passenger's weight.

Chandler did not come on duty till well along in the afternoon. Another pilot had been making trips all day and had carried nearly 100 passengers. Chandler made four successful flights with passengers. It was on the fifth one the tragedy occurred.

The mechanician, J. V. King, met death on his second day in service. He quit a job as a garage mechanic Thursday night in order to go into something with a bigger future.

Rudolph Kanpf, proprietor of the Five Acres Restaurant, which adjoins the apple orchard in which the plane struck, said that he saw the plan, heard the 450-horsepower Jupiter engine go dead and watched the plane turn over on one side and drop below the trees.

On the other side of the apple-orchard is the Schenck farm. Fred and George Schenck were the first to reach the scene of the

NEW SIGNALS SPEED TRAFFIC ON LINDELL

Synchronization of Stops Gives Autos Clear Road at 25 Miles an Hour.

The new Lindell boulevard traffic signals, which confound the speeder by forcing him to frequent stops, but allow the 25-mile-an-hour driver to run between Grand boulevard and Kingshighway boulevard without a stop, were put into operation last night.

The signals are at Grand boulevard, Vandeventer avenue, Sarah street, and Newstead and Euclid avenues. They are set so that East-and-West traffic flows for 40 seconds and is interrupted for 30 seconds by opposing traffic.

The intervals are so synchronized, however, that the driver who drives west from Grand boulevard and holds his car at a speed between 22 and 25 miles an hour finds the signals set at "Go" as he makes his way westward.

A Post-Dispatch reporter who tried out the system last night found that he could drive from Grand to Kingshighway in exactly four minutes if he kept his speed between 23 and 25 miles an hour. If he speeded up he found that he had to stop at most of the signals gaining no time in the run but making himself a lot of unnecessary labor in gear shifting.

Similarly motorists who enter the boulevard at any of the intermediate signals find themselves speeded either to Grand or Kingshighway by the use of moderate haste, while high speeds force frequent stops and low speeds cause them to miss the "Go" signals altogether.

The timers in the new signals cost $.35 each. A force of men under Traffic Engineer Hoffman were on the boulevard last night to check on the operation of the system.

COOLIDGE HAS TO DECLINE GIFT

Law Prevents Him From Accepting Shield From Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—An elaborate shield was presented to President Coolidge today by official callers from Ethiopia but he was unable to accept it.

The law prohibits the President or other government officers from accepting gifts from foreign countries. However, the shield, which was encased in a bright red covering, was left on Mr. Coolidge's desk for his disposition. Dr. C. Martin, legal adviser to the Prince Regent of Ethiopia, presented the shield.

Driver Killed in Auto Race.

By the Associated Press.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Sept. 17.—Sheldon Smith, driving an automobile in a 50-mile dirt track race here today, was killed when his car skidded on a turn and crashed against a heavy wire fence. The racing car struck a horse ridden by P. E. Bohna, a track official. This occurrence probably saved the lives of more than a score of spectators who were gathered near the fence. Bohna was not hurt.

TWO EARTHQUAKES RECORDED IN SEVERAL CALIFORNIA CITIES

Shocks Lasting 20 Seconds Rattled Dishes on Tables; No Serious Damage Reported.

FRESNO, Cal., Sept. 17.—Two distinct earthquake shocks lasting a total of 20 seconds were felt generally tonight in the San Joaquin Valley in the region surrounding Fresno. Reports of severe shocks were received from Bass Lake, Big Creek and other mountain points in the Sierras. Auberry, 40 miles northeast of Fresno, felt the tembior and points 30 miles in other directions also recorded it. No damage was reported. The shocks started at 6:08 p. m.

Hanford reported dishes rattled and doors slammed. At Bishop several chimneys were shaken down and store windows crashed and broken. Bakersfield also recorded shocks. The earth tremor lasted 12 seconds at Mina, Nev.

Extending westward it moved over an irregular mountain course down to the floor of the great San Joaquin Valley, and made itself felt from Bakersfield on the south to Stockton on the north. The total distance covered by the tremor was approximately 550 miles.

FIVE PERSONS HURT, ONE SERIOUSLY, IN AUTO COLLISION

Driver Suffers Skull Fracture in Crash at Compton Avenue and Caroline Street.

Homer Granger of 3248 Henrietta street was seriously injured last night, when an automobile he was driving collided with one driven by Earl Ware of 1809A Iowa avenue, at Compton avenue and Caroline street. Ware and three other occupants of his machine were injured.

Granger was taken to City Hospital where he was found to be suffering from skull fracture. His wife, Mrs. Bessie Granger, was slightly bruised and cut. Ware was arrested on a charge of careless driving.

GEN. WOOD'S ESTATE $100,000

Widow Applies for Appointment as Administrator.

By the Associated Press.

BARNSTABLE, Mass., Sept. 17.—An estate of $100,000 of which $70,000 is in personal property, was left by Major-General Leonard Wood, Governor-General of the Philippine Islands, in Probate Court here today the widow petitioned Judge Campbell to appoint her administrator.

Gen. Wood apparently left no will. He maintained a legal residence in Pocasset and the estate will be administrated in Barnstable County. Three children and the widow survive, as well as a brother, Jacob, living in Pocasset.

Invitation to German Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 17. — Members of the Service Star Legion, comprising women relatives of world war veterans, voted today to send a letter of protest to the National Air Derby Association of this city, asking that an invitation extended to Jack von Weigand, German flyer, now in the United States to attend the air races here next week, be recalled. The members, many of them gold star mothers, regretted "that the air association would make a hero of the man who shot down Quentin Roosevelt and 21 other American aviators during the world war," said an announcement of the action.

BOY, 14, CONFESSES HE KILLED GIRL, 6, IN CEDAR RAPIDS

Lyle Messner, Sought Since Body Was Found, Arrested at Rock Island, Ill.—Denies Intent to Kill.

By the Associated Press.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Sept. 17.—Lyle Messner, 14 years old, Cedar Rapids (Ia.) youth, sought for several days in connection with the murder of Kathleen Forrest, 6, of Cedar Rapids, was arrested here today and confessed the crime.

Chief of Police Benesh and County Attorney Bangover of Cedar Rapids, obtained the confession shortly after the lad was taken into custody when he appealed for food at the Rescue Mission here. Bangover was summoned from Cedar Rapids to question the youth.

In his confession the high school student said he had not intended to kill the little girl, whose body was found in a hole in a wall of a basement in a vacant house near her home. Young Messner said he became frightened lest the girl's screams would attract attention and tried to smother her cries.

A playmate had told authorities Wessner had seized the girl and dragged her into the empty house when she refused to accompany him for a nickel.

He disappeared immediately following the incident, which occurred Wednesday, and had not been heard from until his arrest here today. When taken into custody the youth said his name was James Breckle and maintained his alias until he broke down under questioning, police said.

Immediately following the confession, the youth, in custody of the County Attorney, left for Cedar Rapids where he will be formally charged with the slaying.

ASKS LONGER JAIL TERM FOR INDIANA DRY LEAGUE CHIEF

Attorney-General Charges Dr. Shumaker Augmented Contempt by Trying to Influence Court.

ANTI-SALOON HEAD BRINGS IN WATSON

Asserts Senator Said He Had Seen Supreme Judges in His Behalf—Watson Denies the Charge.

By the Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17.—Because of published letters indicating an alleged attempt to influence the Indiana Supreme Court, Attorney-General Gilliom today filed a motion with the court to increase the sentence imposed in the contempt cases of Dr. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, and two league attorneys.

The Attorney-General moved to modify the judgment made against Dr. Shumaker, which carried a sentence of 60 days on the State Penal Farm and a fine of $250, and asked the court to increase the sentence imposed on Shumaker on the ground that the sentence "now appears inadequate, because of corrupt demands by him, the said Shumaker, to corruptly influence a decision favorable to him in this cause."

Letters Made Public.

Letters published today link the names of Senators James E. Watson and Arthur R. Robinson, and Shumaker in an alleged attempt to influence the court.

"In support of this motion," said Attorney-General Gilliom, "the State offers testimony of Clyde A. Walb, Republican State chairman; James E. Watson, Henry Lane Wilson, Boyd Gurley, editor of the Indianapolis Times; Arthur Robinson and others."

Shumaker recently was sentenced for contempt of court for statements carried in the League's annual report for 1925. Sentence of Jesse E. Martin, attorney for the league, will be passed Oct. 5 and both men are out on bond until that date when appeals probably will be filed. Ethan A. Miles, the other league attorney cited for contempt, was acquitted.

Shumaker's Statement.

Shumaker in a statement last night said that on Aug. 5, 1926, he called at the home of Senator Robinson in Indianapolis to protest against delay of the decision in his contempt case. Shumaker related that Robinson called Senator Watson on the telephone at the summer home of Henry L. Wilson, at Culver, Ind. After some conversation between the two Senators, Shumaker says he was called to the telephone and Senator Watson spoke as follows: "Doctor, I have done something in this case entirely different to anything I have done before. I have talked to three of the Judges and they are the three who are not supposed to be friendly to you. They have assured me that you will never be sent to jail and there will be nothing done in your case until after the election."

Shumaker says he asked Senator Watson what could be done at that time, and that the Senator replied that the court would fine Shumaker, but would not deprive him of his liberty. Shumaker, in order to obtain from Watson a statement in writing, wrote the Senator the next day reminding of the conversation.

Senator Watson's Reply.

In reply Watson said that Shumaker had misunderstood him. Watson said he told Shumaker by phone that since the Supreme Court was on vacation it was reasonable to infer that the case would not be decided until after the election.

"Furthermore," Senator Watson said, "I did not intend to say to you that the court had decided to not send you to jail but to fine you and reprimand you. I have no authority for making a statement of that kind. When Arthur Robnson came to meet Washington . . . . he said he was exceedingly anxious for me to work in my own way consistently with my views in regard to the courts to keep you from going to jail. I wrote a number of letters through Indiana that I hoped might be helpful in bringing about such a conclusion. I was not in a position to either write to any judge of the Supreme Court or to discuss the matter with him over the telephone."

At the Rochester (Minn.) hospital where he is a patient, Watson said: "I have not seen the statement of Dr. Shumaker, and neither have I read over the letter I am alleged to have written him. Until I read these I cannot make much of a statement about the matter. However, I do know I never did speak to a Judge of the Supreme Court about the Shumaker case, nor did I ever tell Shumaker that I had or would. I never in my life have spoken to any Judge about any case that was being heard or tried before him, and I could not have told Shumaker that I would speak to any one of them about it, because such a course would have been contrary to my whole life's teachings and belief."

A statement issued by Senator Robinson last night said that he talked to Senator Watson at Washington about the Shumaker case, but expressed only sympathy for the dry leader. Robinson said he told Shumaker he could do nothing about having his contempt case decided at an early date but advised him to see Watson about it. Watson then was reached on the telephone and Shumaker was allowed to talk to him.

Robinson Challenges Editor.

Gurley, editor of the Indianapolis Times, recently published an editorial which contained this paragraph: "It (the Times) is fighting to end the time when a United States Senator will endeavor to influence for political considerations and expediencies the decisions of its Supreme Court."

Senator Robinson made public a letter to Gurley in which he demanded that the editor go before the Indiana Supreme Court and tell his whole story and submit his evidence.

Flag has gone up on the Paris City Hall to remain there for a week. A gold key inlaid with diamonds, a symbol of welcome, was presented to Commander Savage by Gabriel Hanotaux, member of the French Academy and President of the Comite France-Amerique.

"You need no key to our hearts," Hanotaux said.

As Gen. Pershing clasping the arm of his war-time comrade, Marshal Foch, entered the building, several hundred persons burst into enthusiastic and spontaneous cheering. The attitude of Pershing and Foch toward one another both at the cemetery and at other functions, is an evidence that they are the best of "buddies."

Look to Pleasure of Visitors.

As the cold rain filtered through the flimsy cloth roof of the Legion headquarters which houses the Travel Department, the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus, the library and cable offices, and the Red Cross first aid station, efforts were made to have things as homelike as possible for the hundreds of Legionaires who have been driven from the Paris streets by the steady downpour.

Women Affected by Reception.

The American women, members of the Legion Auxiliary, in Paris, tonight, were eager to show their gratitude to the French people for their kindness to American soldiers during the somber days of the World War.

The women's ranks of the American Legion convention now are almost complete.

"From the greeting we got at Cherbourg, we women know what kind of a reception our boys got during the war," said Mrs. Adalin Wright MacAuley, national president of the auxiliary.

Gold Star Mothers.

Gold Star Mothers will have no official ceremony or sad public rites to perform during their stay in Paris with the Legion and will be left alone to express their feelings as they see fit, said Mrs. William Henry Schofield of Peterborough, N. H., chosen by the national auxiliary president to represent mothers who lost their sons on the field of honor.

Their visits to the graves of sons who remain on French soil will be personal pilgrimages. They will be permitted, Mrs. Schofield said, to go when and as they wish to the shrine of the unknown in Paris, day or night. Others will always be permitted to lay flowers on the sacred grave or to pray beside the flame that always burns at the tomb.

California's 1,000,000 Oranges Reach Havre Safely.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE, France, Sept. 17.—California's million oranges, sent for the delectation of France, came in today with 400 men from the West on the steamship De Grasse.

The French line pier was decorated with flags and a French band of recruits played the "Star Spangled Banner." The American Legionnaires surrounded the youths and asked them to play the famous French war song, "Madelon," but the recruits did not know it, so the Legion band showed them how.

The French had been told that the oranges would be tossed to the crowds along the line of march of the parade but the authorities feared that the French crowds might not understand the American idea and suggested that this be abandoned. Consequently the Californians are going to distribute some the fruit from a float and others will be given to hospitals.

National Holiday Proclaimed in Tunis for Legion Convention.

By the Associated Press.

TUNIS, Sept. 17.—Sidi Mohammed, Bey of Tunis, has issued a decree declaring Sept. 19 a holiday in honor of the American Legion. Tunis is a colonial possession of France, where the nineteenth, the day of the opening of the American Legion convention, also has been declared a national holiday.

BOY ON BICYCLE HIT BY AUTO; FRACTURE OF SKULL FEARED

Robert Williams, 15-year-old son of Harold M. Williams, 5727 De Giverville avenue, suffered a probable skull fracture when an automobile knocked him from his bicycle yesterday afternoon at Waterman and De Baliviere avenues. The youth was attempting to turn east into Waterman from De Baliviere and was hit by a car driven west on Waterman by William Molasky, 25 years old, of 6122 Waterman avenue.

Williams was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where physicians say his condition is critical. Molasky was arrested and released on bond.

Three Boys Drowned in River.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 17.—Three boys were swept to their death in the swift current of the Missouri River here today.

Alfred Burger, 11 years old, and Harvey Davis, also 11, were carried into midstream by the river's undercurrent while wading this afternoon near the Hannibal Railroad bridge at the foot of Broadway. A mile downstream, Mario Civello drowned when he attempted to swim from the river bank to an island in mid-river.

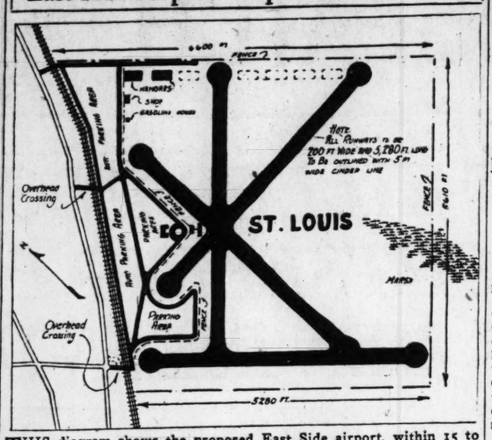
East Side Airport Proposed for St. Louis



THIS diagram shows the proposed East Side airport, within 15 to 20 minutes' motor distance of the downtown section of St. Louis. It is an area about one mile square, now under cultivation, three miles south of the business center of East St. Louis, and reached by a street car line and upper Cahokia road. It is level except for some low ground which could be filled in, and is not subject to overflow by the Mississippi. Because of its size and conformation, it would permit runways more than 5000 feet long in every direction. It is recommended by B. Russell Shaw, airport expert, and the technical committee of the local airport organization. Another site recommended as an additional, not an alternative airport, is north of Bissell's Point, on ground to be reclaimed from the Mississippi—its area to exceed that of Forest Park.

LEAGUE COUNCIL DEADLOCKED ON RUMANIAN ROW

Bitter Discussion Over Settlement With Hungarian Landowners Ended by Motion to Adjourn.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—The council of the League of Nations stands deadlocked tonight after an all-day session devoted to ironing out the Rumanian-Hungarian controversy arising from the application of Rumania's agrarian legislation to property of Hungarian landowners in territories ceded to Rumania in 1919.

The discussion became so acrimonious and the tone of the speeches so harsh that at 7:45 this evening President Villegas of Chile moved an adjournment until Monday morning. The motion was carried. The position at the end of the first rounds are:

Foreign Minister Titulescu of Rumania accepts the report of the council committee submitted by Sir Austen Chamberlain at the forenoon session. This report declared that the provisions of the peace do not exclude application to Hungarian Nationals of the general scheme of agrarian reform in Rumania, that there must be no inequality between Hungarians and Rumanians either in terms of the agrarian law or in the way in which it is to be enforced, and that the words "retention and liquidation' mentioned in the treaty of Trianon relating only to territories ceded Hungary apply solely to measures taken against the property of Hungarians in the territories.

Reproaches Hungary.

Count Apponyi of Hungary maintains that the situation requires a judicial decision from the World Court and refuses to accept the Council's decision, saying that the Council is purely a political body and warning that to adopt the report would be to make a great mistake.

M. Titulescu at tonight's session reproached Hungary with having argued on the mere basis of a money compensation before the mixed tribunal instituted to settle the claims of Hungary and now before the Council, taking a high and lofty moral viewpoint inconsistent with the previous attitude. He said the Council's solution as it stood represented an immense sacrifice for Rumania, but he was prepared to accept it.

"We have been trying to settle this by direct negotiation for the last six months and Rumania has made all the concessions possible, he said. "Hungary has not budged an inch."

Chamberlain stuck by his report. Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany backed up Hungary and M. Paul-Boncour of France supported Rumania.

Anti-alcohol forces have lost the first round of their battle to have the League of Nations enter the war against excessive drinking of spiritous liquor.

After meeting opposition of delegates from vine and whisky producing and consuming countries the Finnish delegation practically threw up the sponge today when it announced that in view of the complexity of the problem they would present a modified resolution. The original resolution proposed investigation by the League into alcoholism and the appointment of a permanent committee.

The probable attitude of the United States Government toward the projected international conference for the control of the private manufacture of arms caused a lively discussion today before the disarmament committee. The committee postponed until next week the proposal of Dr. J. Gustavo Guerrero of Salvador to have the conference convoked before the 1928 assembly of the League.

Count von Bernstorff of Germany, who as chairman of the special commission has been vainly trying to draw up a draft of a treaty for submission to the proposed conference, asked the committee to determine whether the conference should include in its agenda arms manufactured by a government as well as those manufactured by private companies. He pointed out that the United States probably would insist in the future as in the past that governmental manufacture should be included.

M. Dedrouckers of Belgium also thought that this point should be decided definitely, for it was certain if the United States did not co-operate in the conference the other big munitions manufacturing nations also would refuse to co-operate.

By approving a resolution introduced by Dr. Fridtjof Nansen of Norway for the collaboration of an optional convention for the compulsory arbitration of all disputes between nations as a means os outlawing war the commission also boosted the movement to outlaw war.

MINISTER, HELD AS KIDNAPER OF HIS SUCCESSOR, RELEASED

Detectives Report Missing Columbus (Ga.) Pastor Bought Ticket for Cincinnati, O.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Sept. 17.—The report that the Rev. Willis J. Jordon had been traced by a private detective agency to Cincinnati apparently has cleared the three-day mystery of his disappearance so far as local authorities are concerned and has resulted in the release of his predecessor in the pulpit of the Second Avenue Methodist Church, the Rev. A. V. Nobles, who was arrested on a charge of kidnaping.

A private detective agency reported to congregation leaders late today that it had obtained evidence that Rev. Jordon bought a railroad ticket to the Ohio city early Thursday morning under the name of W. F. Gordan after having cashed a check, drawn to the same name.

Shortly after this announcement the Rev. Mr. Nobles was freed by the police, while Mrs. Jordon, who was quoted by detectives as saying she didn't care whether her husband returned or not, announced plans to go to her home in Birmingham.

The pastor dropped out of sight Wednesday night after walking off with two unidentified men who his wife said accosted him at his front gate as they returned from prayer meeting to "talk to him about church affairs." When he failed to return Thursday Mrs. Jordon reported to the police, expressing the belief he had been kidnaped.

REPORTS SON, 19, MISSING AFTER HE WENT TO BANK

Father Says Joseph Janitch Jr. Cashed Checks for $203 Truck Found Abandoned.

Joseph Janitch, proprietor of a grocery at 4301 Strodtman place, last night asked the police to look for his 19-year-old son, Joseph Jr., who failed to return to the store after visiting the Lowell Bank at Warne and West Florissant avenues, yesterday morning.

Janitch said the youth had $73 cash and $203 in checks which he cashed at the bank. Shortly before noon the Ford truck in which he had left the store was found near the bank.

Seven Killed in Crash Of Sightseeing Plane

crash. By advice of police they had little to say of what they saw there. They pulled the five bodies out of the plane and laid out the injured on the grass awaiting arrival of ambulances from this city.

Cars of Curious Jam Roads.

The entire staff of Hadley Field was rushed to the place of the accident and State police were called out to assist in holding the curious crowds in check. By dark every road was jammed with cars, one count disclosing more than 500 within an area of a quarter of a mile.

The Schenecks said that the plane was about 350 feet up when the motor stopped. It seemed to waver for a minute and then slowly went into a dive. After the crash there was not a sound, and they notified police before going near the plane. When they approached it, they found that all the occupants were either dead or unconscious.

Charles Saramba, who was sitting on a railroad bridge, near the scene of the crash, told the same story.

Chandler was one of the best known of air mail pilots and a veteran in the service. He was said to have piloted the first air mail plane that made the flight from Hadley Field to Cleveland, O., when the service wass opened.

It was impossible to extricate Chandler's body for a time as it was crushed beneath the plane.

Pilot's Flying Record.

Capt. Chandler had been flying since 1912 and was in the Government service for many years, flying in the mail service from New York to Cleveland and Rock Springs to Cheyenne and then back on the New York-Cleveland-Chicago route.

During the world war he became an instructor at Princeton Field and later at Waco Field, Tex. While in Texas acting as a tester of planes, he fell in a tail spin and broke his nose. He had a number of falls, but always escaped serious injury until during his mail service, in 1925, he fell with his plane in the Susquehanna river at Bloomsburg, Pa., and received a fractured skull.

Chandler was one of the first of the United States Air Mail pilots and was said to have held the record for the number of flying hours in the service.

Shortly before the flight of Old Glory, Chandler carried Bertaud from New York to Boston in his plane.

Started Service July 15.

Reynolds Airways, Inc., was formed by R. J. Reynolds, son of the head of the tobacco company. It recently purchased Curtiss Field, paying $1,000,000.

Figures given by an officer of the Airways disclosed that since beginning of passenger service, July 15, its planes have carried more than 4000 passengers and flown approximately 35,000 miles. The plane wrecked today was licensed by the United States Department of Commerce and was inspected daily.

The plane came down almost upon the skeleton of a man concealed in the apple orchard. The Coroner removed the skeleton and identified it as that of a laborer, Patrick Ford, who had vanished three months ago.

3 NAVAL AVIATORS KILLED IN PLANE IN MOJAVE DESERT

By the Associated Press

PALMDALE, Cal., Sept. 17.—Three naval aviators, apparently lost in the Mojave desert when forced inland by fogs at sea, today crashed to their deaths 22 miles east of here.

The dead:

Lieut. Eaton Booth, pilot, attached to staff of Rear Admiral Reeves at San Diego.

Machinist Mate C. S. Harrison, San Diego Naval Air Station.

Machinist Mate Kenneth McRae, San Diego Air Station.

According to navy officials, the plane, a Curtiss 2-T-4 torpedo type, had been dispatched this morning to Spokane with spare parts for the trans-continental air race entrants.

It was said that the flyers had been ordered to proceed along the coast route, but probably had been forced inland by the low haze encountered seaward. Palmdale is 80 miles from Los Angeles.

Each man had his parachute attached, but apparently all failed to open or the craft was too near the ground when it fell for the gear to be of assistance. One body was 20 feet from the plane, which landed upside down. The other bodies were in the wreckage.

Before the crash it was revealed by examination, Lieut. Booth and the machinists had written notes back and forth indicating their plight.

"Where are we?" asked one note. "What direction are we going?"

Mother of Dead Pilot Starts Home From Portland, Me.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Sept. 17. Medical experts invested the second trial of Mrs. Elsie Sweetin for murder by poison of her husband, Wilford, ina coal miner, with the aid of modern science today. For the benefit of the jury, composed of 11 farmers and one gardener, Dr. William D. McNally of Chicago, Coroner's chemist, who served in the Loeb-Leopold and other famous trials, spent the afternoon on the witness stand expounding the methods of quantitative and qualitative analysis, the symptoms of poisoning, medical terms and clinical practices.

The testimony was the basis for expression of his opinion that the organs he analyzed chemically three years ago as having been taken from the body of Wilford Sweetin, contained sufficient arsenic to have caused death, and that the poison had been taken before death. He said he found 3.2 grains of the poison in the organs examined.

To make the medical atmosphere of the courtroom complete, Dr. McNally brought his instruments and chemical apparatus and offered to make a demonstration of his methods. That, however, became too much for the defense, which had relied on the toxicologist qualifying as an expert as completely as possible. The Chicago Coroner's physician, who is a member of the faculty of Rush Medical College, and the jury he had made 13,000 investigations to determine the cause of death since 1905, 3000 of them since 1920.

Testimony Interests Jurors.

Whether "sublimation," "Marsh apparatus" sodium hypochloride," "qualitative analysis" and other terms that fell from Dr. McNally's lips all afternoon meant anything to the jury or not, the coatless jurors followed the testimony intently. So did Mrs. Sweetin, seated beside her mother, Mrs. Laura Hight, her lawyers and two of her sons.

The technical testimony of the Chicago physician, rattling off from memory the fractional parts of poison he found in the organ and dropping into long lists of various tests, also held the capacity crowd of spectators, clad in overalls and gingham.

Dr. McNally, the State contends, the medical testimony that is the introduction to its evidence.

Next week the testimony will shift to the confessions attributed to Mrs. Sweetin and the wife of the little town of Ina, concerning the friendship of Mrs. Sweetin and her Methodist pastor, Prince M. Hight.

Pair to Meet Again.

Hight and Mrs. Sweetin were indicted together of the murder of Sweetin in the first trial nearly three years ago and then were separated. Hight to serve a life term in the State prison at Menard and Mrs. Sweetin to serve 35 years in the penitentiary at Statesville. Today they will be brought together again under the roof of the Jefferson County Jail, where they were lodged during the first trial. The gossip of Ina had led to the arrest following the mysterious deaths of their mates.

Sheriff Hal Smith will bring Hight to Mount Vernon tomorrow night, to hold him in readiness to testify for the State. The defense is not expected to use him as a witness. Hight, who did not emulate his former sweetheart's fight for freedom, did not take the witness stand in the first trial.

A thunderstorm, accompanied by high wind, interrupted the trial shortly this afternoon. It brought relief to a courtroom that has been sizzling with heat and humidity since the trial opened last Tuesday. The storm passed quickly.

Father of Sweetin Testifies.

For a brief moment this afternoon C. C. Sweetin, father of Wilford, testified. "Uncle Lum," as he is known to the countryside, has been a prominent figure at the trial of the State's attorneys, Joe Allen and Frank Thompson, during his aid to the prosecution. He was called to the witness stand to tell his son's age, 41, and his occupation.

"Uncle Lum" sits within a few feet of his daughter-in-law, on trial for the murder of his son, but they make no exchange looks.

"I want the law to take its course," is his explanation of his attitude toward her.

Sweetin, however, is fond of his two grandsons and has been carrying the youngest of them, Harold, 11 years old.

The defense turned on the medical testimony introduced by the State today and tried to minimize it with objections and doubt.

Witnesses were called to the stand to tell how Sweetin died in July, 1924, and how his stomach was prepared for chemical analysis. The defense set out to show the arsenic found by Dr. McNally might have gotten there in some other way than by the hands of Mrs. Sweetin or her former pastor, as the State alleges.

Most of the defense effort to undermine the medical testimony of the State centered in a musty old jar that stood on the stenographer's table. It contained part of the viscera taken from Sweetin's body three years ago.

Imprint of Penny on Seal.

The glass jar stood on the same table in the first trial nearly three years ago as State's exhibit No. 1 in the joint trial of Mrs. Sweetin and Hight for the murder of Sweetin.

Robert E. Smith, counsel for Mrs. Sweetin, refused to recognize the jar as the same and plied endless questions. For nearly two hours the testimony turned on the imprint of a penny on the sealing wax of the jar and other identification marks cited by Dr. S. A. Hamilton of Mount Vernon, who attended Sweetin in his last illness and assisted in the second postmortem of his body.

New Jersey Doctor Slain in Auto and Widow Who Told of Holdup

DR. AND MRS. A. WILLIAM LILLIENDAHL

SLAIN DOCTOR'S WIDOW REMAINS WITH POLICE

Officers Intimate Action Will Follow Any Attempt to Leave Barracks.

By the Associated Press.

HAMMONDTON, N. J., Sept. 17. —Relatives of Mrs. Margaret Liliendahl, widow of the murdered Dr. A. William Liliendahl, said today they would make no attempt to have her leave the State Police Barracks so long as she can be of any aid in helping the authorities find the slayers.

The widow has been at the Barracks since Thursday afternoon when her husband was shot and killed while they were riding along a lonely road near here in their automobile. She told the police they were attacked by two negroes who fired at the doctor, a retired New York physician.

It has been declared that she has been remaining at the Barracks of her own free will. Frank J. Harrold, Chief of County Detectives, is quoted as saying that if Mrs. Lilliendahl leaves the Barracks the State is prepared to take some action. He did not explain what this action would be.

Col. Clarence Hodson of East Orange, N. J., a cousin of Mrs. Liliendahl, today described her as a most devoted wife who gave 10 years of her life in caring for a man who was broken in health.

"She had no reason to let him die," said Col. Hodson. "She could have let him die years ago by inattention, but she nursed him constantly. He was a nervous wreck, the result of living in Mexico."

Col. Hodson also said the widow told him that the doctor had no insurance on his life that she knew of and that the question had never been discussed between them.

CALL UPON SMITH TO FOLLOW McADOO IN QUITTING RACE

Smith, Flooded With Questions, Declines to Comment.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Gov. Smith, potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, declined to comment today on the announcement by William G. McAdoo that he would not be a candidate. The Governor was swamped with interviewers personally and by telephone.

"I have the same comment to make that I have been making to the same question all morning—I have no comment," the Governor said.

The Governor's close personal and political friends here also declined to comment.

Reed Also Refuses to Comment on McAdoo's Withdrawal.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 17.—Senator Reed, who has been mentioned as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, refused to comment here today on William G. McAdoo's announcement that he would not be a candidate next year. Reed took the stump against McAdoo in 1924.

Dockweiler Gives Two Reasons for McAdoo's Decision.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 17. — Isidore B. Dockweiler, member of the Democratic National Committee for California, gave two reasons for McAdoo's refusal to run for President in 1928. Dockweiler said the California Democratic Central Committee, which favored McAdoo four years ago, now opposed him and when McAdoo went East last spring, he found that two of his backers would not finance a campaign as they did four years ago. "At this time Gov. Al Smith looks to be a sure bet for the nomination as the Eastern and New England States are solidly behind him," Dockweiler said.

COOLIDGE TALK BY SOUTHERN G. O. P.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. — Southern Republicans, headed by C. Bascom Slemp, formerly private secretary to the president, are telling their political friends that the "Coolidge policies must continue." At the White House today after a brief visit to the President, Slemp declared that the people of the country are for the Coolidge administration and want to see it continued. Asked if somebody else could carry it on, he said that was possible.

Southern leaders are discouraging the formation of Lowden, Hoover, or other clubs, it is stated by Representative J. Will Taylor of Tennessee. Sentiment in his State for Mr. Coolidge is so strong that an effort to hold a Lowden conference recently failed because of a lack of attendance, he says.

"Our people are for Mr. Coolidge," declared Taylor after a conference with the President on an invitation to Mr. Coolidge to attend the annual Manufacturers' Association Convention in Chattanooga in October. "They have no thought of anybody else. We expect to carry the State. We know we will do it if Gov. Smith is nominated by the Democrats. No wet candidate can carry Tennessee." The Tennessee delegation to the national convention, he said, would be instructed for Coolidge.

Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Excelsior Springs, Mo. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for twenty-six years and in more than twelve thousand cases. The book is sent postpaid free to persons afflicted with piles or other rectal troubles who clip this item and mail it with name and address to Dr. McCleary, 556 St. Louis Ave., Excelsior Springs, Mo.

MISSOURI DAY SOCIETY TAKES UP SHADE TREE PLAN

Logical Organization to Carry Out Highway Beautification Project, Says Association Chairman.

The Missouri Day Association, formed to promote the celebration each year of Missouri day on the first Monday in October, has broadened the scope of its work by discussions in executive council of various proposals for shaded highways in Missouri as a forward step in beautifying barren stretches over which motorists now travel.

An earnest advocate of shaded highways, Mrs. Frank S. Leach of Sedalia, chairman of the Missouri Day Association and State Historian of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in St. Louis yesterday, stated that the Missouri Day Association has been casting about in conversations to evolve some plan that might be worked out to shade the highways by popular subscription.

Mrs. Leach believes the Missouri Day Association the logical organization to inaugurate the movement, because its particular function is to sell Missouri to Missourians as a beauty spot.

"It should be hard to find one person who would oppose our fine new highways being fringed with beautiful trees," said Mrs. Leach, "and for that reason there should be no dearth of funds to plant the highways. The Missouri Highway Commission has no funds available for this beautification, but I am sure the Legislature would aid popular subscription with a sugstantial appropriation."

It is Mrs. Leach's idea to propose through the Missouri Day Association a separate organization in each county to look after highway planting and to place the subject at an early date before all clubs, civic, commercial and fraternal organizations for action. Some wealthy man, she proposed, would have here an opportunity to establish a historic work by a substantial donation to open a headquarters to start the movement.

SHELTONS' WIVES TRYING TO ARRANGE BOND FOR THEM

Brothers Wanted at Taylorville in Connection With Kincaid Bank Robbery.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

BENTON, Ill., Sept. 17.—It was learned from an authoritative source here today that wives of the three Shelton brothers, Carl, Earl and Bernie, were in Benton today seeking bondsmen for the trio who are wanted at Taylorville for the attempted holdup of the Kincaid Bank in 1924.

The women are known to have been in West City and to have conversed with Gus Adams, brother of the slain West City Mayor, for whose death Charlie Birger, enemy gang leader, was sentenced to hang. The women are reported to have told Adams that their husbands did not even know where the town of Kincaid was.

They came here from Herrin where they are said to have been on a like mission.

NORRIS UNWILLING TO RUN

Senator Tries to Keep Name Off Ballot for President.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 17.—The Lincoln Star says today that Senator George W. Norris is trying to dissuade his Nebraska friends from filing his name for President in the State primaries next April, but has not flatly refused to let it go on the ballot.

"I have written a good many letters discouraging the idea," the Star quotes Senator Norris. "I have no expectation of being nominated for President. In fact, a man who has followed the political course I have is barred from that office. The bosses who run conventions would never let him be nominated. I can not, however, forbid my friends to circulate and file petitions if they feel that way. I really don't know what I might do if the matter were put up to me concretely. A fellow can hardly refuse when a large number of his fellow citizens show their confidence in him and indicate that they desire to have him lead their fight."

TAX INCREASE PROTEST URGED

Valuation on St. Charles Bridge May Be Increased.

Citizens of St. Louis County are being urged by Probate Judge Hodgdon to appear at a meeting of the State Board of Equalization Tuesday at Jefferson City and protest a prospective increase of the tax valuation on the St. Charles highway bridge from $400,000 to $600,000.

His circular letter cites that tolls are to be eliminated whenever they have paid for the purchase of the bridge by the Clayton and Wellston Optimists' Clubs and the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, who agreed to pay $1,350,000 for it and have deeded it to St. Charles and St. Louis counties as part of Federal highway No. 40. An increase in the taxes, he declares, would be unjust and merely delay the removal of the tolls.

HELD UP IN AUTO, ROBBED OF $1031 FACTORY PAYROLL

William Modra, President of Laclede Brass Works, Forced to Hand Over Money Envelopes.

William Modra, president of the Laclede Brass Works, 307-15 Cedar street, was held up and robbed of a $1031 payroll around the corner from his office yesterday.

He obtained the money at Franklin Bank, Washington and Broadway, at 10:30 a. m., and was riding to his office in an automobile driven by a friend, Sigmund Stern, 722 Kingsland avenue, University City. On Third street between Plum and Cedar streets their path was blocked by a Studebaker touring car which was driven out from the curb where it had been parked with three men in it.

Two young men with revolvers jumped out of the Studebaker and covered Modra and Stern. One robber demanded the money, and Modra handed him two envelopes containing the payroll. The other robber locked the ignition switch of Stern's car and took the key, promising to leave the key at the corner.

The robbers then drove south in Third and east in Cedar. As they turned they tossed out Stern's key, but they were out of sight before pursuit could be attempted.

There have been seven payroll robberies so far thmis year, and $6278.70 has been stolen. Last year there were 18 payroll robberies in which $30,461 was taken.

Masked Men Get $561 at Grocery; Other Robberies

Two masked men, carrying revolvers, held up four Kroger employes, including a collector, yesterday in a store at 3103 North Jefferson avenue, and escaped with $561.

Three shots to attract attention were fired in the air by Joseph Horack, storekeeper at 3112 North Jefferson, as he saw the men enter the Kroger store, each with a blue handkerchief tied over his face. The robbers had departed before police arrived.

Not satisfied with $450 from the collector, Hobart A. Schlanker of 5364 Vernon avenue, and $105 from two cash registers, they rifled Schlanker's pockets and took $6 from his personal bill-fold. They ran out the back door and across the yard to a Dodge touring car. George Moeller of Brentwood followed them west on Sullivan in his machine until he lost sight of the car at Spring avenue.

FIVE MORE MEN ARRESTED IN PALAZZOLO MURDER CASE

Two Italians Charged With Killing Gunman; Police Seek Others of Band.

Five more Italians were arrested yesterday by Capt. Frank Nally and police of the Carr Street District in the investigation of the murder of Alphonse Palazzolo, notorious gunman, slain at Tenth and Wash streets Sept. 10.

Capt. Nally declined to discuss the arrests or the possible connection of the five suspects with the murder. Thirty suspects were arrested in the two days following the murder, only to be released because of lack of evidence.

Capt. Nally and his men have kept the case alive, however, and Friday obtained warrants charging Joseph Bommarito and Ralph Callico with the murder. Both were friends of the slain "Shorty" Russo, with whose murder and that of Vincent Spicuzza on a road near Chicago Palazzolo had been connected in underworld gossip. Bommarito and Callico are held without bail.

Police are continuing the search for others connected with the murder on the statement of witnesses that four men occupied the car from which the shots were fired that killed Palazzolo.

APPOINTED POLICE LIEUTENANT

Police Sergt. Ca W. Johnson of Page Boulevard Station was promoted Friday to a lieutenancy at a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners.

The promotion followed the retirement, due to physical disability, of Police Lieut. Augustus B. Deatherage, whose place Johnson has filled at the Page station for four months. Prior to this, Johnson was an assistant to Inspector of Police Walton. Joining the force 17 years ago, he walked a beat for two years in Dayton Street Station.

LISBON, Sept. 17.—The French passenger steamer Desirade has arrived at Oporto with a case of yellow fever aboard, reports from there state. The landing of the passengers has been forbidden and the boat will proceed to Lisbon where the port authorities have been advised to take the necessary measures.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The passenger steamer Durande, aboard which there is reported to be a case of yellow fever, left Rio de Janeiro Aug. 28, called at Madeira and left there Sept. 13 for Oporto, Lloyd's reports.

FRENCH PRINCESS, IN EXILE, TO WED ITALIAN

Daughter of Pretender to Throne to Marry Her Cousin — A Love Marriage.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

Copyright, 1927, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 17.—Princess Anne of France, daughter of the Duke of Guise, pretender to the French throne, as the head of the house of Orleans since the death of the Duke of Orleans last year, is to marry Prince Amedio, Duke of Apulia, son of the Duke Aosta.

This will be a union of the royal families of France and Italy. They are third cousins on their fathers' side and first cousins on their mothers' side and what is rare in this constantly narrowing circle of European royalty, theirs will be a love marriage—neither arranged by parents nor as a refuge.

There are not many marriages Princess Anne could make and maintain her station. Daughters of dethroned royal families don't have an easy time of it. If her father's pretensions were to come true and she were actually to become a Princess of France, a political marriage with such an heir to the throne as the Prince of Wales might be a possibility.

Such marriages are common in the history of the women of her family. But instead she will be married at her father's home in exile, in Brussels, and will live in Italy as the wife of the grandson of the ex-King of Spain from 1870 to 1873. Until last year she lived in France or Morocco, where her father had property, but she became an exile with him in accordance with the French law by which pretenders to the French throne and their families are not allowed to live in France.

The families of Orleans and Savoy are allied closely. The late Duke of Orleans had two sisters. One, Princess Marie Isabelle, is the mother of Princess Anne and the other, Princess Helene Louise Henriette, is the mother of her fiance. On the other side of the family the Prince is a third cousin of his fiance through his father.

RELATIVES DENY INDIANA MAYOR BARTERED JOBS

Duvall Refused Offer of $25,000 to Let Politician Name One Official, Brother-in-Law Says.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 17.—Relatives and members of Mayor John L. Duvalls' official family took the witness stand in his trial here today to brand as false previous testimony that he had bartered positions in the City administration in return for money and political support in the 1925 campaign.

Duvall is charged specifically with having promised William H. Armitage, a local politician, the privilege of naming men for three high city offices in exchange for $10,000 and his support at the polls. Armitage, a local politician, testified Duvall returned the money to him, saying he could not go through with the proposition.

The prosecution rested its case this afternoon after introducing testimony concerning alleged deals in which Duvall was purported to have offered for sale the City Market mastership for $3000, a place on the Board of Public Works for $2500 and the promise of an automobile to a worker if he obtained the support of George V. Coffin, another political power in Marion County.

Tells of Promise to Klan.

The State also called a witness who testified that Duvall signed an agreement with the Ku Klux Klan that he would give members of that order at least 60 per cent of his patronage for its support at the polls.

The defense is expected to put Duvall on the stand Monday.

William C. Buser, brother-in-law of Mayor Duvall and until Sept. 1 City Comptroller, testified today that Duvall not only declined to let Armitage name two members of the Board of Public Works and the City engineer, but flatly refused an offere of $25,000 to let Armitage name one man for appointment.

Claude M. Wilson, Duvall's nephew, clerk of the City Board of Safety; Thurman A. Washburn, brother-in-law of the Mayor, assistant City purchasing agent, and Claude Johnson, City Comptroller, were other defense witnesses.

Dr. George S. Henninger, pastor of the East Tenth street Methodist church, Indianapolis, testified for the prosecution concerning an alleged oath Duvall took before 1500 members of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. The event was prior to the 1925 primary, he said.

Pledges Offices to Klan.

Duvall, according to the witness, agreed that "in consideration of the support of the klan, I agree to the following: 'I will give 60 or more per cent of the offices to members of the klan provided the qualifications of the klansmen are equal to those of the other candidates.'"

Orin Davis, president of the Horse Thief Detective Association of Marion County, and George Elliott, formerly "exalted cyclops" of the Marion County Ku Klux Klan, testified Duvall promised the klan organization offices in exchange for support at the polls.

Duvall promised "the big organization" the "pie" of his appointments if he were elected, Davis testified. The witness declared Duvall made that statement after the primary of 1925, and that by "the big organization" he meant the Ku Klux Klan.

At the meeting before the primary and in the presence of 13 klansmen, Davis alleged that Duvall stood under an American flag and said he would "take care of these boys if they would support him at the election." Davis said Duvall at that meeting told those present he wanted the support of the klan.

Defense counsel attempted to have this testimony stricken from the record, but Judge Shirley overruled the motion.

Davis was subjected to only a brief cross-examination.

WHITE ROUGE

Different From Any Rouge Ever Made

A thoughtful chemist worked for years to find a Rouge to fit all complexions from the same box. All Rouges that had ever been made had been in different shades to fit the different skins, and the idea of one Rouge to fit all skins was a revolutionary one; but this chemist persevered until he discovered WHITE ROUGE!

FITCH TAKES THE SHAM OUT OF SHAMPOO

No other shampoo can do as much as Fitch's will. The Fitch Shampoo dissolves and removes from the hair at first application every particle of dandruff and foreign matter, leaves the scalp clean and healthy and the hair soft and fluffy.

The Fitch Shampoo is crystal clear. Every particle is soluble in water and can easily be rinsed out. After the Fitch Shampoo there is no necessity for an acid rinse which tends to dry and discolor the hair.

U.S. NOTE TO WARN FRANCE AGAINST HER TARIFF POLICY

Washington Prepared to Adopt Retaliatory Measures if Discrimination Continues.

RECIPROCITY BASIS HARDLY FEASIBLE

Establishment of Mutual Most-Favored-Nation Status Regarded as Best Adjustment.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—While United States officials were discussing ways and means of averting an open tariff war with France it was clear today that they were prepared to employ the retaliatory penalty provisions of the tariff act to whatever extent may be necessary in overcoming French import discriminations against American goods.

The American reply to the French proposal for treaty negotiations on a basis of complete reciprocity probably will be ready for transmission by next Wednesday. It has not yet been put into shape, but will be ready when the cabinet meets Tuesday. That negotiations on the theory of lowering any existing American duties to obtain abatement of the new French rule of maximum rates on American goods is wholly out of the question, is certain to be emphasized.

It is suggested that France be informed that reciprocal negotiations, such as she has invited, could be undertaken only in the event that higher duties on French luxury exports were declared by the President with the specific warning that they would be retained until French discrimination is ended. Within the range of such an increase, reciprocal negotiations might follow; but the American viewpoint appears to be that this would constitute a cumbersome method of treating a situation which could much more readily be adjusted by establishment of mutual most-favored-nation status.

In any event, the American note probably will make it clear that no question of the amount of French duties is involved, but only the apparently deliberate discrimination against American goods.

And whatever else the note may say, it will without doubt attempt to convince the French Foreign Office once and for all that, failing any other means of correcting this discrimination, the full force of the provision of Section 317 of the Tariff Act will be invoked. There is no sign of disagreement in administration circles on this point.

The French government is still withholding from publication the text of its note of counter-proposals to the American suggestion of a new most-favored-nation commercial treaty. The American reply is being awaited with some concern by the French government, according to reports, and it is indicated that France hopes it will be of such a nature as to permit further negotiations.

The French tariff system is described as the double column system in which one column represents minimum rates based on the theory of equalization of the manufacturing costs abroad while the other column contains maximum duties decidedly in excess of the lower rates. Under the Fordney-Aldrich act a similar tariff system existed in the United States, a general increase of the statutory duty rates being provided subject to the right for its withdrawal by the President when he was satisfied there was no discrimination in any country against American goods.

American business in France last year, it has been estimated, amounted to $263,000,000 and to 5¼ per cent of the total foreign commerce. France's exports to this country were between 6 and 7 per cent with a value of $152,000,000 of its total foreign trade.

Kellogg Hasn't Seen French Note; In No Hurry to Do So.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 17.—Secretary of State Kellogg, here today for a vacation at his home, said he had not received the French tariff note and did not expect it until next week. "No doubt its terms will be considered in Washington before it is forwarded to me," he said. "It is a matter that requires no particular haste."

Kellogg got down to the serious business of vacationing by playing a round of golf with old friends.

France Likely to Hold Off New Rates One Week.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The French treasury, it now appears likely, will instruct the customs authorities to admit goods leaving United States ports on or before Sept. 6 at the old tariff rates instead of assessing the new rates. Originally the new rates were ordered assessed on shipments leaving the United States after Aug. 31, but it is considered that adequate notice of the higher schedules, which have been the subject of an exchange between the United States and France, had not been given.

Boy, Disliking School, Runs Away.

Ernest Sims, 15 years old, 536 North Twenty-seventh street, East St. Louis, ran away from home last Tuesday, because he did not want to go to high school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sims, have asked police to search for him, and declare that if he will return he will not have to go back to school. They believe he has gone to Chicago.

NO CHANGE IN ROUTING FOR VEILED PROPHET

Parade on Night of Oct. 4 Will Move Over Same Streets as Last Year.

The Veiled Prophet and the St. Louis public have grown so accustomed to his parade route, and have found it so well adapted to the Prophet's dignity and the public convenience, that no change in routing will be made this year. The parade Tuesday night, Oct. 4, is to move over the same 10-mile route followed last year, and on the same time schedule, 2 hours and 15 minutes being taken for the Prophets' leisurely progress.

The ruote, starting at 7:15 p. m. at Laclede and Ranken avenues (3400 west), and scheduled to take until 10:30, is:

West on Laclade to Vandeventer avenue.
North on Vandeventer to Olive street.
East on Olive to Grand boulevard.
North on Grand to Lucas avenue.
East on Lucas to Leffingwell avenue.
South on Leffingwell to Washington boulevard.
East on Washington to Fourth street.
South on Fourth to Chestnut street.
West on Chestnut street to Broadway.
North on Broadway to Olive street.
West on Olive to Jefferson avenue.
South on Jefferson to Market street.
West on Market-Laclede to Ranken.

Widened but still torn up Olive street will hold a larger crowd than in former years, though it will not look so pleasing to the Prophet, or to out-of-town visitors, as it will look a few years hence.

As in former years, the floats will be horse-drawn on trucks moving along street car lines, and electrically lighted from the overhead trolley wires. The subject of the parade has not been made known. Street cars anr busses are to be re-routed, for greater convenience in getting the crowds home.

New traffic routing arrangements on the streets leading to the Coliseum for the ball, Oct. 1, are to be announced.

He is 20 years old and was graduated last spring from the De Soto High School. His father, Sam McKinstry, agent the Missouri Pacific Lines at Blackwell, Mo., has been in the service of the Missouri Pacific 18 years.

McKinstry was chosen by officials of the university from a list of 35 employes and sons and daughters of employes of the railroad. The award was made on the basis of merit as indicated by school and other records.

The scholarship was established by Chancellor Hadley of Washington University with funds derived by the university from rental of its athletic field for the Missouri Pacific Lines diamond jubilee in July, 1926.

Loeb-Leopold Suit Settled.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Settlement of the $100,000 damage suits, charging mutilation, against Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, who are serving life sentences for the murder of Bobby Franks, was announced today by the attorney for Charles Ream, taxicab driver and plaintiff. Terms of the settlement, made out of court, were not announced.

A hidden source of hearing is

The New Acousticon

No longer need the people whose hearing is subnormal swallow their pride.

For now comes a new and finer Acousticon . . . the Silver Anniversary Model . . . developed after 25 years of service to the deafened . . . to free them from all embarrassment.

It is the smallest, the lightest, the least conspicuous of all hearing-aids, with a new and tiny "full-tone" receiver, or earpiece, with a visible surface no bigger than a dime, that is worn in the ear without any attachment.

We would be pleased to demonstrate, FREE, this New Acousticon, and to point out, in detail, the many new principles that make it just as efficient as it is inconspicuous.

MRS. BRYARS' ESTATE VALUED AT $500,000

Widow of Sash and Door Firm Officer Divides Property Among Daughters.

An inventory of the estate of Mrs. Catherine Huttig Bryars, who died June 28 at Muscatine, Ia., in which assets aggregating more than $500,000 are listed, was filed yesterday in Probate Court. Mrs. Bryars was the widow of Robert Bryars, a vice president of Huttig Sash & Door Co.

A total of $267,487 personal property, the principal item of which is bonds totaling $171,500, is listed in the inventory. The Bryars home, at 5024 Raymond avenue, is valued at $7100.

Among the stocks were $30,000 preferred of the Huttig Sash and Door Co., 9236 shares of the firm's common stock and 250 shares of Polar Wave Ice & Fuel Co. common stock, no valuation being placed in the inventory on either of the last two items. Polar Wave common recently was quoted at $30 a share on the local exchange, giving her holdings a value at that figure of $7500. Recent quotations on Huttig common stock have been around $24 a share, giving her shares of that stock a value of $221,664.

In her will, Mrs. Bryars provided the estate should be held in trust for 15 years, the income to be distributed equally among her three daughters, Miss Roberta and Miss Mildred M. Bryars, and Mrs. Helen B. Kincade. At the end of this period, the estate is to be divided among the daughters, or their heirs.

PLANES PREPARE FOR AIR DERBY TOMORROW

Of 56 Entrants in New York-Spokane Race, 38 Are at Roosevelt Field.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Of the 56 entrants in the trans-continental air derby to Spokane, Wash., 38 had planes in readiness on Roosevelt Field tonight. Prizes of $42,500 have been offered in the competition.

Five inspectors of the Department of Commerce are examining all planes which will take part in the competition.

Class B planes will start Monday morning, halting overnight at Chicago and at Glendive, Mont. The prizes for this contest are: first, $5000; second, $3000; third, $1000; fourth, $500.

Class A planes, which will leave Tuesday, making an overnight stop at St. Paul, Minn., must carry a pilot and two passengers. The prizes for this contest are: first, $10,000; second, $5000; third, $2000; fourth, $1000.

The non-stop event, which is to start Wednesday, has seven entries. Among them are the Royal Windsor, the plane of "Duke" Schiller and Phil Wood, which for several weeks stood in readiness for a trans-Atlantic hop. The first of the entrants for the non-stop flight to arrive was Eddie Stinson of Detroit. He left Detroit this afternoon, flying one of his own planes, a Stinson-Detroiter.

The monoplane City of Olympia crashed in a hayfield near Grampian, Pa. Lieut. Valentine Gephart leaped to safety with a parachute but Pilot Fred Parker stayed with the plane. Neither was more than slightly hurt and both left for Cleveland, O., saying they intended to get another plane and enter the race. The motor of the Olympia went dead, causing the accident.

TUNNEY, DEMPSEY, RICKARD CALLED IN INJUNCTION SUIT

Chicago Preacher to Appear Tuesday With Plea That Court Forbid Fight.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.— Chancery subpenas were issued today by the Clerk of the United States District Court notifying Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey and G. L. (Tex) Rickard of the filing of a suit for injunctions to stop the championship fight scheduled for Thursday night. The suit was filed yesterday by the Rev. Elmer L. Williams.

Notice was sent out at the same time informing the defendants that the Rev. Mr. Williams will appear before Federal Judge Wilkerson Tuesday morning with a motion for a preliminary injunction to stop the fight.

The regular chancery subpenas allow the defendant 20 days to file his answer. The special notice also states the plaintiff will be ready to support his motion for a preliminary injunction by filing and presenting affidavits.

13 SALOONKEEPERS SUED FOR $22,500 BY WOMAN

Alleges They Sold Liquor to Husband, Who Then Failed to Support Family.

By the Associated Press.

MARINETTE, Wis., Sept. 17.—Mrs. Julia Malmstadt seeks to recover a total of $22,500 from 13 Marinette saloon keepers who, she charges, sold her husband liquor and kept him from supporting his wife and seven children.

She has started seven suits for $2500 each and another for $5000 damages.

She charges that her husband came home nearly every week intoxicated and illness that followed prevented him from returning to work the following Monday.

LONDON VIEWS MONEY OUTLOOK OPTIMISTICLY

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in review says:

Steadiness in the security market continues, and the immediate outlook is not unfavorable.

Real confidence, though, is perpetually checked by the recognition of war legacies, both political and financial.

The Chancellor's recent attitude at Geneva is entirely approved here, but it is considered that the present weak League of Nations has recently sustained several blows and the European outlook is by no means ideal.

Unless any untoward development occur, however, the autumn outlook will be moderately good, though the activity of existing stocks may be checked if various rumors of new loans materialize. These include a possible large loan for the Brazilian Federal Government and colonial loans amounting to several millions of pounds. The Greek loan for £9,000,000 is quite apart from the numerous internal fresh capital issues.

Germany must also inevitably borrow for a considerable period if she is to maintain the increased reparation payments.

The gold outlook is also uncertain owing to the Argentine demands, while, as previously cabled, the uncertainty of the French and Middle West crop advance distinction of owning your home? and next year in France, Germany and America are factors that must be carefully kept in mind.

Considerable uncertainty besets America's monetary outlook, as viewed here, because there is no doubt whatever that there is no undue strain occasioned by your foreign loans and your big Wall Street speculation. Apparently the best views entirely on the idea that the presidential election in the United States will have the usual disturbing effect on trade, production and the easy money market.

At present, however, there is no discernible big change in the money rates on the other side of the Atlantic.

It is considered probable that the most effective reply to the controversy concerning the Federal Reserve monetary policy is contained in the forecast of the board's policy and its results in the 14 years it has passed through.

The effect of Great Britain's poor harvest is offset by the fairly satisfactory harvest reports from most of the European countries, while it is considered that any fears of a shortage will be removed by the official estimates of the Canadian wheat crop and the expectations of a satisfactory crop in the United States.

A more cautious tone is now apparent in artificial silk shares, and while prospects are regarded as bright, the possibility of some turn in fashion is not overlooked.

Chancellor Churchill's easy optimism concerning national finances is intensely irritating to Capel Court, which has tired of the successive Government indifference to extravagant national expenditures, which not only makes relief from taxation impossible but prevents profitable conversion of Government loans.

Details have been issued of the proposals for converting about £200,000,000 bonds of the debt maturing early next year into the existing 5½ per cent war loan, which is virtually irredeemable.

Terms to holders are fairly attractive, but because the loan was offered at a big discount the nominal amount of the debt was considerably swollen and the annual debt charge was actually increased.

New Securities

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Award of the $6,000,000 Alabama bonds yesterday was divided between the First National and Lehman Bros. syndicate. The $5,000,000 of highway and bridge 4¼s, averaging eighteen and five-sixths years' maturity, were awarded to the First National Bank syndicate, with a bid of 101.671. The $1,000,000 of 10 to 40 year 4½ per cent harbor improvement bonds were sold to Lehman Bros. at 101.71 or 1 per cent per $100 above the First National group bid.

Barker Brothers Building, through Lawrence Stern & Co. and Union Bank and Trust of Los Angeles, offers $2,250,000 of first-mortgage 6¼ per cent 20-year bonds at par.

New York Water Service Corporation offers to pay 108 and interest for the general mortgage 6 per cent Flatbush waterworks bonds of 1951.

New municipal financing scheduled for award next week totals $21,530,087, or half of this week's amount. Sixty-seven communities, according to the Bond Buyer, are represented.

Major awards include $1,500,000 Davidson County, Tenn.; $1,330,000 Omaha; $1,107,000, Toledo, O.; $1,000,00, Portland, Ore.; $3,360,000 Buffalo; $1,375,000, Raleigh, N. C.; $1,300,000 Roanoke, Va., and $3,360,000, of Milwaukee, Wis., bonds.

Lumber Market.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—In its weekly review, the American Lumberman says:

"A stronger tone all around is evident in the lumber market, and particularly in the South and Middle West. The advance in cotton prices has brought new prosperity to the southern states, and the crop situation in the Middle West is such as to stimulate business. Wheat money is now coming into circulation and merchants in every line report that trade is good. A period of hot days and warm nights throughout the belt has caused corn to progress rapidly, and a sizeable crop is now assured, which will further entrench the farmers' position.

"The Douglas fir mills of the West report a steady demand and an increased inquiry from the country yards, indicating that these will soon begin purchasing on a larger scale. The market meanwhile is firm, and prices are reasonably sure to advance, inasmuch as stocks are low and broken and unquestionably will be further depleted when fall buying once starts in earnest. To date this year, the fir mills have shipped 14 per cent more lumber than they cut which illustrates the soundness of their position.

"A better demand and a larger inquiry is reported by the Southern yellow pine mills. While no notable price advances have occurred, the market is noticeably firmer, with several items in popular demand in low supply.

"The Southern hardwood market remains dull and weak on account of heavy production and a slow movement. Quartered oak and white poplars are regarded as bright, the possibility of some turn in fashion is not overlooked.

Chancellor Churchill's easy optimism concerning national finances is intensely irritating to Capel Court, which has tired of the successive Government indifference to extravagant national expenditures, which not only makes relief from taxation impossible but prevents profitable conversion of Government loans.

Details have been issued of the proposals for converting about £200,000,000 bonds of the debt maturing early next year into the existing 5½ per cent war loan, which is virtually irredeemable.

Terms to holders are fairly attractive, but because the loan was offered at a big discount the nominal amount of the debt was considerably swollen and the annual debt charge was actually increased.

HOGS, LAMBS CLOSE WEEK SLIGHTLY HIGHER

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves.	35,464	34,675	44,802
Hogs	47,601	55,980	69,003
Sheep	8,764	17,914	27,807
Horses and mules	1,733	1,648	1,486
Total	93,562	110,217	143,101

Receipts of sheep and lambs the past week were about 50 per cent lighter than the previous week. A good demand was featured and lambs recovered almost all of the previous week's losses. At the close of the period lambs were 75c higher. Top lambs were quotable up to $13, or $1 higher. The highest price paid for lambs the past week was $13.25, paid by city butchers for choice offerings. Packers failed to go over $12.75. Bulk sold at $12.25 to $12.75. Common bucky lambs sold around $10.50 as to $10 the previous week. Packers were the main buyers, city butchers only furnishing an outlet for a limited number. Culls and skips were unchanged from day to day, but sales of that class were made at $5.50 to $8.50. Aged sheep also registered no material change. Best light ewes made $5.50 with those weighing over 120 pounds $4.50 to $5.50. Choppers and bucks $3 to $5.50; feeding ewes, $2.50 to $3.50. There were practically no wethers on sale. Quality for the period was fair to good. Clearance was good.

Quotations slaughter stock: Good to choice spring lambs, $12.50 to $13; medium to good, $11.50 to $12.50; plain to medium $10.50 to $11.50; cull and common $8 to $10. Good to choice yearling wethers, $10 to $10.50; medium to good $9 to $10; plain to medium, $8 to $9; cull and common, $7 to $8. Good to choice aged Western wethers, $8.50 to $9; good fat Southern kinds, 7 to $8. Thin to fair kinds, $4 to $6.50. Good to choice mutton ewes, $4.50 to $5.50; plain to good, $4 to $4.50; choppers and bucks, $3 to $3.50; canners, $1 to $2.50. Fat goats, $3 to $4; fair to good kids, $4 to $7. Thin to fair kids, $1.50 to $3.

Hogs and lambs closed the week higher on the local market, but cattle were steady to slightly lower. The horse and mule market was active and well maintained.

Hogs pursued a somewhat erratic course, closing the week, however, on a much stronger basis. The highest point since April 5 last was reached when Saturday's hog sales reached a new peak of $12.25. Bulk of hogs scaling 170 to 230 pounds made $12 to $12.15, as against $11.55 to $11.65 a week ago, 45c to 50c higher. Order demand was fairly good during the week, packers also furnished moderate support. The demand was centered on hogs weighing 200 to 220 pounds and that class was usually cashed at the top of the market. Numerous sales of high weighing 300 to 350 pounds were noted at $10.85 to $11.35 during the period with some weighing better than 400 pounds down to $10.60. As there were practically no hogs over 250 pounds on sale over Saturday, and none last Saturday, we will have to compare yesterday's 250-pounds and up sales with Friday the 9th. As compared Friday to Friday, heavy and extreme heavies are 25c to 50c higher. Underweights, 160 to 170 pounds, usually sold 15c to 25c below the top.

Receipts for the week were approximately 47,001 as compared with 55,980 last week. Quality was fair to good.

Grassy hogs, off quality kinds, were again in poor demand and most sales of that class were 25c to 50c under quality kinds of like weight.

Pigs and light lights, after remaining slow and weak up until the Friday period, enjoyed a reaction and prices were trending higher the last two days of trading. They closed the week 25c to 50c higher.

Packing sows were active and strengthening up till the latter part of the week, at which time they weakened and slowed up considerably. Prices, however, were unchanged. As compared with a week ago, sows are 75c higher, while stags are 25c to 50c up. Top sows made $10.50; stags $8.50.

While most cattle held to a steady basis, some were irregular and declines were scored on Western steers and canner cows, native beef steers ruling steady to 25c higher in spots, and other classes mostly unchanged. Veal calves were strong around former figures in quality advanced 50c to a peak of $16.25 on the week's closing deals. Receipts were far less than expected, being 2000 for the week's total count. Western steers making up a fair proportion of the run at 258 cars.

Some right fair quality was featured in native beef steers with top reaching $14.10, a consignment of well finished yearling steers making the figure. Other loads of good yearlings and heavies moved up to $14.00 with top for mature cattle at $13.85. The number of sales in the $13.00 column was larger than the previous week, top end of the bulk reaching $12.25. Low end stopped at $10.50, although sales on the plainer kinds ranged downward in the $9.00 column and occasionally as low as $8.00.

Oklahoma furnished the bulk of range steers with Kansas next and a few from Texas. Most of the offerings were of good quality, but there was a noticeable lack of selling in the native grade here. Flesh of the offerings was not as good as has been the case frequently with bulk of sales selling in a spread of $7.35 to $9.25, some sales down to the $6.00 figures on plain kinds and a load of bulls cashed at $5.85. Clothing sales compared with the previous week indicated declines ranging from 10c to 25c, plain kinds suffering the big end of the loss.

Mixed and dressy heifers sold steady in the majority of instances with a good demand inducing strong prices on some of the better grades. Top for both mixed and straight heifers reached $12.75, several loads up to this figure. Others cashed around $12 to $12.50, with plain kinds selling in the $7 and $8 rows. A bulk of all sales was cashed at $8.50 to $11.50.

Cows suitable for beef purposes sold steady throughout the week, but declines were scored on the lower-grade offerings, late and canners were generally 15c to 25c off for the week. Bulk of beef cows sold at $5.75 to $7.25, with a few of the most part, better fleshed kinds which were rather scarce selling upward to $8 and occasionally the $9 columns. Cutter flesh sold mostly at $5 to $5.25, low-grade dropping to the canner row at $4 to $4.75 occasionally. Bulk of canners cashed at $4.25 to $4.50, low end reaching $4.

Bulls went through another week without change in price, sales ranged from $4 down on bolognas with beef bulls making up to the $7 figure if of desirable flesh. Common and canner bulls sold around the $5 mark, occasional sales down to $4.50.

A fair trade was transacted in stocker and feeder cattle of all descriptions with prices steady throughout. Steers on the feeder order sold up to $9.50, with less suitable kinds ranging downward at $6.10. Cow stuff brought $5 to $5.50 mostly and heifers $5.50 to $7.50.

Veal calves for the closing three days this week brought $16.25, the week's high figure, while bulk of tops sold at $15.50 to $16.25. Neck cuts sold from $13.25 to $13.75 and heavies maintained at $6 to $9 basis of clearance. Canner yearlings sold throughout in a spread of $7 to $5.25 largely, steady with the previous week's close.

Receipts of horses and mules fell not far short of the 1700 mark, arrivals from ranges swelling contributions somewhat. An active market was experienced in all classes and a good clearance for the week was made, with the most pronounced demand for fair to cotton mules, good miners and big harness-marked workers. Range horses sold fully up to expectations, buyers showing a preference for the big kinds and broke offerings, green stuff finding an outlet which was slow at times. Young horses anod mares that were sound were in fair demand.

EASY MONEY HELPS BRING STOCK RISE

Influence of Lower Rates Discussed by Financial Authority — Advancing Commodity Prices an Indication of Better Business.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The New York Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly review, says:

"This week's drop in the rate for call funds to 3½ per cent on Sept. 15, the quarterly date for tax settlements, after creeping forward some days before to 4½, was seized promptly by bulls as a basis for new demonstrations of how high stocks can go when the groundwork is properly laid. The approach of a tax settlement date usually brings dearer money for a few days, but when on that very date this week money fell to its old low for the year the optimists held out hope that not even the crop movements of the autumn would perhaps affect rates appreciably.

"Money is so indisputably king of the security markets now that, in the absence of any new developments in business, its movements will be followed more closely than ever for the remainder of 1927 for light on stock market fluctuations. Tradition has it that bear markets seldom get far so long as money stays cheap and this leads those on the constructive side of the market to hope for continued easy money.

Keeping Money Rates Low.

"Since the unseasonable decline in interest rates began six weeks ago dates plainly from the time when our Federal Reserve Banks started to buy Government securities heavily, and thus to pour out funds in large quantities, the financial district reasons that the Federal Reserve system has it in its power either to continue these influences for ease or to discontinue them. No important changes were made early this summer but between the end of July and Sept. 14 the Federal Reserve Banks swelled their holdings of Government securities from $355,000,000 to $499,000,000.

"Since a substantial part of these purchases represent efforts of the Government to offset Sept. 15 maturities it is possible that the satisfaction of these maturities will check the buying program. If fewer governments are accumulated from now on, however, the Federal Reserve Banks are almost certain to increase handsomely their holdings of bills. The supply of bankers acceptances in the Federal Reserve portfolios will not produce as much ease in money conditions as a corresponding increase in Government securities, but the operation nevertheless is one calculated to keep rates low.

Prices Going Higher.

"Out of the clutter of statistics on trade may be drawn many evidences of moderate improvement, but the change of greatest importance now to business is the firming tendency of commodity prices. So far the present era of prosperity has made its progress despite the handicap of falling prices. Never before in history has business continued to improve for long at a time when prices were declining. The recent advances not in one or two but in a long line of important commodities held out the suggestion that a bottom has been reached in the general price recession and that commodities may go higher before they go lower.

"An examination of the commodity price situation abroad also, there are signs that the bottom has been reached emphasi- s the conclusion so far as this country is concerned. And it is fortunate that the improvement has come to the crops largely agricultural which needed it most. Cries of inflation will not be raised so promptly when critics realize that the commodities admittedly in poor position are the ones now in the vanguard toward higher levels. It would take no very pronounced up swing in commodity prices at this time to give business men new faith in the future."

WEEK'S ADVANCES CARRY INDUSTRIALS TO HIGH AVERAGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A sensational advance in high priced industrial stocks, which carried the general industrial average to a record high level for all time, and a wide open break in cotton on publication of an official forecast of lower prices were the chief contrasting features in a series of interesting financial and commodity markets this week.

Money rates turned easier after the temporary stiffening incidental to the heavy mid-month turnover of funds in connection with United States Government financing, income tax payments and dividend disbursements. Bond prices held fairly steady, with the week's new offerings of $210,000,000 setting a new high mark since early June. Sterling Exchange mounted to a new high level for the year in reflection of the heavy export of capital to London, where higher interest rates are available.

Pools Were Active.

The rise in stock prices appeared to receive its chief impetus from powerful financial pools as commission houses reported little interest on the part of small traders and investors. In the last half of the week, General Motors issues contributed about one-fifth of the entire volume of trading, soaring to new peak prices coincident with the publication of a record - breaking August sales report. Coppers and public utilities also displayed better evidence of group strength, but the oils were again sluggish. Numerous soft spots cropped out throughout the week.

Cotton declined in the face of a bullish consumption report and predictions of unfavorable weather. The December option closed at 21.39 cents a pound, as against the week's high of 22.84 cents and last week's close of 22.90 cents. Wheat futures declined 5 to 7 cents a bushel, with selling inspired largely by a sharp increase in the Canadian crop estimate. Other grains declined in sympathy.

Money Rates Lower.

Pools, influenced probably by the easing of call money rates towards the close of the week, were again active in marking up a number of industrial specialities. The rapidity of the recent advance, however, was believed in many quarters to have weakened the technical position of the market, with the result that there was rather heavy profit-taking and short selling throughout the session, particularly at the close.

New peak prices for the year, or longer, were registered by Best & Company, Calumet and Arizona, Consolidated Gas, Dunhill International, Dupont, Fisk Rubber first preferred, Goodyear, Green Cananea, Gimbel Bros., Julius Kayser, National Cash Register, Postum, Gas and Texas Gulf Sulphur. Dupont and the Fisk issue, however, closed under yesterday's final figures.

On the other hand, selling pressure was quite effective against such issues as Commercial Solvents, Continental Insurance, Woolworth and Studebaker.

Foreign Exchange Firm.

The further advance in sterling to within 1/32 of parity at 15-32 overshadowed all the developments in the firm foreign exchange market. The only changes of consequence were a 12½-point jump in Spanish pesetas to 17.10 cents, and a break of 5 points in Japanese yen to 46.63 cents.

The weekly clearing house statement showed a deficit in reserve of $30,262,640, as compared with excess reserve of $54,356,900 the week before. Aggregate reserves totalled $597,706,000. The detailed statement of actual condition this day showed mixed changes. Loans, discounts and investments increased $85,803,000 and time deposits $5,458,000. Cash in the vaults dropped $2,841,000; reserve in the Federal Reserve Bank of member banks, $36,126,000, and net demand deposits, $12,397,000.

WEEK'S NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

SHARES SOLD

STOCK PRICES TURN LOWER AS RISE IS HALTE

Before Decline Set in Many Costly Industrials Had Reached New Levels—General Motors An Outstanding Leader.

Total stock sales, 1,212,400 shares.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Heavy selling pressure which developed after a morning of irregularity turned prices toward lower level in today's stock market. Numerous extensive gains were wiped out and frequently converted into losses in the last few minutes of trading.

Earlier in the session, renewed buying of General Motors issue carried the prices to new peaks along with several other prominent shares. Trading was heavy for a half holiday session, the total sales aggregating about 1,200,000 shares of which approximately one-fourth was in the two General Motors stocks. General Motors old stock closed 2½ points lower, after touching a new high at 277¼, and the new reached a new peak at 119, closing at 135½, off 1¼ points net.

Tax Cut Possible.

Prices apparently moved in disregard of current news developments. Market commentators, however, put a bullish interpretation on reports that President Coolidge believed a substantial tax cut possible despite increased army and navy appropriations, and on the reported quickening in wholesale trade and industrial activity during the past week.

Bullish activities were confined largely to about a dozen specialties, including such issues as Gimbel Brothers, Greene Cananea Copper, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Dupont, Goodyear Rubber and Julius Kayser, all of which attained new peak prices. Although General Motors issues held well around their top prices, some of the other motors turned reactionary, particularly Studebaker, Hudson and Mack Trucks.

Realizing sales forced recessions of a point or so in such recent favorites as Postum, International Telephone, General Electric and Montgomery-Ward and General Railway Signal.

Opens Higher.

The market opened with an outburst of strength. The bulk of the buying centered in the high-priced industrials. International Harvester quickly ran up 2½ points, Brooklyn Union Gas and dPeoples Gas, Houston Oil, American Smelting and U. S. Rubber showed initial gains of a point or more.

The market continued to sweep forward as heavy buying orders poured into the motor, rubber, public utility and mercantile issues.

Advance Is Rapid.

General otors (new) opened with a block of 13,000 shares at the "spread" price of 137 to 137¼, and then crossed 138 to a new peak. The old stock touched 275 ¼. Traders put a bullish interpretation on the Washington dispatches that President Coolidge believed substantial tax reduction possible despite the increased needs of the army and navy. The rapidity of the advance led to rather extensive realizing by cautious operators, but offerings were well absorbed.

New peak prices were established in the first hour of trading by Calumet & Arizona, Consolidated Gas, Dupont, Gimbel Bros., Goodyear, Peoples Gas and Texas Gulf Sulphur. There were only a few soft spots, commercial solvents, which recorded a sensational advance yesterday, falling back 4 points.

Foreign exchanges opened firm with sterling at the year's high of $4.86⅛ for cables.

nea, Gimbel Bros., Julius Kayser, National Cash Register, Peoples Gas and Texas Gulf Sulphur, Dupont and the Fisk issue, however, closed under yesterday's final figures.

On the other hand, selling pressure was quite effective against such issues as Commercial Solvents, Continental Insurance, Woolworth and Studebaker.

Foreign Exchange Firm.

The further advance in sterling to within 1/32 of parity at $4.86 15-32 overshadowed all the developments in the firm foreign exchange market. The only other changes of consequence were a 12½-point jump in Spanish pesetas to 17.10 cents, and a break of 27 points in Japanese yen to around 46.63 cents.

The weekly clearing house statement showed a deficit in reserve of $30,262,640, as compared with excess reserve of $54,356,900 the week before. Aggregate reserve totalled $597,706,000. The detailed statement of actual condition this day showed mixed changes. Loans, discounts and investments increased $35,808,000 and time deposits $5,458,000. Cash in own vaults dropped $2,841,000; reserve in the Federal Reserve Bank of member banks, $36,126,000, and net demand deposits, $12,301,000.

QUIET DAY CLOSES WEEK'S BOND TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Bond prices shifted listlessly in today's market, with volume of trading decidedly small, even for a Saturday short session. Although week-end profit taking was much in evidence, a few high-grade issues clung tenaciously to their year's high levels. In view of continued prospects for an extended period of easy money conditions, few offerings were made, even at peak prices.

The most spirited bidding occurred in the convertible group, B. & O. 4½s in particular displaying strength, selling at 100⅜ for the first time this year. Brooklyn Edison Gas 5½s and Delaware & Hudson 5s also gave a good account of themselves.

Gains among the railway liens included such issues as Lake Shore general 3½s, Seaboard Air Line 4½s and Western Maryland 4s, which changed hands in moderate amounts for the year's best figures. Missouri Pacific 5s, Rock Island refunding 4s and Chesapeake Corporation 5s also attracted attention. Julius Kayser 6s continued to advance, and there was some buying of Humble Oil 5s and General Motors acceptance 6s.

The foreign group was quiet and prices generally reflected irregularity. Rolish Republic issues were fractionally lower after indicating their previous high for the year.

United States Government obligations were very quiet.

Public offerings is expected early next week of $13,875,000 4¼ per cent bonds of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad.

AFTER REACTION COTTON CLOSES WITH NET GAIN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A sharp opening advance was followed by reactions in the entire market today, December contracts selling off from 21.75c to 21.28c, and closing at 21.39c, compared with 21.48c at the close the previous day. The general market closed steady, at net advances of 1 to 18 points, with late months showing most activity.

The opening was firm at an advance of 8 to 16 points, October selling at 21.45c and March at 22.06c on covering by recent bears and trade or commission house buying stimulated by relatively firm Liverpool cables.

The opinion was expressed in some quarters that the market had been pretty well liquidated on the severe declines earlier in the week, and belief that it was likely to influence professional interests to ease off on the demand. The advance, however, met increased offerings which were said to include considerable Southern selling as well as realizing by buyers on recent declines, and the market reacted.

A favorable report of weather prospects over the week-end and talk of probably heavy figures on ginnings prior to September 25 were mentioned as factors on the setback. It carried October contracts off to 20.95c and March to 21.57c, net declines of 47 to 52 points on the nearer positions, while March was net unchanged.

Spot house brokers were credited with getting near months on the decline as if heavy purchases of spot cotton in the south, while there were reports of some further Southern selling. Covering continued and last prices showed rallies of 5 to 13 points from the lowest.

Trading was much less active than earlier in the week, but as reflected in the fluctuations, sentiment still appeared to be influenced by unsettled following recent violent fluctuations.

Private cables attributed the firmness of Liverpool to covering, trade calling, Bombay and continental buying and also reported a fair export demand from India, but that most offers were impracticable.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 79,383 bales, against 78,715 last year.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The gray cloth market was quiet today, with few sales, buying hands offered yardage for profit-taking, influenced by lower cotton quotations. Combed yarn cloths slowed down in activity. Burlap was lower. A moderate amount of light weights was sold. Sacks, 5-oz grade, declined 10 yen at Yokahama and exciting trading followed. Finished prices were reduced 5 cents on the average. Clothing in the ready-to-wear market was quieter, warm weather having interfered with retail business.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Total transactions in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today amounted to $4,514,000. Previous day sales, $8,976,000; week ago, $5,364,000; year ago, $4,237,000; two years ago, $5,052,000. Totals sales from Jan. 1 to date were $2,410,-201,000; compared with $2,140,062,000 same period year ago and $2,-554,381,000 same period two years ago.

Quotations on Liberty bonds are in dollars and thirty-seconds of a dollar, that is, for instance, a sale printed $99.24 means $99 and twenty-four thirty-seconds of a dollar and not $99.24.

New York Told St. Louis Is World Music Capital In the Summer Season

Enormous Success of Municipal Opera in Forest Park May Lead to Similar Enterprise in the Metropolis.

From Richard L. Stokes, former music critic of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, who now occupies the same position with the New York Evening World, New Yorkers have learned about Municipal Opera in St. Louis. The following article by Mr. Stokes, was published in the Evening World:

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.

NEW YORK boasts that it is the musical capital of the world—but this holds good only in the winter. During the summer its activities shrink to the stadium concerts, the Goldman Band concerts and a few struggles with grand opera at Starlight Park. Therefore many music lovers of this city are turning their attention to the St. Louis Municipal Theater, which has just completed its ninth season of light opera with a total attendance of 529,000 and record-breaking receipts of $375,272.

Possibilities are now being canvassed as to the establishment of a similar enterprise in New York, for the entertainment of its hundreds of thousands of music lovers during the summer doldrums.

The Municipal Theater Association—the Western city's principal title to fame prior to Col. Lindbergh's trans-oceanic flight in the Spirit of St. Louis— has in the nine seasons of its career entertained audiences totaling nearly 3,100,000, collected approximately $2,000,000 in ticket sales and receipts from concessions, amassed a profit of almost $100,000, and constructed a plant valued at $350,000.

UPON the Municipal Theater in Forest Park, during twelve weeks of each summer, converge all roads. Between 7:30 and 8 o'clock every evening street cars disgorge their thousands at the various gate entrances. The footpaths echo to the trend of multitudes of feet; parades of busses, crowded to the steps, whirl past, and acres of automobiles mill about the parking places.

When the visitor has arrived at the main entrance and traversed the long, roofed approach, an imposing vision bursts upon him. Before him rises, tier upon tier to a height of 53 feet, a mammoth open-air amphitheater 255 feet wide and 256 feet deep. In the seats are packed 10,000 men, women and children, constituting a veritable cross-section of humanity.

Before them spreads the largest stage in America, 120 feet wide and 90 feet deep, framed by a natural proscenium arch of two massive oaks 70 feet high and an attending grove of many smaller trees. There is an orchestra pit with a capacity of 160 musicians, and on three sides of the theater run pergolas providing shelter for 6,000 from possible rainstorms. At the top of the theater are 1700 free seats, and below them, in order, rank 1625 seats at 25 cents, 1094 at 50 cents, 1422 at $1, 1458 at $1.50 and 1000 box seats at $2.

OVER the stage, as the performance begins, turns into a scene of enchantment, with the rays of the lighting plant transmitting the foliage of the grove into tremulous leaves of gold and silver. Soon the stage is thronged with its cast of more than 100 principals, singers and dancers, and with voice and orchestra the audience is transposed into the charming realm of music created by Sir Arthur Sullivan, or Johann Strauss, or Karl Milloecker, or Franz Lehar, or Victor Herbert.

Thanks to this enterprise, boys and girls in their 'teens in St. Louis have a wider acquaintance with the repertory of light opera than any New York music critic.

The history of the Municipal Theater is as romantic as its setting. Its birth and rise had something of the spontaneity of a process of nature. Mention must be made to begin with of the fact that, owing to a pair of summer gardens now defunct, Delmar and suburban, St. Louis possesses a long and flourishing tradition of light opera, and particularly the operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan.

In 1914 arrived the 150th anniversary of the establishment of St. Louis as a fur-trading post by Pierre Laclede Liguest and Auguste Chouteau. To celebrate this event there was organized, under the leadership of Miss Charlotte Rumbold, a colossal spectacle which became famous as the St. Louis Pageant and Masque.

IT was presented on Art Hill, a natural amphitheater sloping down from the Art Museum in Forest Park to a spacious lagoon, and boasting such dimensions that the attendance at a single performance sometimes exceeded 300,000. This was perhaps the earliest experiment in community art on a massive scale. The cast of several

"Second Thoughts -on- First Nights"

By Alexander Woollcott

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.

THE long-trumpeted play called "Revelry," which aims to turn a disconcerting searchlight on the graft that can rot the very core of our national Government, arrived in this town on Monday night. It was received with as much calm as if it were a pitiless exposure of some governesses for cheating at croquet. The massive, toxic apathy of these United States —your apathy, that is, and mine— supplies much of the explanation of that calm. The play itself supplies the rest. As conceived, as fabricated and as acted, it is not quite big enough for the Augean task to which it is valorously self-appointed.

Around about me on the night of the first performance at the Theater Masque, I could hear silly people whispering one to another, "Bad taste, bad taste, bad taste." But from such a play, as in the case of the weakling, "Spread Eagle" last spring, I come away regretting only that a subject that needed the stinging, scalding silencing truth of a "What Price Glory" had somehow, somewhere lost its way. "Revelry" could be a mighty scourge to lash the money-changers out of the temple. It is brandished feebly.

PALPABLY the book, which the surgical Samuel Hopkins Adams wrote and which has now been somewhat too meekly dramatized by Maurine Watkins, was inspired by that sickening state of affairs in Washington which finally erupted in the scandal known as the Teapot Dome. It follows the trail of mean graft along Pennsylvania avenue. It follows it up the steps of the White House. It follows it into the nervous Cabinet room. There it stops.

I suppose no one read the testimony in the Teapot Dome case without wondering what President Harding could have been thinking about while the corruption twined

Apollo Club Begins Rehearsals for Its Jubilee Concert

The initial step in the preparation of a special program for its 100th Jubilee Concert was taken by the Apollo Club in its first rehearsal for the new season 1927-28, at the Moose Hall last Monday night.

Although the night was exceptionally hot, over 60 of the active members were there to begin practice on a series of songs for this special Jubilee Concert.

From now on the club will continue to rehearse every Monday night at 8:30 at 3820 Olive street. Director Charles Galloway states that there is still room for a number of good voices in the choir.

CLOSE-UPS OF THE STARS

Behind the Screens

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

By MARGARET POST NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 17.

MY Alice-in-Wonderland-like trip behind the screens out here in Movie Land is almost over and yesterday, as I started for the "lots" for one of my last visits, it seemed a little hard to think of saying good-by to this make believe country with its very real and very pleasant people. Once inside the studio, however, this mood was quickly dispelled by the amusing scene on the "She's a Sheik" set where Bebe Daniels is starring. The scene showed the interior of an Algerian house with its Moorish arches, studded with mother of pearl inlay, separating the rooms. The floors and walls were covered with costly rugs and cushions of richly embroidered velvets and furs were scattered about. A brass lamp was sending forth incense and on an inlaid table stood a Turkish "hoo-kah" with its tube and glass water jar. In the center of the room, coatless, but in the trousers of a captain in the Foreign Legion, and very, very angry stood Richard Arlen. Before him, bowing and scraping stood a mulatto with his arms full of native wearing apparel. Another slave entered with a large tray loaded with tempting dishes and fruits. Arlen was demanding his own coat and an explanation as to a state of affairs which was apparently no clearer to him than to me, but as he spoke English and the slaves Arabic, he was getting nowhere. So, furious, he dashed the tray and its contents to the floor and rushed for the door which he found closed with an iron gate and guarded by two men armed with scimitars. Nothing daunted, he attacked them with a bric-a-brac and chairs and finally cornering them discovered they were American traveling showmen, who through a long series of incidents found themselves the devoted slaves of Bebe, the Sheik. An explanation might have followed and the situation made clear but the director, Clarence Badger, seemed content to end things there—or rather to do it over again—so the fragments of chicken and fruits were picked up and rearranged, the room set in order, and the original positions resumed and it was all gone through a couple of times more. Then fat little Billy Fraley in baggy blue trousers and striped purple robe, and tall James Bradbury Jr., who play the comedy parts as Bebe's willing American slaves, walked aside to recuperate from the furniture attack and Mr. Arlen strolled over to join Charles Rogers and Gary Cooper

Movie Theaters Are Hurt By the Hot Wave Despite Their Cooling Systems

Rearrangement of Plans Will Enable the American to Start Its Dramatic Season September 26 With "The Barker."

DESPITE the excellent cooling systems in the movie palaces all of the show places suffered from the hot weather last week and the Gayety Theater closed its doors last night, the Lazone Players stock company, which had come in for the season, simply fading away in the heat. Down at the American Theater, where "Old Ironsides" starts its third and final week today, business was far below expectations. "Ben Hur," at Loew's did not come up to the mark set by many thousands of dollars and it will be held over for another week in the hope that the weather will moderate. "The Way of All Flesh," at the Ambassador, was a little more fortunate but it, too, did not take in the money it should have while "Hard Boiled Haggerty," with little to recommend it even in a cool week, sagged badly at the Missouri. Lew Cody, on the other hand stood 'em most of the week at the St. Louis.

When "Old Ironsides" leaves the American next Saturday night a rapid shift in plans will enable that house to start its regular dramatic season the following Monday night with Richard Bennett in "The Barker" as the initial offering. "The Barker" was one of the substantial hits of last season. New York took it to its heart for a year and Mr. Bennett and his company are now approaching their two hundredth performance at the Blackstone Theater, Chicago. St. Louis will be the first stop on the tour planned for Bennett.

A number of more or less important theatrical productions are announced for the American Theater this season. In a musical way there will be George White's "Scandals," the Marx Brothers in "The Cocoanuts," "Hit the Deck," Fred Stone in "Criss Cross," Eddie Dowling in "Honeymoon Lane" and two Ziegfield shows, the "Follies" and "Rio Rita."

Among the dramatic attractions, in addition to "The Barker," there will be David Belasco's production of "Lulu Belle," starring Lenore Ulric, the Civic Repertory Company in "The Cradle Song," two George Tyler companies—the comedy, "Tommy," and "The Constant Nymph;" Mrs. Fiske, Margaret Anglin and Otis Skinner in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and Robert B. Mantell in Shakespearean and classic plays.

The American will also present the San Carlo Opera Company this season. Two film spectacles, "Wings" and "King of Kings," will have their first St. Louis showing some time during the season there.

A NIGHT earlier, next Sunday night to be exact, the Shubert-Rialto, will get going with "The Countess Maritza" as has already been told in these columns. The cast will include Odette Myrtil, the French singing comedienne; Walter Woolf, a young baritone; Harry K. Morton, a comedian of merit; Marjorie Peterson and others.

LOEW'S THEATER is meeting downtown competition with a cut in prices for part of the day at least. The theater is to open at 10 o'clock in the morning with an admission charge of 25 cents, which will prevail until 1. Then, for the rest of the afternoon, the price will go back to its usual 35 cents scale. Whether or not this was planned by the late Marcus Loew himself is not announced. St. Louis never knew Mr. Loew very well or so very much of him. He had been out here but once since the opening of his Washington avenue theater some three years ago but there are plenty of stories told of him and his success in which St. Louis played a part. No one ever got very far in interviewing Loew on how he traveled from the squalid poverty of Avenue B and Fifth street of 50 years ago to Pembroke, his $6,000,000 Long Island estate, a fortune estimated at more than $35,000,000 and control of 300 theaters.

To the stock question "To what do you owe your success?" the smiling, modest little man who built the largest theatrical enterprise in the world always made the same answer:

"Luck."

Once he went further than that. He was addressing the students at Harvard. He may have been thinking of his own boyhood. At the age of six he was a newsboy. He left school at nine to work in a map-coloring shop at 35 cents a day; at 16 he was head of a department in a fur factory and at the age of 23 he had failed in the fur business, owing $1800. Confronting the audience of college students, most of whom had yet to earn their first thousand dollars by their own efforts, he said with disarming naivete:

"If I had had the advantages of a college education I world not be here addressing you today."

That brought down the house, but Marcus Loew, who died at the age of 57, undoubtedly spoke the exact truth.

A photograph of him taken at the age of 16 shows that he was who had been watching at one side. Mr. Rogers has just finished playing the lead in Mary Pickford's new picture "The Best Girl," and handsome Gary Cooper is the hero of "Beau Sabreur."

ANOTHER interested spectator was "Oscar." Oscar, who is the studio bootblack, and a great character about the place, has recently, in addition to this professional career, embanked on another. He has been playing as an extra in several of the desert films. I asked him if he liked working in pictures better than blacking boots.

"Well this is not my first picture, you know," he said. "I was soldiering in 'Beau Sabreur' and I played with Richard Dix in 'Shanghai Bound,' and now they've got me sheiking in this fillum. I don't know what it's all about, and I don't care just so long as I get my pay check." Later I saw Oscar in his "Sheiking" robe and red cap busily at work between scenes at his humbler calling.

I HAD just started with Gary Cooper to visit Olga, a beautifull-grown leopardess who is used in the picture, when Miss Daniels came on the set. I don't think I've ever seen a more striking or unusual costume than that in which Bebe was attired. Her skin had purposely been tanned all over to a beautiful golden brown and long black curls had been added to her bobbed head. Her costume was entirely of white, over a very, very brief pair of jeweled white trunks. There was a sheer, full, pearl and diamond encrusted trailing skirt and the "waist" was composed only of a similarly bejewelled bandeau. Her feet were encased in satin sandals and on her head was a close fitting silver cap with a huge fan effect of white peacock feathers surmounting it. On her arms were quantities of bracelets and on her fingers curious rings. She looked like a strange, dusky but truly regal princess.

Miss Daniels who is exceptionally easy to talk to told me how much she had enjoyed having Trudie Ederle work with her in "Swim Girl Swim" and what a great girl she was. She also said that in her new picture she will use two wonderful pistols which were formerly the property of Rudolph Valentino, and which she acquired at an auction of his effects after the star's death. As a "Sheik" it has been necessary for Miss Daniels to learn to use the scimitar. She has long been an adept with the rapier but explained that with the latter one thrusts with the wrist turned thus and so, while with the scimitar the maneuver of attack is quite different. In other words it's like trying to drive a gear shift car when one is used to a Ford. Then Miss Daniels called for Olga's trainer to bring her over to where we were. The trainer was a woman dressed in white knickers and shirt and whose only weapon of protection was a whip, and she told us she never carried any other. Olga and Miss Daniels are becoming great friends and although the leopardess must weigh a couple hundred pounds Miss Daniels said she held her in her lap for an hour or more a few days ago. When I left, Olga was stretched full length at Bebe's feet, blinking her great green eyes like a sleepy cat and Bebe was stroking her softly.

IN ANOTHER building I found Dorothy Arzner, one of the three women directors in the motion picture industry, talking to Clara Bow, whose next picture "Red Hair" will be under her supervision. Clara, who had just run in for a minute to ask some questions regarding the new picture, was attired in a bathing suit, red leather coat and driving gloves, with her flaming red hair making a perfect halo about her head.

I met Victor Varconi and Joseph Schildkraut coming down the stairs of one of the most beautiful of the studios, it being modeled after Mount Vernon. Both appeared recently in "The King of Kings." Mr. Schildkraut had with him the two brightest little wire haired fox terriers I've ever seen. At the same studio I saw Josephine Norman, the original "Palm Olive" girl, who has quit posing for advertising posters for a time at least to go into the films.

LEWIS STONE, in a gorgeous blue and silver tunic, was nearby, talking to George Fawcett while waiting for Maria Corda, who was changing into another of the 24 costumes she wears as more mature than many boys are today at the age of 21. His eyes were clear, sharp, intent and straightforward. He had quiet confidence in himself. Evidently here was a young man with steam up for a stiff climb. He had already come a long way. The East Side of those days was a hard school. He had sold his share of papers, peddled lemons from a cart to stores and saloons, founded and sold his own New York weekly paper, the East Side Advertiser, of which he had been editor, chief writer, subscription and advertising manager, and he knew how furs were made up and sold.

RAMON NAVARRO in "BEN HUR" —Loew's State.

MOVIE THEATERS HURT BY THE HOT WEATHER AND BUSINESS DROPS

Two years later he started his own business with several hundred dollars he had saved. A year later he failed, owing $1800. Bankruptcy proceedings absolved him from payment, but he got a job as salesman, earned $100 a week and paid his creditors. At 23 he started in business again. In 1895 only eight fur firms survived a general collapse. Loew's was one. He came through with a balance of $7 and saved the firm by developing velveteen cloaks and skirts to carry the business through the six slack months of the fur trade. The cloaks and skirts gave him enough money to invest with David Warfield and Adolph Zukor in what he thought a less hazardous field, the penny arcade.

BY 1904 Loew's failures were all behind him. In that year he and Warfield withdrew from partnership with Zukor, formed a $100,000 partnership and opened peep-shows in New York and Cincinnati. When the crude one-reel movies threatened the arcades, Loew embraced the menace, carried it to the second floor of the Cincinnati arcade and it has been making millions for him ever since.

Here is where Loew's greatest admirers admit he played in luck. The movies, in the beginning, were such wild-cat affairs that only shoe-string business men would invest in them. If Loew had had a sizable fortune, or if he had seen any other opportunity, he would have stayed out of moving pictures. As it was, he bet his money, his business genius and his life on them, and won. In the early days he tried to get his friends to come along with him. Again he played in luck. Had the movies had a better reputation, Loew's friends would have joined him in his business at the start and he would have had to make a bigger split of his profits. You can call it luck or foresight.

As the movies grew Loew rode the crest of their popularity. He rented vacant stores, converting them into small theaters, seating from 100 to 300 persons, but he observed that pictures alone could not hold the audiences. He added vaudeville acts. Then he plunged on another novel idea, that movies need not be shown in small, stuffy cheese box affairs. He bought a deserted Brooklyn burlesque house, the Cosy Corner, renovated it and renamed it the Royal. The first year of pictures and vaudeville at 10-cent admissions gave him a profit of $60,000. His idea was correct. The modern chain Loew theater began in 1905 with his purchase of Blaney's Lincoln Square Theater in New York, and shortly afterward the old Harlem Casino.

Loew theaters now cover the United States.

Before his death a project was under way to buy chains of theaters in Brazil and in Europe.

In a sense, Marcus Loew may be compared to Andrew Carnegie in steel and Henry Ford in the automobile industry. All three were pioneers in their respective fields; all three had a genius for organization; all three saw the necessity of a vertical progression of their product from raw material to the consumer.

IN 1920 Loew felt the pinch of the producers of motion pictures. He was finding difficulty in getting pictures for his theaters. He bought the Metro Pictures Corporation, which soon took on new life, turning out "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Scaramouche," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Turn to the Right." In 1924 Metro was merged with Goldwyn and later with Louis B. Mayer's unit. Mark up "The Big Parade" to the credit of this group.

It is generally agreed that the secret of Loew's success was, first, his honesty; second, his unequaled sense of the value of real estate for theatrical purposes, and, third, "the Loew policy."

Loew's honesty was a shock to shrewd persons who from time to time showed him how he could make millions by sharp dealing. To the last, Loew stuck stubbornly to the idea that he was in the theatrical business. He refused to play the market with his stocks and his millions. He might easily have raised his fortune to four times its size by manipulating his holdings on the market. Invariably he explained that his stockholders had faith in him. His friend, Sime Silverman, in a tearful eulogy appearing last week in Variety, said that Marcus Loew died early, because he couldn't stop working for his stockholders.

Although Loew had watched the growth of the moving picture and vaudeville theaters in the United States from their birth, and knew the "seat capacity" of all the larger cities like the palm of his hand, he went about the actual purchase of a theater or a site with painstaking care. Men were posted to clock the number of persons passing the property on two, three or four sides. Their reports were considered together with what he already knew about the competing theaters. Loew knew what the property was worth, what sort of theater was needed and what it would gross when it opened, and people became acquainted with "Loew policy" shows.

Knowing all this he kept his finger on the pulse. When "The Four Horsemen" opened he was in the box office and lobby for months. When "The Big Parade" opened in New York he spent the first two weeks at the Astor. He could estimate the value of a show by listening in on the calls for tickets, getting the proportion of balcony to orchestra tickets sold.

The Loew policy in action is like the maneuvers of a crack army division: infantry, cavalry, artillery, tanks, airplanes, quartermaster and intelligence corps all functioning for one objective. The supply of movies is assured and standardized. The vaudeville acts are routed uniformly, the strength of each is known and the proper balance of a bill is fixed. Each routine bill is a picture and six acts, no two alike. The public knows what it will get for its money week after week. Thus the Loew line is held.

ABOUT three years ago, just about the time of the opening of his St. Louis theater, when his heart began to rebel against the strain put upon it by the brain, Loew was talked to long and seriously by Nicholas M. Schenck, vice president of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Loew's, Inc., and by the twin sons, Arthur and David. Marcus Loew listened intently and admitted that there was wisdom in their words. They thought they had him "sold." The next day he appeared at his desk earlier than usual! More lecturing ensued. He finally surrendered, but even then he would not give up his "prerogative," a daily trip to Manhattan on his yacht Caroline, named after his wife, for a few minutes at his office before luncheon hour at the Astor. When he thought "Nick" and his sons were off guard he would sneak in early and work until discovered on his periodical "adjustment," which was just a desperate excuse to meet and talk with business friends and office workers whom he took great pride in counseling and helping in other ways.

His intimate friends say he never forgot his early poverty. He frequently told how he and other boys in the map factory once struck for forty cents a day instead of thirty-five. He never believed in discharging his help. He clung to the theory that every man is good if he knows exactly what his job is to be. He often upbraided his department heads for discharging employes without his knowledge. He always wanted to talk to them first.

"We can be wrong, too," he would say, gently.

REFERENCE was made in these columns some weeks ago to the enormous business being done by the pictures "What Price Glory" and "The Big Parade," and it was stated that the latter picture took in $144,000 in its first week at the Roxy Theater in New York. To be correct, it was "What Price Glory" which played to that amazing sum at the Roxy and in three weeks there it rolled up a grand total of $408,000 while showing before 492,000 cash customers. In the same column of movie news it was said that if Loew's State Theater here resumed its Sunday concerts, made popular last winter by Don Albert, the local musicians might ask for more money for playing on the stage. This the Musicians Union denies, stating that its members will be glad to continue the extra work at the same rate which prevailed last season.

Cotton Outlook Good in Texas.

ABILENE, Tex.—The cotton crop in the Big Bend region continues to have a very bright outlook. Picking is in full swing in Brewster, Presidio and Jeff Davis Counties. It is believed that very little damage will result from the appearance of leaf worm, as a large percentage of the cotton is either matured or in the maturing stage. A few farmers who irrigate their patches claim that they will harvest two bales to the acre.

NEW YORK IS TOLD ST. LOUIS IS SUMMER CAPITAL OF MUSIC

hundreds who depicted characters in the history of the municipality was drawn exclusively from its citizens.

The titanic beauty of this production cut a deep impression in the consciousness of the day, and it was resolved that the impetus so created should not be suffered to perish. Two characteristics were so outstanding that they have become pivotal features of succeeding productions. The Pageant and Masque was a community undertaking, presented in the open air.

It was recognized that Art Hill was too spacious for daily use, and Miss Margaret Anglin was summoned to choose a site less overwhelming. She spent many hours driving about, and at last chose a hillside slanting down to the River des Peres, a small stream which meanders through Forest Park. On this spot is located the present Municipal Theater.

IN the summer of 1915, Miss Anglin christened the site with an all-star production of Shakspeare's sylvan comedy, "As You Like It." It was one of the most exquisite performances ever given at the theater, but it was presented under circumstances of utmost crudity. The performers footed it upon the bare turf. The seats for the audience consisted of benches dragged in from all corners of the park. The lighting plant was so elementary that rheostat dimmers were improvised from barrels of salted rainwater.

The Hillside lay idle for a year, then it chanced, in the summer of 1917, that a convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World met in St. Louis. To entertain the delegates, Guy Golterman—previously active in promoting visits of the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies—was invited to arrange an operatic production at the open-air theater. The result was a sumptuous week of "Aida" during June, with professionals as stars, but with the community feature developed by means of a student chorus and ballet, recruited in the vocal and dancing ateliers of the city. This was followed a month later with a double bill of "I Pagliacci" and a program of ballet divertissements.

These productions marked the beginning of the Municipal Theater as a practicable playhouse and inaugurated its career as a musical rather than a dramatic arena. The hillside was terraced with concrete, a floor of boards was built over the turf, a stone orchesta pit was installed, fences were erected and the nucleus of an adequate lighting plant was acquired. For these reasons Mr. Golterman is sometimes entitled the founder of the Municipal Theater.

IN 1919 was formed the Municipal Theater Association of St. Louis, which from that date—except for brief seasons of grand opera given by Mr. Golterman in 1924, 1925 and 1926—has controlled the destinies of the playhouse. In this organization at last converged several streams of tradition—the light opera policy of Delmar and Suburban Gardens, with their trait of presenting all works in the English language, together with the student chorus and ballet feature of the Pageant and Masque.

Contrary to an impression which may be general, the St. Louis Municipal Opera, as it is popularly known, is not conducted by the City of St. Louis. The Municipal Theater Association is a private organization of business men, who give their services free to the direction of the enterprise and guarantee its operations against loss. In only one year have they been called upon to defray a deficit. The opening season, in 1914, encountered a loss of $11,634, which was refunded out of the profits of 1922. In that year was registered the association's most triumphant gain—a profit of $41,873.

The city grants to the association the use of the theater without payment of rent, permits it to charge admission fees and let concessions, and exacts in return that all profits shall be invested in upbuilding the plant. Thus have arisen its pergolas, lighting towers on either side of the stage, scenic and rehearsal studios and numerous other improvements."

The Mayor of St. Louis is usually honorary president of the association, and a convention has sprung up that the chairmanship of the all-powerful steering body, the Executive Productions Committee, is the property of the Park Commissioner or else the Director of Public Welfare.

The association entered the grand opera field in 1925 with "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Martha," which were followed by "Il Trovatore" in 1926 and "Tales of Hoffman" in 1927. All were presented in English. But its characteristic field has been light opera, and in its list of productions may be noted such works as "Robin Hood," "The Mikado," "The Mascot," "The Gondoliers," "The Chocolate Soldier," "Fra Diavolo," "The Fortune Teller," "The Beggar Student," "Pirates of Penzance," "Chimes of Normandy," "Sari," "The Highwayman," "The Yeoman of the Guard," "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief," "Naughty Marietta," "Die Fledermaus," "The Gypsy Baron," "The Merry Widow," "Gypsy Love," "The Bohemian Girl," "A Night in Venice," "Ruddigore," "Rob Roy," "Erminie," "Pinafore," "The Count of Luxembourg," "Iolanthe" and "Babes in Toyland."

and flourished rank around him. By taking a somewhat similar figure as their protagonist and by blandly fictionizing him into the White House at a time which the program is careful to describe as "a day beyond our own day," the authors of "Revelry" have undertaken to answer that unspoken question. They have boldly repiled that during a somewhat similar orgy of graft and boodle, their protagonist was not thinking of anything at all.

They picture a big, bland, handsome, neighborly boob and undertake to show that he could buddy about with the grafters, swig liquor with them, swap yarns and tips with them, play poker with them and yet remain innocent of the dirty work going on around him, oblivious of the dirty tricks he was even helping them to play. That was the portrait they undertook to draw. I do not think they succeeded.

As written and as acted, their papier-mache President in their lath-and-canvas White House remains hollow and unconvincing. Yet "Revelry" is the kind of play that ached with its need of a President Markham as real and as inescapably believable as Captain Flagg.

In their efforts to show that he was no crook, the authors have merely succeeded in suggesting that he was not quite bright. Neither horn of that dilenima is a cozy resting place for the onlooking citizen. I myself pretend to no notion which theory would have come nearer hitting the actual pin on the head. I pretend only to report the response of one attentive playgoer who sat absorbed through "Revelry" with an eavesdropper's natural relish for the key-hole, but came away at last unsatisfied.

IT is too early to report on the public response to "Revelry." It is not too early to report that "Burlesque" is sold out for weeks in advance and that a vast multitude tries each night to get into "Good News." The last-named is a rowdy, bumptious musical comedy which, like its kindred Cohan productions, scorns the loveliness of line and color which the Ziegfelds of the theater have learned. It just relies on a good deal of noise and a dash of sex.

When the orchestra arrived for the overture, each player wearing a sweater and all of them beginning their work by yelling "Rah! Rah! Rah!" we old-timers realized with sinking hearts that we were in for a college play. Memories of effeminate chorus men, giving long, shrill yells for the good old team, and of undergraduates played by actors so seasoned that they fairly tottered across the campus, thronged back ominously out of the college plays of past seasons.

But this one is really pretty good, as such things go, with something of the hick college flavor of the Siwash stories which the beloved George Fitch wrote a-many years ago. I particularly enjoyed the wandering fragments of the glee club, all very drunk and given to warbling a ditty with this refrain:

But, oh, what a pal was whoo-ziz
From my old New Hampshire home in Tennessee.

One of these minnesingers, swathed in a coonskin coat at all hours and most disconsolate because mere glee club singers were not regarded as important during football season, burst into tears from sheer lack of appreciation and confided to a stony world that he had given his adenoids to the dear old college.

Then I enjoyed the undergraduate automobile, a campus institution which has sprung up since my own day. The more disreputable, the more battered, the more trampike the car, the greater its swank, the greater its owner's pride. In this age of anthologies, I do wish some patient chronicler of American humor would make a collection of all the legends scratched and scrawled on the undergraduate cars from Leland Stanford to Bowdoin.

In "Good News" the rheumatic flivver proudly displays as its armorial device the legend, "I Do Not Choose to Run." To that anthology, I would contribute two which I have noted in my own wanderings. One was an intensely audible wreck of a car across the back of which was chalked "Stop Me If You've Heard This One." Then, out at the University of Wisconsin, I saw a gaunt and haggard Ford entitled, with simple dignity, "The Mayflower." There was, however, a sub-title, which said: "Four Puritans Come Across In This Boat Last Fall."

Symphony Orchestra Will[illegible]

Its New Season Of 32 Concerts on Nove[illegible]

THE prospectus of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, which is just out, verifies the current rumors of the last few weeks that St. Louis will have an interesting symphony season. With five guest conductors, all of them men of international reputation, and with a list of soloists of high rank and achievement, with the Odeon rehabilitated and completely redecorated, the outlook is most excellent.

The local activities of the orchestra will be much the same this year as last. There will be 16 pairs of symphony concerts instead of 15, as in the past; 16 "Pop" concerts on Sunday afternoons, instead of 19 as last year; two series of young people's concerts of five each, and five public school concerts. The Symphony concerts will be given on Friday afternoons and Saturday evenings with the exception of the concert which normally would come Saturday evening, Dec. 31. This is transferred to Thursday evening, Dec. 29.

The Symphony series will begin on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Nov. 4-5, and will end on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, March 16-17. In this period there will be four weeks without concerts, December 2-3 and 23-24, January 20-21 and February 10-11.

In the original announcement of conductors made in July the name of Maurice Ravel was included. Unfortunately Mr. Ravel changed his plans for the time of coming to this country and could not come to St. Louis at the only time the orchestra could make use of his services. However, all of the other five conductors are coming. Two of them are being brought to American purposely for the St. Louis concerts, Bernardino Molinari of Rome, and Carl Schuricht of Wiesbaden.

Molinari is one of the first conductors of Italy after Arturo Toscanini. He is a native of Rome, 47 years old, and since 1912 has been the artistic director of the famous Augusteo concerts in that city. Under his regime the Orchestra of the Augusteo has become one of the leading organizations of Europe and annually makes extensive tours through Europe. Mr. Molinari also in addition to his symphonic work has conducted at La Scala, in Milan, San Carlo, in Naples, the Reggio Theater in Turin, the Colon Theater at Buenos Aires and at the State Opera at Vienna. During one week of his stay in America the St. Louis Symphony Society lands him to the Philharmonic Orchestra of New York for four concerts in that city.

Carl Schuricht of Wiesbaden, the other conductor who is being brought from Europe, is a man in his late thirties, who is held in Germany to be one of the greatest of the younger generation of conductors. He has many guest performances through Germany and Austria every year, but this will be his first venture in America.

The other three conductors are much more familiar to St. Louis, at least in name. Emil Oberhoffer, who opens the season, was for many years the conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and is responsible for having built that up from nothing to one of the leading organizations of its kind in the United States. Last winter he conducted the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra after the death of Rothwell, and this summer he made a special trip to Los Angeles to conduct the annual Pension Fund concert of that orchestra to an audience of over 15,000.

Willem Van Hoogstraten, a native of Holland, came to America several years ago as associate of Willem Mengelberg in the direction of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. In the past year he has built what is said to be a very remarkable orchestra in Portland, Oregon. He will make a special trip from Portland to St. Louis to conduct a pair of symphony concerts.

The fifth conductor is a young Englishman, Eugene Goossens, c[illegible] of the most talented of the "younger British composers." He was brought to America a few years ago by Mr. Eastman to take charge of the Rochester Symphony Orchestra, of which Mr. Eastman is the patron saint. He has had much success as guest conductor in Boston and New York. This last summer he was one of the most successful of the conductors of the Hollywood Bowl and has been re-engaged for next summer.

Each of the first appearances of the conductors will, of course, be without soloist, giving them the full benefit of the limelight, but the list of soloists is really an unusual one. For singers there are Richard Crooks, one of the greatest tenors that America has produced; Elsa Alsen, the Wagnerian singer who will share with Mr. Schuricht a Wagner program in the end of the season; and finally Tito Schipa, who is one of the two or three ranking tenors of the day, and the only Italian tenor who has had great success in legitimate concert work.

For violinists there will be Jacques Thibaud, the French artist, who already has appeared several times in St. Louis; Cecilia Hansen, who, in the last three or four years has built a very special place for herself in American music, and Sylvain Noack, a splendid artist who is concertmaster of the orchestra.

The pianists will be the American artist, Gitta Gradova; the Russian, Nikolai Orloff; Vladimir Horowitz, another Russian, who comes to America for the first time this fall, and [illegible] king.

Mrs. Sarah Lanham of Collinsville Has Kept Paper for Forty-nine Years.

A circular in the form of an elaborately illustrated newspaper, telling of the first "Carnival of the Veiled Prophet" has been treasured for 49 years by Mrs. Sarah Lanham of Collinsville.

The Veiled Prophet on his first visit was known by his full title, "Grand Oracle of the Veiled Prophets of the World." The parade symbolized his meeting with the goddess of the harvest, along with a few intimate friends, including Eve and Bacchus.

Woodward, Tiernan & Hale printed the circular, which is dated Oct. 8, 1878. Along with lithographs and descriptions of the floats, it bears many advertisements. An old-time flavor may be caught in one—"Tony Faust, Oyster House and Saloon."

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ill., Sept. 17.—State's Attorney Hanson announced today he had obtained A. J. O'Connor to help in prosecuting Harry Hill, charged with killing his mother.

POLICE TO WARN CHILDREN AGAINST PLAYING IN STREET

Chief Gerk Gives Orders to Be Gentle and Not to Frighten Youngsters.

Children are to be warned against street playing, by order of Chief of Police Gerk, who instructed his captains yesterday to have their men do it gently and not to frighten or antagonize children. Roller skating was mentioned in particular.

A ball game was being played in the street Friday when Merrill Nienaber, 14, son of Joseph Nienaber of 3654 Hickory street, ran into the side of a moving automobile and suffered concussion of the brain and a broken leg.

Mrs. John D. H

acoste Again Take U.S. Title, Giving Fra World Net Suprem

oung Star Defeats "Big Bill" Tilden in Strai Outsteadying American and Showing Perfe racy.

By F. G. Vosburgh,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Rene Lacoste, an Iro France, with steel springs in his toes and the accuracy his racket, swept to a decisive straight-set victory ov "Big Bill" Tilden today to win the tennis championship o ites for the second time in as many years. The sco 11-9.

Coming close upon the French ep of the Davis Cup matches, victory drove home the claim France to individual as well team supremacy over all the rld.

t was a valiant battle, this last ...e stand of one who ruled unallenged until the coming of e Frenchmen in their might a ar ago. It thrilled a throng of 000 tennis fans who packed the st side stadium and literally ld their breath through the long ip-court exchanges with which e Frenchman wore Tilden down a desperately-fought third set.

Tilden Lacks Steadiness.

From the start Tilden was lack- in steadiness while Lacoste was curacy personified. A detailed ore shows Tilden made by far e more earned points. Lacoste's adly marksmanship was the argin of victory.

The battle for the most part was ught from back court where La- ste always had the better of the changes. It was only when Til- followed his drives or service ...s to the barrier for volley ...cements that he was able to ...ry the battle to his foe.

As the match wore on these sal- to the net became more rare. ...e st...in was telling visibly upon ...e 31-year-old Tilden while La- ste, 10 years younger, was al- fresh, his face expressionless he canced about the baseline h the footwork of a boxer. His ...icipation of Tilden's shots was ...azing and enabled him on more an one occasion to turn the tide a rally by returning strokes at left his opponent's racket la- led "placement."

Tilden Shows Strain.

At the start of the match Tilden viously was nervous while the renchman was matter-of-fact and ...-contained. For Tilden it was e last chance to save something om the wreckage left by the in- ding Frenchmen and the respon- ility weighed upon him.

Three times in succession in the st game Tilden drove Lacoste's rt serves into the net. His hirlwind service had not desert- him, however, and he evened e count on the wings of a pair aces. Games followed service ith few breaks until they stood adlocked at nine games each. In e eighteenth game Lacoste stood set point six times, but could punch the finishing shot past Tilden's sweeping racket at the .

Tilden's respite was brief, how- er, for in the next game Lacoste on his service with ease and owled through the final game, 4 ints to 1.

Lacoste Takes Five in Row.

His momentum carried Lacoste rough the first game of the sec- d set, but Tilden made brilliant e of his net attack to win the st three. There the climax of lden's fight was reached and coste reeled off five in a row to ke the set at 6 games to 3. For e deciding point Lacoste out- adled Bill from back court, re- rning everything until at last a lden drive smothered itself in e net.

Big Bill's only chance of winning e match hung upon the outcome the third set and he went after from the start with his old fa- liar net attack. For a time it emed he would succeed as he ined a lead of five games to two. Coste was fighting for a ight set victory and after win- g his own service he broke ough Tilden in the ninth game.

American Nearly Takes Set.

Twice in that game Tilden was

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Rene Lacoste, an iron-nerved son of France, with steel springs in his toes and the accuracy of a rifleman in his racket, swept to a decisive straight-set victory over America's "Big Bill" Tilden today to win the tennis championship of the United States for the second time in as many years. The score was 11-9, 6-4, 11-9.

Coming close upon the French triumph of the Davis Cup matches, this victory drove home the claim of France to individual as well as team supremacy over all the world.

It was a valiant battle, this last stand of one who ruled unchallenged until the coming of the Frenchmen in their might a year ago. It thrilled a throng of 8,000 tennis fans who packed the west side stadium and literally held their breath through the long rally-court exchanges with which the Frenchman wore Tilden down in a desperately-fought third set.

Tilden Lacks Steadiness.

From the start Tilden was lacking in steadiness while Lacoste was accuracy personified. A detailed score shows Tilden made by far the more earned points. Lacoste's deadly marksmanship was the margin of victory.

The battle for the most part was fought from back court where Lacoste always had the better of the exchanges. It was only when Tilden followed his drives or service up to the barrier for volley placements that he was able to carry the battle to his foe.

As the match wore on these sallies to the net became more rare. Lacoste was telling visibly upon the 31-year-old Tilden while Lacoste, 10 years younger, was always fresh, his face expressionless as he danced about the baseline with the footwork of a boxer. His anticipation of Tilden's shots was amazing and enabled him on more than one occasion to turn the tide from a rally by returning strokes that left his opponent's racket labeled "placement."

Tilden Shows Strain.

At the start of the match Tilden was obviously was nervous while the Frenchman was matter-of-fact and self-contained. For Tilden it was the last chance to save something from the wreckage left by the invading Frenchmen and the responsibility weighed upon him.

Three times in succession in the first game Tilden drove Lacoste's first serves into the net. His whirlwind service had not deserted him, however, and he evened the count on the wings of a pair of aces. Games followed service with few breaks until they stood deadlocked at nine games each. In the eighteenth game Lacoste stood at set point six times, but could not punch the finishing shot past Tilden's sweeping racket at the net.

Tilden's respite was brief, however, for in the next game Lacoste won his service with ease and raveled through the final game, 4 points to 1.

Lacoste Takes Five in Row.

His momentum carried Lacoste through the first game of the second set, but Tilden made brilliant use of his net attack to win the first three. There the climax of Tilden's fight was reached and Lacoste reeled off five in a row to take the set at 6 games to 3. For a deciding point Lacoste outmaneuvered Bill from back court, repeating everything until at last a Tilden drive smothered itself in the net.

Big Bill's only chance of winning the match hung upon the outcome of the third set and he went after it from the start with his old fashioned net attack. For a time it seemed he would succeed as he gained a lead of five games to two. But Coste was fighting for a straight set victory and after winning his own service he broke through Tilden in the ninth game.

"CLEAN UP" WITH ANITA PEABODY AND REIGH COUNT

Jolly Roger Captures Grand National Steeplechase — Chance Play Gets First Place in "Gold Cup."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A crowd of 35,000, the largest in the history of Belmont Park, today saw Mrs. John D. Hertz's Anita Peabody, with Charles Lang up, and her Reigh Count, with Mack Garner in the saddle, run one-two in the thirty-eighth renewal of the Belmont Futurity, richest 2-year-old classic in the world. Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian was third and J. R. Macomber's Petee Wrack fourth. The time for the approximate seven furlongs was 1:21 4-5.

The value to the winner was $91,790, and Mrs. Hertz collected $10,600 more on Reigh Count, a total of $102,390.

With the rise of the barrier, Agitator, a Whitney entry, was the first to show in front, closely followed by Victorian and Anita Peabody. While Anita Peabody tired at the finish she won by a head. Reigh Count was a length in front of Victorian. It appeared that Jockey Garner could have beaten Anita Peabody with Reigh Count.

Steeplechase to Jolly Roger.

The Grand National Steeplechase, run over three miles, proved to be one of the best jumping events in years. It was won by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's Jolly Roger, ridden by "Specks" Crawford. J. E. Widener's Fairmount was second and F. A. Clark's Madrigal II, third. Laufjunge fell and Nosiam as lost his rider.

The race was worth $34,750 and the time for the three miles was 5:43.

Jolly Roger took the lead from Fairmount in the last half mile and won eased by four lengths. Fairmount was second by 20 lengths.

Disqualification in Gold Cup.

Brown Bud, racing the interests of Frederick Johnson, finished first in Belmont's third feature of the day, the Jockey Club Gold Cup, but he was disqualified for a foul and the race was given to Chance Play, with Walter J. Salmon's Display second and Forever and Ever third. Chance Play dominated the running of the two-mile test for the first mile, but swinging around the upper turn Jockey Ellis sent Brown Bud into command. In the run down the back stretch and around the far turn there was little to choose between the pair.

In the final drive Chance Play felt the 11 pounds he was giving to Brown Bud too much of a disadvantage, yet lost the decision by only a half length. The time was 3:23.

Mrs. Baehr Wins District Tennis Championship

Defeats Miss Lottie Hagenmeyer Two Sets Out of Three in Final Match.

By Davison Obear.

Mrs. Melicent Endicott Baehr retained her title as woman tennis champion of St. Louis by defeating Lottie Hagemeyer in the final round of the District championship at Triple A yesterday afternoon. The match was a three-set affair, Mrs. Baehr winning 6—0, 5—7, 6—2. Mrs. Baehr won her first District title in 1924 and yesterday's victory was her fourth in succession.

In the first set of the singles final Mrs. Baehr played a very consistent game. Her service was very effective while her drives had good speed. She was handicapped somewhat by an injured knee.

The second set was a battle from start to finish. Miss Hagemeyer took advantage of Mrs. Baehr's errors to win the first two games. By playing a steady cross court driving game Miss Hagemeyer gained a 4 to 1 lead and then followed with a 5 to 3 advantage. Mrs. Baehr appeared tired and very much bothered by her injured knee

PITTSBURG WINS TWICE, DRAWING FARTHER AWAY

Robins Victims, 2-1 and 6-0; L. Waner Gets His 200th Hit of Season; Kremer in Form.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 17.—Pittsburg continued its pennant march with a double victory over the Robins today by 2 to 1 and 6 to 0 before 27,000 fans, running the Pirates' consecutive string of triumphs to eleven.

Aldridge had the better of Petty in the first encounter holding the Dodgers runless until the ninth when three hits put over the lone Brooklyn tally. The Buccaneers bunched four hits for two runs in the fifth.

The second game marked the third shutout registered by Ray Kremer in his last four starts. He had blanked the Reds and Phillies and then the Braves got one earned run in his last game prior to today. Kremer gave the Dodgers three hits, one a bunt and only two runners reached second.

Pittsburg put over a run in the first on three hits and added two more in the fourth on Grantham's single, a triple by Harris and Smith's sacrifice fly.

In the fifth inning of the second game, Lloyd Waner made his 200th hit of the season. He is the first rookie to break into baseball and knock out that number of safeties in his initial year. He added a double to his string in the seventh.

Overconfidence May Be One Flaw in Tunney's Makeup in Title Battle, Wray Writes

Champion Is Bigger, Stronger and an Improved Fighter Over Last Year, and in Addition He Has Lost His Fear for Mighty Dempsey Punch.

By John E. Wray
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, millionaire principals in the three-million-dollar fight, set for next Thursday, are ready to do their stuff. Their preparation is over. A few motions may be gone through with for the benefit of a late arriving and somewhat peevish press, or for limbering up. Both believe that further work of serious nature can only harm, and not help their condition.

Both are as fit as they possibly can be made, at least that is their expressed belief.

What others think is something else again. So many views are being hurled around in the news columns and in hotel corridors that the mind is in a maze trying to untangle the different leads. The boys who expert on the situation and who try to name the winner are hopping about from belief to belief, rooting around for pegs on which to hang columns of conjecture. The view has even been expressed that Dempsey and Tunney are both near a breakdown and that their failure to work was the visible result of that.

Tunney Is Better Man.

All of it is just a jest—or should be so taken. To the writer the men seemed entirely normal and, if anything, above their recent normal fighting condition.

Tunney's status may be accepted as beyond question. The eye tells one that he is bigger, brawnier and, in other ways, a better physical man than he was a year ago.

His shoulders seem better muscled and his 193½ pounds of weight are considerably more than he has ever carried so near to the day of

WALTER ECKERSALL MENTIONED FOR JOB OF REFEREEING BOUT

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.

THE latest development as to the probable referee for the Dempsey-Tunney fight has brought to the front the name of Walter Eckersall, former football star of Chicago University and for many years a reporter of fights and football for the Chicago Tribune.

It was said today that Eckersall's name had been presented to the camp advisers of both Tunney and Dempsey for approval and that the commission would approve his selection if the fighters were agreeable.

CHAMPIONS POUND PRUETT AND WILLOUGHBY FOR 18 HITS; HOLM PLAYS THIRD

Slippery Field Helps O'Farrell's Men to Early Lead—Despite Triumph Cardinals Lose Ground in Race as Pirates and Giants Win Double-Headers.

By J. Roy Stockton,

Arthur Reinhart was too good for the poor Phillies yesterday afternoon, and the World Champion Cardinals scored a lopsided shutout victory over Stuffy McInnis' so-called team, 11 to 0. Hubert Pruett, who once basked in the public favor, because he made a business of striking out Babe Ruth, was unable to stop the St. Louis sluggers, and retired with one out in the seventh inning, after he had been pounded for 15 hits and eight runs. The Cards pounded Willoughby for three more runs, running their hit total to 18.

Despite the victory the Cardinals lost ground in the pennant race, the Pirates increasing their lead over the champions to six full games by defeating the Dodgers twice and the Giants stretching their second place margin to a game and a half by taming the Reds in a double-header.

The wet field helped the Cardinals to their early lead over the Phils, but later to show that they didn't need any rubs of the green they gave Pruett a good drubbing.

The Fireworks Start.

Blades opened the second inning with a drive to center which went for three bases when Nixon slipped on the wet turf and Ray scored on Holm's double to left, a fly that fell safe because Hohman slipped. Snyder lined a single over Thompson's head scoring Holm.

In the third inning Hafey tripled against the left field wall, and scored on Bottomley's single to right. Blades flied out and Holm forced Bottomley, but Snyder singled to left, sending Holm to third and Schuble singled to center, scoring Holm.

Pruett went through the fourth, fifth and sixth without further damage, but in the seventh it looked like Cardinal batting practice. Douthit opened with a single to left center and Frisch doubled to left, putting Douthit on third. Hafey singled to left, scoring Douthit and moving Frisch to third and Bottomley crashed a one bagger to center, scoring Frisch. Hafey stopping at second. Blades sacrificed the runners along and Holm singled to center, scoring Hafey and Bottomley.

Willoughby Goes to Rescue.

Manager McInnis took pity on Pruett and called Willoughby to the rescue and after walking Snyder he ended the rally by picking Holm off second and getting Schuble on a fly to Nixon.

Willoughby was given a taste of the Cardinal punch in the eighth, the Champions running their total to 11. With one out Douthit singled to center, Toporcer walked and Hafey doubled to left, scoring Douthit and putting Toporcer on third. Bottomley walked, filling the bases and Blades singled to center, scoring Toporcer and Hafey.

It was the second successive shutout for Reinhart, who blanked the Dodgers with six hits Sept. 12.

Double Plays Help Reinhart.

Three doubleplays helped the southpaw turn back the Phils in the early innings, but he improved as the game progressed and held the Phils to one hit in the last four innings.

In the second inning Wilson opened with a single, but Bottomley grabbed Wrightstone's hot line drive and stepped on the bag, doubling Wilson. Hohman singled to start the third frame, but Frisch started a double play on Cooney's grounder, with Schuble as the middle man.

Reinhart started the twin killing that turned back the foe in the fourth inning and prevented a score, though the bases were filled with nobody out. Sand beat out a slow grounder to Frisch to start the inning and Thompson followed with a single to right. Mokan walked, filling the bases, but after Wilson flied to Douthit, Reinhart grabbed Wrightstone's tap, threw to Snyder, forcing Sand at the plate and Snyder's relay to Bottomley doubled Wrightstone at first.

Reinhart's fine performance again aroused the fans to inquire a contest. He will weigh 188 pounds the day of the fight, which is rather astonishing in view of the fact that Tunney, as a mature fighter several years ago, weighed below 170 pounds. This increase in physique, although taken on in his late twenties, is not in any way reflected in superfluous tissue. It was built on by hard work and painstaking muscular development. For this reason they have referred to Gene as a "synthetic" champion. But his appearance and his work indicate the synthetic is as dangerous as the real.

Wants to Keep Stuff.

Dempsey, too, is bigger and browner and more of the bear than Tunney. He will have about seven pounds weight advantage over Tunney and will not try to enter the ring fine—195 will be about his figure—and he will have all of his vitality stored up.

"I want all my stuff for the night of the fight," Dempsey explained, in answer to complaints that he was not working hard enough.

One of the important features in the coming fight is the debated question, "is Dempsey better or worse than at Philadelphia?" To the writer, there is not the slightest reason to doubt that he is better and more rugged than when he stepped into the ring to meet Tunney the first time.

As to the boxing of the rivals, here again one must commend Tunney for improving himself. Such of his work as the writer saw was a big step ahead of his showing at Stroudsburg one year ago. He seems swifter and more certain in his movements, and appears to have improved greatly in his body attack and defense. His handling of the heavy bag left the impression that he is practicing a left-hand hook to the body—a plan of fighting which differs from his battle at Philadelphia.

There he directed almost all of his efforts to Dempsey's head. Perhaps Gene has found out that hitting Dempsey's head is more wearing on the knuckles than on his opponent. Tunney also is using an overhand right to the head that is snappy and quick. Dempsey will feel it when it lands—as it surely will.

Is Still a Mystery.

Dempsey's boxing is still a mystery. In his workout yesterday he was as easy as ever to hit, but he seemed somewhat faster in moving around. He shows no evidence of being coached to anything new and strange, as indeed it might be foolhardy to attempt. His marksmanship at long range is no better and his defense consists largely in blocking them with his face.

On what one can see, there is little reason to believe that Dempsey will show great improvement as a defensive fighter, as a result of his having fought twice in the last 12 months. But there is some evidence of better co-ordination and it is probable that he will be a bit faster in getting close to Tunney.

As to the mental attitude of the men, Tunney again seems to have the better of it. Tunney outwardly is as placid as Mirror Lake. Absolutely no sign of strain is evident in his work or his conversation. He laughs, jokes and converses about the fight in an impersonal way, almost as if he were not involved.

"I wish he would take the fight more seriously," busy little Jimmy Bronson said, earnestly. "I can't get him to think of the situation as containing any danger for him. You know he answered a reporter, who asked him if he did not think 10 rounds was too short, 'why the 10.' Too much confidence is sometimes bad."

Dempsey Is Restless.

Dempsey is an entirely different animal. He goes restlessly about his big premises. His movements are so abrupt they seem jerky. He is always on the wing and it is hard for reporters to pin him down to the great man's obligation: submitting to interviews. Going at his work he steps quickly to the ring and begins his stuff. No words are wasted in "helloing" to ringsiders and no capers are cut.

He goes through with his half hours' stuff and then as quickly and as abruptly snaps out of the ring and out of sight.

In private he is more relaxed and kids his entourage. Undoubtedly the presence of his wife has greatly helped keep down the restlessness of Dempsey.

The reaction to a talk with Dempsey leaves one deeply impressed with the feeling that he is saturated with the thought and the hope of winning back his title, to such a degree that nothing else matters or interests him. A mighty resolution to get back his laurels occupies his waking hours. One hopes that it ends there. If it invades his sleep, it is "mucho malo" for the punch king.

Three Advantages for Gene.

Thus, again the advantage lies with Tunney, whose slumbers are deep and long, his hired hands report, and who spends his time not in resolving to beat Dempsey, but in figuring the easiest way to do it. "Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown" does not seem to fit Gene's case at all.

Thus in three of the factors that figure to play important parts in the coming contest, the 1927 Tunney will enjoy a decided advantage over the Tunney who fought as a challenger. He is bigger and stronger; he is an improved fighter; and he has lost his fear of the mighty punch that Dempsey wields. If there is a flaw in his makeup, it will be overconfidence.

If there is a flaw in the Dempsey of 1927 it will be the opposite—over-anxiety. For the rest, Dempsey, too, will go into the ring a stronger and better man physically than at Philadelphia; he probably will not box any better than of old, but he should be faster and a mentally sounder man than the harried and almost betrayed champion who stepped into the ring at the Sesqui stadium.

YANKEES RUN TOTAL OF VICTORIES TO 102

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The Yankees drubbed the White Sox twice today by 3 to 2 and 8 to 1 before a crowd of 35,000, marking the 101st and 102nd victories of the year for New York. Shocker vanquished Faber in a mound duel in the first combat. Dugan's single driving Ruth home with what turned out to be the deciding run in the eighth.

Between contests, Earl Combs was given a testimonial by admirers. He banged a homer and two singles in the second tussle.

SECOND GAME OF MUNY SERIES SLATED TODAY

Morgans Will Endeavor to Defeat South Side Chevrolets for Second Straight Victory.

The second of a three-game series to decide the championship in the Municipal Baseball Association will be played by the Morgan Haulers and the South Side Chevrolets at Fairground Park No. 1 this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock.

The Morgans won the first game of the series a week ago, 6 to 3, chiefly due to the excellent pitching of John Hasmer, who allowed only four hits, and he is expected to pitch the second game in an effort to clinch the championship for the Morgans with two straight victories.

Approximately 7,000 fans watched the first game of the series, and an equally large crowd is expected this afternoon. Additional interest was aroused with the announcement from Municipal officials that the winner will meet the leading amateur nine of Cincinnati in an inter-city series.

An admission fee of twenty-five cents will be charged this afternoon.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Modernism Rampant.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.

MODERNISM will be rampant at the great stadium, Soldiers' Field, on fight night. With the latest report of the surveyor, it is now said that the most distant customer, on fight night, will be 1070 feet from the ring. Entirely undiscouraged, the $5 heroes have arranged to take their crystal radio sets and earmuffs to their seats, tune in on one of the four radio broadcasts, and then put the binoculars on the ring. They will then both hear and see the struggle at one-eighth the cost of ringsiders.

Most of the $40 guys will hear nothing and, perhaps, see less than the ingenious fan out on the far-flung concrete crags of the stadium.

Wasn't it Gen. Lee who said that human ingenuity was always equal to human necessity?

Some of Tragedies.

LIFE'S little tragedies are foregathering with some of the comedies. We may mention Bat Nelson, one-time champion of the world, and Oto Floto, the man who uncovered Dempsey.

Nelson with only a little dab representing a nose, a couple of miniature pretzels passing for ears, and a bare subsistance in place of the fortune he once earned as world's title holder, is just the ghost of his former greatness. The only thing apparently that remains to him undiminished or unabated is his power of speech. Bat still starts his sentences on Monday and concludes them on Friday with nobody present.

Who do I pick to win?

Bat weighed the problem thoughtfully, "Say, I like Dempsey too well to tell you. Besides, I'm signed for six articles by a syndicate."

We give you one guess as to which Bat picks.

A great old soul, this scout. When he lost his title, it was not sitting down in his chair, while his seconds tossed a towel in the ring. He was standing groping in the ring center, blind in both eyes, but still feeling out for his foe, who after 40 rounds could not put him down and out.

The referee had to stop it.

Often Counted Out.

THEN there is Otto Floto, discoverer of Dempsey. Here was the case of one big heart "rapping" to the presence of another. Otto 10 years ago wired the Post-Dispatch "Jack Dempsey will be the next world's champion."

And the Sports Editor now confesses that he did not know who Jack Dempsey was, nor did anyone east of the great divide.

Floto has been counted out ever since the Willard fight. Disease overtook him, about that time.

"It's his last fight.

Slacks Win 1st Game of Series

Defeat Cincinnati Team in Muny Contest; to Play Twice This Afternoon.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 17.—Bob Berger's Slack Furnitures, champions of East St. Louis, inaugurated their six-game series with the Holy Family Gyms of this city with a 7-to-1 victory this afternoon.

Crawford pitched for the Slacks and gave 11 hits, but kept them scattered, and held the enemy in check in the pinches, while Threm's offerings were pounded in timely fashion. He got poor support.

A double-header will be played between the same teams here tomorrow, while next Saturday and Sunday the remainder of the games will be played in East St. Louis.

OUTBOARD MOTORBOAT RACES WILL BE HELD ON MERAMEC TODAY

Outboard motorboat skippers from Indiana, Ohio and Chicago, including the record-holder and his runner-up, will compete for the championship of the Meramec River at 2 p. m. today at Fenton under auspices of the Meramec Motorboat Club.

A large parking field has been reserved and hundreds of spectators are expected to attend, without admission fee. About 4000 attended a race of the club Labor day at Arnold's Beach.

Two six-mile and one four-mile race will be held on the half-mile stretch between the two Fenton bridges. The race for eight horsepower outboard motors, like those which raced recently from Chicago to New Orleans, has 15 entries; the race for six horsepower motors has nine entries, and the four-mile race, for four horsepower motors, has seven contestants.

HEAT FORCES ILLINOIS FOOTBALL SQUAD TO PRACTICE AT NIGHT

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Sept. 17.—High temperatures assailed Coach Zuppke's varsity elevens at the University of Illinois today and drove the teams in to the first night practice.

Beneath flood lights, the teams went through a series of signal formations that ended early tonight. At an early morning session, Zuppke sent his linemen into several strenuous blocking sessions, while backs continued to work on punt formations. Toward the close of the morning session a short tackling drill was called.

CARDINALS TRIUMPH OVER PHILS, 11-0

as to why the lanky southpaw has been hiding his light under a bushel all year. Through the months during which Manager O'Farrell was trying to find another starting pitcher to take the place of Rhem, who was handicapped by a sore arm, Reinhart toiled daily in the bullpen or polished the bench.

Haines and Alex Today.

Jess Haines, who lost two games of the Giant series, but who pitched only three innings Thursday, probably will face the Phils in one of the contests of today's double-header. Grover Alexander is sure to work in the other. Ferguson and Ullrich are due for the poor Phils. The first game will start at 1:15 o'clock.

The stands, with only about 5000 spectators, looked sad and sombre after the yelling mobs that attended the Giant series.

The Cardinals bowed to the poor sports who hooted Lester Bell in the final game with New York and Lester was benched yesterday, Wattie Holm going to third.

Wet Grounds Delay Start.

The heavy rain of the morning made the field soggy, the tarpaulin cover having been in its garage. The start of the game was delayed 20 minutes while the diamond was being put in shape.

The outfield was heavy and the fly chasers slipped and stumbled frequently chasing drives. Nixon could have caught Blades' fly in the second inning, had the field been dry, but he slipped in the mud and the ball sailed over his head for a triple. Hohman then skidded chasing Holm's fly and it went for a double.

Hafey's triple, starting the third inning hit the top of the left field bleacher wall, but bounced back into the field.

Cards' Third Double Play.

The Phils filled the bases with nobody out in the fourth inning, but the Cardinals turned their third double play of the game to prevent a score. The runners held their bases on Wilson's short fly to Douthit and Wrightstone then hit into the double play, Reinhart to Snyder to Bottomley.

Frisch retired after the Cards had an 8-run lead and Toporcer finished the game at second.

There was a big cheer when the score board boy posted a big seven as the Reds total in the second game, but it quickly changed to a groan when a bigger eight went up for the Giants.

Bears Hold Their First Scrimmage

Coach Higgins Takes Bearish View of Washington U. Football Squad.

The Washington U. football squad got its first taste of scrimmage on Francis Field yesterday afternoon. Coach Bob Higgins, who opened an intensive training period last Thursday, sent his athletes into an active, though blistering scrimmage.

The results satisfied even Higgins, he indicated, although the Bear coach has made no pretense of being pleased with the condition of the squad. The Bears open their nine-game schedule in St. Louis next Saturday against a husky eleven from Galesburg, Ill., the Lombard College team, and Higgins has intimated that the short training period afforded the Bears under the Conference rules may be expected to count heavily against them.

"All in all, I suppose it was the best first scrimmage I've conducted here," Higgins admitted. "I am now watching very closely the work of my reserves and the condition of the entire squad," he added. "Neither is showing to complete satisfaction."

Secret practice has been ordered during the coming week by Coach Higgins. No scouting has been done by the Washington officials on the Lombard squad, it was explained, and the Bear authorities intend to take precautions that their own formations are not forwarded to Galesburg for use.

No injuries have been reported thus far, but Managers Bruno and Brenner have been kept busy form fitting the heavy brogans during the hot weather. The combination of heat and heavy shoes has made the majority of the squad footsore to some degree. The specially constructed aluminum-soled shoes tried out by the Washington team last year will not be used this season.

SQUAD OF 100 TURNS OUT AT ROOSEVELT HIGH

Interscholastic League Coaches Getting Football Players in Condition for Opening Games, Oct. 22.

Large squads have started practice for the fall football schedule at the five public high schools. The league season opens October 22 at the new stadium.

Coach Lee Carlson at Roosevelt High had the largest turnout of candidates with a squad of 100. Four lettermen have returned from last year's eleven which finished second to Cleveland. Sauselle, "All-Star" quarterback, Savage, a half back, Groepper, an end, and Vandover, a guard, constitute the seasoned material.

Cleveland lost one of its most valuable men when the adoption of the "ten-semester" rule of the Missouri State High School Athletic Association made Joe Mowry, selected on the "All-Star" team, ineligible. The rule permits an athlete to play only nine semesters.

War a Star Kicker.

Mowry who weighed almost 200 pounds, was capable of exceptional distance on his place kicks and in one game last year put the pigskin between the posts from forty and forty-eight yards.

Coach Fenenga has four men from last year's championship eleven back, including Beckmeier, lineman, Thompson, quarter back, and Wilson, center, Braznell and Hayden, reserve linemen last season, have also returned.

Schmuitsky, an end, and Johanningmeier, fullback and captain, are the only veterans at Soldan this season. Coach Cook has a squad of about fifty candidates, however, to try for the vacant positions. He has scheduled several practice games to whip his team into shape. Soldan has an open date Oct. 22, when the league opens, and is seeking an outside game for that date.

To Use Stadium for Practice.

Coach Mike Walker at Central has several valuable lettermen returning but is handicapped at present by an inadequate practice ground. It is understood, however, that Central and Soldan, will be permitted to use the stadium for practice as early as possible.

Schumacher, Chapman and Bohringer, from last year's squad are available for backfield duty again this season, and Weigle Heinrichs, Kostich and Weigle are veteran linemen back this season.

Four lettermen are back at Beaumont. Barnhouse Rost, Mulvihill, and Anastasoff. Forty-five other candidates have reported to Coach Ray Lewis. Beaumont finished at the bottom last year after injuries kept the most valuable men on the team inactive during most of the season. Lewis has been sending his squad through hard workouts despite the heat.

RICKEY BUYS 2 PLAYERS FROM SPRINGFIELD, MO., FOR CARDINAL FARMS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 17.—Harold R. "Chuck" Funk, manager of the Springfield Western Association Club during the past season, has been sold to Danville of the Three I League, president Al G. Eckert announced today. The consideration was not announced. Funk has been rated as the outstanding catcher in the W. A. since joining the Midgets in 1926. He came here from Norfolk of the Virginia League. He was the third leading batter this year in the W. A. circuit, having an average of .350. Johnny Reider, hard-hitting outfielder, also has been sold by the local club to Syracuse of the International League. Reider batted .315 and was runner-up for home run honors this year. He set a home run record here in 1926 when he clouted eight home runs in three straight games. The sale of the two players was arranged through Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals.

SPORT SALAD

by J. C. Kofoed

Business Is Pleasure.

HEN MULLER, on a summer's day,
Went to see the Red Birds play.

While he was quite a sporty guy,
To business Henry had an eye.

Hen made his living selling lids
And straws were due to hit the skids.

September fifteenth was the day
For throwing old straw hats away.

And if a homer won the game
He'd reap a harvest from the same.

When Hafey made a home-run lick
The rooters rose enmasse to Chick.

A straw hat shower then ensued,
And with straw hats the ground was strewed.

And when the Cards were winners found
Hen Muller passed his cards around.

And on those cards the patrons read,
About a hat to fit the head,

And where to go to get the same
At the conclusion of the game.

Too True.

In the recent seven-game series between the Cards and Giants the slump from an average attendance of 26,000 for the three double headers to 12,000 for the single game indicates that St. Louis is first, last and all the time a double-header town.

The management ought to issue rain checks good for a new hat in case of a straw-hat shower any time during the game.

Speaking of showers, we wish to thank the Weatherman for that nice little sprinkle Saturday morning. It sure came in handy.

See where Connie Mack had a fan pinched for riding some of his players. When White Elephants are to be ridden the Mahout himself will ride them.

From the way Babe Ruth pulled away from Lou Gehrig in the stretch it would seem that the Babe had been only teasing.

In Re Grimes.

OLD Grimes is dead, the good old soul,
We ne'er shall see him more;
But Burleigh Grimes our frame still climbs
And that's what makes us sore.

Our pennant progress he retards.
The spit-ball hurling wretch!
He won the rubber from the Cards
And beat 'em in the stretch.

Consolation.

From where we sit it looks as though we will not be worried about writing out those certified checks for series tickets this year.

Still it may not be a bad idea to have a little checking account in the bank in case of emergency.

PIRATES NOW SIX GAMES AHEAD OF THE CARDINALS

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The National League pennant sky seemed brighter for Pittsburg today as the Pirates came out on top in a double tilt with the Robins while the Giants won as many from the Reds. The Corsairs have nursed their sensational victory streak to 11 and show no signs of faltering. Their lead continues at four and one-half games.

Although they won from the Phils, the Cards lost half a game as both Giants and Pirates hopped forward with the double-headers. St. Louis is six games out of first place. The Cubs drew up half a game on the Cards with a twin triumph over the Braves.

The standing:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Pittsburg	87	53	.621
New York	83	58	.589
St. Louis	81	59	.579

DE HART HUBBARD SETS NEW WORLD BROAD JUMP MARK

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—DE HART HUBBARD, Cincinnati Negro athlete and holder of the world's record for the running broad jump, set a new mark when he cleared 26 feet 2¼ inches at a municipal track meet here today. His former mark was 25 feet, 10⅝ inches. This record was made by Hubbard when he was a student at the University of Michigan, several years ago.

Hubbard also equaled the world's record of 9 3-5 seconds for the hundred-yard dash in today's meet, held under the sponsorship of the Public Recreation Commission.

'Miss Syndicate' Wins President's Regatta Trophy

Coolidge Watches From Mayflower as Mrs. Cromwell Pilots Speedboat to Victory.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—While President Coolidge watched from his yacht, the Mayflower, Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell drove Miss Syndicate to victory today in the feature event of the annual Speed Boat Regatta on the Potomac River and won the President's cup for a year.

"Miss Syndicate" took both heats this afternoon, after following "Greenwich Folly," driven by George H. Townsend, across the line in the first heat yesterday. "Greenwich Folly" ranked second in point standing.

For the second straight year, "Miss Okeechobee," owned by Mrs. W. J. Connors, took the only heat for the secretary of the navy cup. She averaged 52.314 miles per hour over the 20 mile course. Secretary Wilbur watched the event from his yacht.

"Miss Syndicate' also won the Dodge Memorial trophy, leading this afternoon as she had in two heats yesterday. "Greenwich Folly" came in second. Neither craft competed with "Miss Okeechobee" for the secretary of the navy cup.

In the first of today's heats for the president's cup, "Miss Syndicate" averaged 52.170 per hour over the 15 mile course, and in the final her speed was 51.235. In the first heat, "Baby Chick," with Bernard Smith at the wheel, placed second with "Sister Sya," driven by Fritzhof Ericson, third. In the final heat, "Greenwich Folly" was second and "Baby Chick" third.

In winning the secretary of the navy cup race, "Miss Okeechobee," driven by Ericson, got away to a perfect start and was never threatened by "Curtiss Wilgold," driven by C. Roy Keys. Rough water kept craft of all classes from making record breaking time, as had been done in three vents yesterday.

but she fought hard and brought the score to 5-all. Miss Hagemeyer followed with splendid baseline shots which gave her two games and the second set, 7—5.

Stronger in Third Set.

Mrs. Baehr was apparently aided by the 10-minute rest which followed to win the first game. Miss Hagemeyer was too steady, however, in the second and third games which she won for a 2 to 1 lead in games. Mrs. Baehr's fast drives finally won the next game after the score reached deuce. Recapitulation: Mrs. Baehr, sets 2, games 17, points 86. Miss Hagemeyer, sets 1, games 9, points 74. Umpire—Madge Grooms. Linesmen—Zita Doyle, Delphine Rauch, Hortense Doyle, Mrs. B. K. Brouster, Mrs. Elda B. Stemmler.

Upset in Doubles.

The women's doubles title was won by Mrs. Anna Lindemann and Virginia Baer, O'Fallon Park players, who defeated Mrs. Melicent Baehr and Lottie Hagemeyer in the final round last Friday. Mrs. Baehr and Miss Hagemeyer were the defending champions. The result was an upset as Mrs. Baehr and Miss Hagemeyer are holders of the Missouri Valley, Missouri State and St. Louis Municipal doubles championships and were expected to win in straight sets.

For the first time since the St. Louis District Tennis Association was organized in 1917 the tournament was run entirely by women officials. The excellent manner in which the play was conducted during the past week has greatly pleased the officers of the local District Association. The success of the tournament is due to the splendid work done by Mrs. B. K. Brouster and the members of her committee as well as the efforts of Amelia Henske, and her staff of umpires and linewomen

AMATEUR GOLF STARS MEET IN TOURNEY TODAY

Manion, Kenney and Others Will Play in 36-Hole Medal Competition Over North Hills Course.

The leading amateur golfers of the district are included in the field which competes today in the North Hills Invitation tournament over the club's west course.

The tournament consists of 36 holes of medal play, including morning and afternoon rounds. Prizes have been offered for the first three places.

The event was arranged to balance the local golfing season by bringing the amateurs together in the fall whereas formerly they met only in the St. Louis district tournament in the spring.

Jimmy Manion, who defeated Clarence Wolf for the district amateur title last May will compete in today's tournament. Other stars are Chris Kenney, Donald Anderson, Dick Bockenkamp and Stuart Stickney, all former State amateur champions. Bill Mertz who has won the Southern Illinois amateur title for the last six years, will also play today. Eddie Held was unable to compete.

BROAD AXE WINS FAIRMOUNT FEATURE; GIDEON PAYS $97.4

V. PETERSON IS SUSPENDED FOR 30-DAY PERIOD

Stewards Hold Him Responsible for T. Root's Spill After Third Race—Punch Costs Latter $200.

By Dent McSkimming.

Yesterday's racing at Fairmount Park proved very eventful. Favorites were beaten, a 50 to 1 shot won the opening race, one untamed animal ran away before the start of the second race, one rider was thrown, two jockeys were fined and one was suspended for 30 days.

In the fifth and feature race, a favorite, Indianapolis, was left at the post; another, Good Shepherd, bolted as he swung into the back stretch in the lead, ran to the outside fence and thus lost so much ground he was easily beaten. The crowd of about 10,000 was treated to a greater share of thrills, some of them pleasant and some quite depressing, than any crowd that has visited the track this season.

Broad Axe, of Mrs. F. J. Uhlein's stable, ridden by Harvey Elston, took the Journal handicap, which had the feature place on the card. The fact that Indianapolis suffered at the start, getting away last, removed one of the outstanding contenders before the running had even started. Good Shepherd's wide run removed the only other serious threat and Broad Axe came on to win a cheap victory.

An Unheralded Winner.

Gideon which paid $97.48 for $2 in winning the opening race had never before won a race. In this respect the 2-year-old gelding was neither better nor worse than the other in the field, for the race was for 2-year-old maidens that had never won.

But Gideon was especially mysterious, or rather his merits unknown, for he had started in only one race prior to yesterday. That was a five and a half furlong race at Fairmount a few days ago. Then he finished eighth in a 10 horse race. There was nothing to indicate that he had concealed in his bones such speed as he displayed yesterday.

He was raced unusually wide in advancing on the leaders at the end of the back stretch and he had to take the long route all the way to get to the front. He was going easily at the end as though he could have gone a longer distance. Vachell was the favorite in this race but he was lucky to finish third.

Root Falls, Peterson Set Down.

Not all of the day's excitement was confined to the finish line. Tommy Root took a dangerous fall at the conclusion of the third race when his horse, Dry Moon slipped in being pulled up.

Dry Moon fell on his side and Root dug his nose in the mud. Neither horse nor rider was hurt but Root presented a ludicrous appearance as he plodded back to the judges' stand to be weighed in.

Peterson's Bad Day.

Peterson was the jockey who was fined $50 and he was also the young man who received a suspension of 30 days. His fine was assessed because of his actions following the fifth race on Friday when he indicated that he disagreed with the decision of the placing judges.

His suspension resulted from his bumping of Tommy Root, on Dry Moon at the conclusion of the third race. Root was thrown as his horse slipped and fell.

Peterson and Root apparently had worked up something of a serious dislike for each other. It culminated in an exchange of punches in the jockey's quarters after the third race. The stewards followed Root's right cross to Peterson's head with a left hook to the chin, extracting $200 from Tommy's pay check.

Peterson and Lee Hardy each had three winners. Hardy's were Gale, in the third; Azure in the fourth, and Post Mistress in the sixth. Peterson won with Gideon, the long shot, Sir Peter in the seventh and Tanis in the eighth.

There was another bit of rodeo before the start of the second race when Speedwell, wild as if he had just been brought in from the plains, leaped over the barrier and ran a half mile before being controlled. Even then he had sufficient stamina to keep well up with the leaders in the actual race.

Entry Not to Be Accepted.

The event was won by Poland, ridden by Meyer. Speedwell made such a bad impression by his behavior that his entry henceforth will not be accepted at the Fairmount track.

Peterson Earns $348.

While Lee Hardy and Tommy Root come more into prominence as the riders of winners, V. Peterson took down the richest pay check for the past week. Peterson's earnings for the six days riding concluded yesterday amounted to $348. Hardy earned $336, Root's check called for $330, M. Meyer's $297 and Philpot's $243.

Misstep Takes Main Event at Washington Park

Flat Iron Sets Track Record; Racing Shifts to Hawthorne Monday.

By the Associated Press.

HOMEWOOD, Ill., Sept. 17.—A crowd of 15,000 fans turned out for the final day at Washington Park this afternoon, bringing to a close a successful fall meeting. Monday the scene moves back to Hawthorne for an 18-day fall meeting.

The feature of today's program was the fifth race, the Great Western Handicap, with $5000 in added money. Eleven 2-year-olds went to the post for a six furlongs sprint in this race. Misstep, from the Lemar Stock Farm, ridden by J. Smith, was the victor. Easter Stockings, coupled with Billy as the Audley Farm Stable entry, finished second, and Mickey, in the third place.

The winner took the lead at the first quarter and was an easy victor by two lengths. Easter Stockings came from far back to take place money by one length. The race was worth $4050 net to the owner of the winner, and Misstep paid $5.16 in the mutuels. His time was 1:12 3-5, and it was Jockey Smith's second victory of the day.

Common Denominator Wins.

Common Denominator, with J. Smith up, made every post a winning one in the first at six furlongs, and won handily with two lengths to spare. Dolly Bay took second money by a nose over Brunswick.

Everlasting, Russell up, was the winner by two lengths in the second, a five and one-half furlongs sprint for 2-year-olds, after setting the pace from the first quarter. Birdwood finished second by a head and Chicory was third throughout.

Jockey Russell scored another victory in the third at a mile and an eighth when he brought Babe K. across the wire by two lengths after leading all the way. Moses came in second two lengths back. Escarra saved the short end of the purse.

Flat Iron Victor.

Flat Iron, allotted top weight at 126 pounds and ridden by Chiavetta, won the fourth, a handicap at six furlongs, over Hot Time and lowered the track record to 1:11 3-5. Little Cyn finished third. Hot Time led from the quarter, Flat Iron challenged in the stretch and they raced neck and neck to a driving finish with Flat Iron winning by a head.

Big Sweep, Peternel up, won the sixth, the $1500 May and Malone purse, at a mile and a sixteenth, by half length after setting the pace from the start. Spanish Lay finished second and Profiteer third.

MARTY McMANUS HITS HOMER WITH THREE ON

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Detroit hit savagely today and won both ends of a double-header from Boston, 8 to 4 and 11 to 5. The Tigers made 12 and 19 hits, respectively, in the two games, in the third inning of the opening game with the bases full and two out. Marty McManus hit a home run over the left field fence off McFayden.

*Field.

Gideon, showing fine speed in the going, was kept far out in the track when racing into the lead and, taking a good advantage, held it gamely to the end. Rainstorm moved up fast on the stretch turn, swerved in sharply when a furlong out, and, outstaying Vachell, could not reach the leader. Vachell made up ground to the stretch, where he held on well. Knave of Clubs began well and had no excuses. Dancing finished fast. Bright Plume showed speed to the stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid: Gideon, win $97.48, place $23.40, show $13.74; Rainstorm, place $9.46, show $7.02; Vachell, show $6.20.

SECOND RACE—$1000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs—Start fair, won handily; place driving. Went to post ( ) at post 6 minutes. Winner b. g. 6 by Polymelian-J. May. Trainer, J. G. Brown. Time, :23 4-5; :47 4-5; 1:14. Value to winner, $700, $221, $1 14.

Yoohoo	99	1	6	6	6	7	7	P. Francis	34.71

Poland, much the best and last home in the going, saved ground racing into lead early and after drawing clear after three furlongs was never in danger. Marjory Seth, always in closest pursuit, made a meek challenge when a furlong out but was faltering badly at end. Miss Margie was hard ridden throughout. Kathe finished fairly well. Keeper showed nothing. Speedwell ran away a half-mile before start.

$2 mutuels paid: Poland, win $4.60, place $3.08, show $2.92; Marjory Seth, place $3.14, show $2.70; Miss Margie, show $2.98.

THIRD RACE—$1000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, 1 mile: Start good; won easily; place driving. Went to post, 3:03. At post, 1 minute. Winner, ch. g., 3, by Wildair-Hortienza. Trainer, R. J. Gilmore. Time, :24 3-5, :49, 1:15, 1:42. Value to winners, $700, $200, $100.

Gale, lucky to get through and save much ground on the first turn, was strongly restrained while making the pace. Leisurely to the stretch, where he responded to rousing, came away fast. Queen Clara bore out badly first turn, forced the pace under steady restraint, but faltered badly on the stretch. Dry Moon raced close up to the stretch, where, despite tiring, he held Lord Valentine safe. Latter had no excuse. Sweep Net was forced very wide first turn and tired after a half mile.

$2 mutuels paid: Gale, win $21.88, place $7.44, show $5.28; Queen Clara, place $3.10, show $2.64; Dry Moon, show $4.38.

FOURTH RACE—$1000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, 1 mile: Start good; won easily; place driving. Went to post, 3:33. At post, 3 minutes. Winner, ch. f., 3, by Star Hawk-Blue Deep. Trainer, L. Gentry. Time, :24 3-5, :49, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 3-5. Value to winner, $700, $200, $100.

Brown Silk	95	4	8	8	8	8	8	M. Meyer	8.89

Azure, much the best but somewhat hustled to draw clear in the first half-mile, continued to the stretch and won out well in hand. Margie K, under hustling tactics throughout, saved ground late turns and although bumping Spanish Star, outgamed latter in the drive. Latter raced with good speed from the start and finished fairly well under a weak ride. Colonel Winn began driving after five furlongs. Louisville and Nashville raced poorly. Brown Silk began slowly and also gave a dull effort.

$2 mutuels paid: Azure, win $5.26, place $3.58, show $2.78; Margie K, place $8.78, show $4.70; Spanish Star, show $3.96.

FIFTH RACE—$1200, the Journal Handicap, 3-year-olds and up, one mile and one-sixteenth: Start bad; won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:03; at post 1 minute. Winner, br. c. 4, by Ballot-Golden Heart. Trainer, D. J. Morris. Time, :24 2-5, :48 4-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 2-5. Value to winners: $850, $225, $125.

Good Shepherd	106	6	7	5	4[1]	4[4]	5	T. Root	2.50

Broad Axe, kept well up from the start, raced slowly as Good Shepherd ran out and taking the best going last three furlongs, easily held his position safe. Harass, always in closest pursuit, made a game finish, conquering Indianapolis, latter, unprepared for the start, was a big distance of ground and held on well in the drive. Wooldridge badly handled Good Shepherd with th estart and showed nothing. Good Shepherd bothered at the start, recovered quickly and when taking a long lead, bolted to the outside fence and when without further chance was eased.

$2 mutuels paid: Broad Axe, win $17.68, place $9.16, show $3.84; Harass, place $7.22, show $4.06; Indianapolis, show $2.80.

SIXTH RACE—$10000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs—Start bad, won easily; place driving. Went to post, 4:35; at post 1 minute. Winner, ch. f., 4 by Master Robert-Dispatch. Trainer, C. W. Hall. Time, :24, :48, 1:14 2-5. Value to winners, $700, $221, $114.

Max Brick	110	1	7	7	7	6[2]	6	N. Burger	5.81
The Runt	105	2	3	6[1]	6	7	7	M. Meyer	8.45

Post Mistress, away in motion, raced into a good lead at once and, holding on in determined fashion, won out with speed in reserve. Banter began slowly, suffered from crowding soon after the start and, after moving up fast when clear, tired in the last sixteenth. Twinkling saved much ground in the stretch. Word of Honor was never wide and finished well. Red Sublette tired badly. Max Brick was carried to the outside fence when the Runt bolted, leaving the back stretch.

Post Mistress, win $2.92, place $3.42, show $2.96; Banter, place $2.76, show $2.68; Twinkling, show $6.06.

SEVENTH RACE—$1000 allowance, "The Sparta," 3-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs. Start good, won driving, place same. Went to post 5:07, at post 1 minute. Winner, br h 5 by Panicines-Souvenir. Trainer, M. Goldblatt. Time, :23 2-5, :47 1-5, 1:15 1-5. Value to winners, $700, $263, $142.

Mekness	105	5	3	3[4]	3[1]	5	5	R. Whitaker	2.76

Sir Peter, under superb handling, followed the pace maker under steady restraint, benefited by the firmest going in the stretch, made a courageous finish to wear down Retort in the last 20 yards. Latter hustled into lead with saving of ground help on well under weak handling in the drive. Mill Car came from far back around the stretch turn but was tiring at the end. Rondelle had no mishaps. Mekness retired fast after the first quarter.

$2 mutuels paid: Sir Peter, win $13.42, place $5.74, show $3.92; Retort, place $4.58, show $2.88; Amilcar, show $3.10.

Tannist, away slowly, saved much ground when being rushed into the lead in first quarter, raced under restraint next half mile and under a rousing ride held his opposition save in the stretch. Erla Lee, II taken back after a first quarter, came on again gamely on the inside last three furlongs. Forbearance also finished well. Bond Maid began tiring after seven furlongs. Mary B. faltered badly after racing well to the stretch. Norseman was outrun.

$2 mutuels paid: Tannist, win $27.66, place $11.22, show $7.36; Erla Lee II, place $4.36, show $3.56; Forbearance, show $4.90.

M'BRIDE FACES GRID SEASON WITH ONLY TWO FORMER REGULARS

McBride High School's football team, joint runnersup with St. Louis High last season in the Preparatory League, face the coming season with but two regulars Captain O'Connor and Randazzo, tackles, and only one sub, Chapman, back in harness.

About 50 candidates are reporting for practice daily despite the heat of the past week. Out of this squad, which is for the most part extremely light, "Toddy" Kamp hopes to develop five strong linemen and three speedy backs in time for McBride's opening league game Oct. 12 with the C. B. C. aggregation from Hi Pointe.

PITCHER PLITT SOLD BY ROBINS TO GIANTS OVER WAIVER ROUTE

PITTSBURG, Sept. 17.—Sale of Normall Pitt, Brooklyn pitcher, to the New York Giants over the waiver route was announced today by the Brooklyn management.

"BUDDY" SAMPLE, WEBSTER ATHLETE, ENTERS IOWA U.

"Buddy" Sample, who won national fame as the "one-man track team" of Webster Groves High School, has entered the University of Iowa, the Post-Dispatch learned from relatives of Sample yesterday.

It is understood that Sample will devote most of his spare time to training for track and field events, but will also go out for the football team.

Sample had been reported as intending to enter the University of Southern California, but seems to have made a last-minute choice in favor of the midwestern school.

"Buddy" was the only Webster Groves High School entrant in several meets and frequently scored more points for his school than the total of teams including four or five men. He was usually at his best in the shot put.

New Rule Regarding Passing Will Make Football More Spectacular, Writes Warner

Clever Criscross Plays, Heretofore Seldom Attempted Because of Danger of Losing Ball, Will Be Developed by Coaches, Warner Asserts.

By Glenn S. Warner,
Coach of Stanford University.
(Copyright 1927.)

PALO ALTO, Sept. 17.—It is not likely in view of all the experimenting that has been done by the American college coaches in the past, that we will see very much if any Rugby passing by players, who have crossed the line of scrimmage and are about to be tackled, as in the English game. Such passing would detract from the ball carrier's effort to gain every possible inch of ground and would necessitate having some player or players following him instead of interfering for him.

We will, however, likely see quite a number of lateral passes made behind the line, ball carriers faking a line play and then turning and passing the ball to a player going around the end, and runs aimed inside the defensive ends with one player rushing wide and in a position to receive a lateral pass from the runner when the end is drawn in to stop the threatened run inside of him. On the latter type of play, the lateral pass very likely will be of the option variety, the first runner hanging onto the ball if he sees he can gain, but tossing it to the blocking back if he thinks he himself is going to be stopped.

There is bound to be an important psychological effect if Rugby passing is introduced. A player who is carrying the ball with the option of making a lateral pass to a teammate providing he figures he is going to be tackled must necessarily have his mind occupied with two methods of play, and he must also be sure that the player to whom he may pass the ball is uncovered and in a proper position to receive the pass. If there is to be no lateral pass all the runner has to do is to concentrate upon the one idea of gaining every bit of ground he can and, therefore, he will run harder than if he has the lateral pass option in his mind. Coaches must consider this angle and not try to use the lateral pass to such an extent that their backs lose their hard running and driving power in their runs.

Two Chances in Open Field.

There are only two real chances in my opinion, to use the lateral pass in the open field in a practical way. These chances are likely to occur in handling and running back punts and in returning kick off. Until recent years it was customary and a standard method of defensive play to have two men about 30 yards back when the offensive team was expected to punt. This was for the purpose of being able to cover more ground and also for the purpose of having a man to back up the punt catcher and watch out for a fumble. In later years it has become rather common to have only the one safety man back on punts so as to better defend against forward passes on punt formation and because of the growing tendency to let punted balls hit the ground with no attempt by the safety man to handle them. With the danger of losing the ball on fumbles or incompletions of the lateral passes removed it will probably develop that the old method of having two safety men instead of one when the opponents are going to punt will come back into use. The extra man can watch out for a fumble, for it will still be rather disastrous for a punt catcher to fumble if the opponents recover the ball even though they cannot run with it. The extra man will be playing somewhat behind the punt catcher and if there is no fumble and the punt handler starts his fun, the man behind him will be following and in a very favorable position to receive a lateral pass when the ball carrier gets as far as he himself can. The opposing ends may be right upon the handler of the punt when he catches it and he may immediately pass to the man behind or to the side of him without trying to himself advance the ball. This will place a further burden upon the ends and will be likely to result in some very pretty plays in returning punts. The run back has always been one of the most spectacular plays in football.

Will Develop Game.

On returning kickoffs there will be an excellent opportunity to make use of the lateral or backward pass because on this play the ball is usually secured by the receiving side sometime before the kicking side can get down the field and the player catching the kickoff has time to advance the ball a considerable distance before the opponents are upon him. This will give plenty of opportunity for his teammates to maneuver into position and some clever plays to be developed involving the lateral pass especially criscross plays, simple necessitating a backward pass handed to another player. We have seen such plays worked for very long gains heretofore but they are rather seldom attempted because of the danger of losing the ball by a fumble. Now that this danger is removed there will surely be rather frequent use made of the crisscross play on the return of the kickoff.

On the whole it would seem that the next rule effecting lateral and backward passing is going to encourage some interesting experimenting by the coaches and is bound to result in further opening up the game and making it more spectacular.

Lexington Meet Opens Tomorrow

More Than $150,000 in Purses Will Be Distributed for Harness Events.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 17. — Grand Circuit racing opens here tomorrow and continuing until Sept. 30 with a purse value of more than $150,000, to be distributed to the horsemen during the meeting.

The program will be headed with the Hambletonian Stake for approximately $60,000, being the largest purse ever raced for in Kentucky. The Kentucky Derby, which is given each year for a purse of $50,000, now takes second place in the size of purses.

At least seven three-year-olds will face the starter in the Hambletonian event. Other big events to be given are the Kentucky Futurity for 3-year-olds for $14,000, the Futurity, for 2-year-olds, for $7000, the Free-for-All-Trot, for $5000, and The Transylvanian, for $6000.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE MADE AGAINST BOXER AND FIGHT PROMOTER

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 17.—A complaint charging manslaughter was issued here today against A. W. Deweese, fight promoter, and James Campbell, whose ring name is Jimmy Blake, amateur boxer, in connection with the death of Campbell's opponent, Harold Williams, 17, who lost his life in a boxing match for a $2 purse. Williams collapsed in the first round of the bout at Bell, a suburb, and died in a hospital from a brain hemorrhage.

At an inquest yesterday it was testified that Deweese promoted the fight without a license.

NATIONAL B. B. TOURNEY FIRST ROUND RESULTS

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Sept. 17.—McCalls of Dayton, and Robbins and Myers of Springfield, played the feature game in the opening round of the National Baseball Federation tournament here today, the game going 11 innings before Dayton won 11 to 10.

Ravenna, an Akron suburban entry, upset the dope by defeating the Michigan Central Railroad nine of Detroit, 6 to 3, in a contest which was halted by darkness.

The defending champions, the Indianapolis Power & Light Company, had things all their way defeating Scranton, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, 10 to 2.

The Call of the Outdoors

By ALEC MERMOD

THERE seems to be some uncertainty regarding the law concerning the use of seines, and I have been requested to state just when and where seines may be used, size of mesh, etc.

Our game and fish laws are plain enough, but most persons glance through the law hastily and do not fully digest the contents.

Laws Are Plain Enough.

Section 5623 governs the use of seines, hoop nets and trammel nets, and is substantially as follows:

"The use of seines, hoopnets and trammel nets, with a mesh not smaller than two inches, is permitted in the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers and in the Osage River a distance of 112 miles up-stream from the mouth of the Osage, and in the Gasconade River 98 miles up-stream from the mouth of the Gasconade, during the months of January, February, March, June, July, August, September, October, November and December of each year."

In other words, seines of the proper size mesh may be used in the streams mentioned above in every month except April and May.

"It is lawful for any person living along the banks of any inland stream known as unnavigable, or anyone having the permission of the said land owner to take fish out of these streams with the use of seines or nets with a mesh not smaller than two-inch during the months of June, July August, September and October of each year, provided that the fish taken are for the consumption of the person taking them, and are not to be sold on the market."

There is another proviso which should be noted with care, and that is, no seine or net shall be operated within 300 yards of the mouth of any stream or slough emptying into the Mississippi or Missouri Rivers.

The restrictions of this (5623) section do not apply to fish taken from private ponds lying wholly on the premises of the owner or occupant.

Furthermore, residents may take fish with seines as mentioned above, for personal consumption from waters caused by overflow.

Fishing in the Gasconade has been unusually good this summer, and last week two men took 32 in three days, one small mouth weighed 3½ pounds and there were six that weighed 1½ pounds each, most of these fish being taken with fly and spinner.

Idaho as a Big Game State.

About a month ago I received a letter from Idaho asking why I had made no mention of that state when writing about hunting. I answered that I had not written about the possibilities of his state because I had never been within it's boundaries, and knew nothing about it from personal experience. I have since obtained some facts about Idaho that may prove of interest to our readers, especially to those who are planning a big game hunt this fall.

Idaho is one of the three states that has an open season on mountain goat, and this year there is a 10-day open season on Big Horn mountain sheep.

From what I have learned, Idaho is one of the best states in the Union for big game, and in some parts of the state pheasants are very abundant, while waterfowl are there by countless thousands.

A special license of $50 is required for sheep, while the regular non-resident hunting license for all other game is $50.

Mountain sheep may be taken only in two counties (Valley and Lemhi) from Oct. 15 till Oct. 25. The open season on other game opens Oct. 1.

Trout fishing in the Secesh River, the South Fork of the Salmon and East fork cannot be excellent in any part of the U. S. These streams contain native brook, cutthroat and dolly vardon, while in the lakes nearby there are plenty of rainbow and land-locked salmon.

K.O. Frisbie Enters Wawa College

—And Becomes Boxing Instructor to Co-Eds

No. 24—A Fighter's Letters to His Manager

By Walter Davenport.

DEAR PATSY:

As you said in your letter, very funny things happen, and if you would of said to me that the next thing I would be doing would be a boxing instructor in the University of Wawa here, I would of said you were goofy.

But I am. I was to quit being the bodyguard for Ralph Alps yesterday when I come with him here to the University of Wawa as they call it and where he is going to play football for what he calls his new alma matter this year as fixed up by his old man who owns a lot of railroads and give the university a lot of dough for new dormitories provided they would let Ralph live in them for a while.

Ralph has been to so many colleges that practically all of them have got new dormitories from his old man although it does not seem to do much good. If this keeps up they say old man Alps will have to start a flock of colleges of his own so that Ralph will have somewhere to play football because there ain't many more left.

Anyway the minute we got here to Wawa Ralph looked up the coach who is the fellow who has a lot of friends who play football for him. This coach is a fellow by the name of Hep Crispin and he is one of the biggest coaches in the country. He is been a coach in as many colleges as Ralph Alps has played football in and everybody wants him because wherever he goes he takes his best football players with him, which makes him a lot of dough.

Frisbie Meets the Coach.

"HEP," said Ralph, "shake hands with K. O. Frisbie who is been my bodyguard. He is the next champion heavyweight of the world if he can get any of Tex Rickard's boys to stand still long enough to be smacked on the chin."

"I am pleased to meet you, Mr. Frisbie," said Crispin. "What kind of condition is Ralphie here in?"

"He is in fine condition," I said, "and will probably play a fine game for you because I have seen to it that he is in bed every night and not drinking as much."

"How do you know he is been in bed every night and not drinking as much?" said Crispin.

"Well," I said, "old Mr. Alps his father told me to see to it and I did so."

"Is that so, Ralph?" said Crispin.

"Yes," said Ralph. "He is had me in bed every night before midnight for two nights running now and I ain't had a drink since noon today."

"Listen," said Crispin to me, "what do you say to hanging up your hat right here at Wawa for the season. We need a trainer for the football team and a boxing coach and anybody who can do what you did with a boy like Ralph Alps can make both jobs look like bedtime stories. What do you say."

"I will be busy fighting all winter," I said. "The public is crazy to see boys like me fight because anybody with the sock I got is a popular boy."

"Listen," he said, "this job will not interfere with the fighting you will do. It will help you. I will see that you get a hundred bucks a week, which is only part of what you can take off us. We will fix you up with a house so that you can rent rooms to the college boys at ten bucks a week, with heat and light extra, like we do for the big football players who have to earn their way through college, like my backfield I brought here with me from Arkansas. Whenever you have a fight you can go to it wherever it is and the beauty of this job will be that you will always be in training for it because you will have a lot of football players and college students to box with and some of them would make good boxing partners."

Crispin Gets Confidential.

WELL, Patsy, I did not want to be narrow minded, as they say, so I said I would and asked Mr. Crispin to show me the house I would have so that I could put up a sign to let the college boys know that I had rooms to rent.

"Listen, Mr. Frisbie," said Mr. Chrispin, who seems to me to be a fine fellow with a good head on his shoulders, "there are a few things I do not care to talk about in front of Ralph Alps. You see, he is only a college boy, after all.

One of the reasons is this: There are a lot of things college boys will buy if only the big football players have them, and as you are in the fight game and a good business man, you will understand.

"A lot of clothing and sporting goods stores in the city are willing to do business with college boys through big men like football players who are earning their way through college. For instints, take McGlone, who played fullback for me. McGlone isn't got any more money than a sailor who has just had 10 days shore leave, which isn't so bad as it sounds, because McGlone is wild enough without any money and if he had some he would always be playing fullback whether there was a football game or not, which isn't so good. Still in all, McGlone is got to have a little jack once and a while, and this is how we do it.

"A big sporting goods store or cigarette factory comes to me and says they want somebody to be their agent in college. I tell them not to worry, but wait and hear from me. I tell McGlone he can be the agent, but he is got to split the profits with me for getting him the job which he does or he don't get the job. So the sporting goods people or cigarette factory makes me a special price and I pass the goods on to McGlone at a price which makes sure it will not got crossed by him and he pays me after he sells his stuff to the college boys. That way everybody gets a piece of change which mounts up in the long run."

"What do you want me to sell?" I said.

Girls Take Up Boxing.

"WELL," said Mr. Crispin, "you will be boxing instructor and you will sell boxing trunks and shoes and gloves and bags and so forth. The only thing is you ought to buy them from me."

"I can do letter by buying them from the store myself," I said.

"Sure you can," he said. "The only thing is do you want this soft job I am handing you or don't you? I am a very funny fellow and I will insist that we have strict order around here, which means that people I hire do what I say, including the team. Will you buy your boxing supplies from me or don't you want to work here for dear old Wawa?"

"Maybe you are right," I said.

So I am trainer and boxing professor here at the University of Wawa which has college boys and girls of both sexes, much to my surprise. Already a big crowd of the Wawa girls have been to see me, asking me to teach them boxing, too, and business is pretty good because I told them they only a boy's hand tied up in a mitten but it is something else again to let a bunch of college boys sharpen their cleats on your face. Don't say I did not warn you that is all.

Stick to being boxing professor and wait until you see the next graduating class with both boys and girls going out into the world with cauliflower ears. Maybe I am getting old but it seems to me that things ain't what they used to be.

Today the colleges are full up with boys and girls who look like prizefighters used to look and the ring is crowded with boys who look like they didn't have anything on their minds but the next fraternity dance. If you want to hear rough language these days you got to hang around the campus a few minutes while all you can hear at Madison Square Garden is Shakspeare and a dame named Edna Vincent Millay.

Anyway keep in touch with me you dirty old tough thing. I might have some fighting that has to be done.

Your Manager Patsy.

HARVEY (K. O.) FRISBIE, 17-year-old chauffeur joins the boxing stable of Patsy O'Brien, hard-boiled but human prize-fight manager. He craves action with a headliner. After watching the boy polish off against several tough second-raters, O'Brien secures Frisbie a summer job as lifesaver at fashionable Belgravia Beach. The beach season is culminated by Harvey being offered a job as personal chaperone to Ralph Alps, known as the hurdling half-wit, a spite boy who takes his drinking seriously. Old Man Alps asks Frisbie to follow Ralph around and keep him out of as much trouble as possible. Harvey takes the job.

ALREADY A BIG CROWD OF THE WAWA GIRLS HAVE BEEN TO SEE ME ASKING ME TO TEACH THEM BOXING

"Beware," Says Patsy.

DEAR FRISBIE: Every once in a while I begin to think maybe you don't need a manager but a board of directors. Also now and then I get to thinking maybe you ain't just a bad accident on logs after all but a big business who will be quoted on the stock exchange in time.

I am so used to giving advice to boys I am manager of that I do it no matter how little attention they pay to it so I will say don't forget that I told you not to pay any attention to those college football players if they ask you to line up against them.

I know you can take it if it is

DETROIT NINE BEATS CINCINNATI AMATEURS

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17.—The Kennedy team of Detroit defeated the Commeios of Cincinnati, 7 to 4, in the first game of their championship series in the national amateur baseball tournament here today.

The teams, survivors of more than a score of district champions, will play the finals of the three-game series tomorrow. If Cincinnati takes the first contest, evening the count, a double-header will be necessitated to decide the winner.

Cincinnati won the tournament last year.

Interclub Tennis Final Today for Werner Trophy

Ferris Club Team, Winners a Year Ago, to Meet Forest Park Players.

The interclub tennis tournament for the Werner cup will be completed this afternoon when the division winners meet in the final match of the season. There were two divisions this year, one among public park clubs and one consisting of four private club teams. The Forest Park team will oppose the Ferris Tennis Club players in the deciding match in Forest Park, starting at 2 p. m.

Under the leadership of Adolph Frank, the Forest Park Tennis Club team defeated nine other park teams. Among those who participated in matches for the Forest Park Club were Sidney Smith, Herbert Weinstock, Joe Smith, Joyce Portnoy, Arthur Rosenfeld, Walter Finger and Adolph Frank.

Wray Brown, leading St. Louis tennis player, is capitain of the Ferris team. This team defeated the Triple A. Woodlawn Country Club and St. Louis Country Club players. In addition to Brown, the Ferris team includes Teddy Eggmann, Cornell University net captain, Clark Smith, Missouri State junior champion; Robert Norton, former interscholastic champion; William Bascom, junior star, and Jake Lynn, Southern Methodist University player.

The Werner Cup for interclub play in the St. Louis district was presented in 1924 by Joseph L. Werner, former Princeton University tennis captain. Triple A won the play-off in 1924 and 1925, while the Ferris Tennis Club team captured the honors last year.

Play this afternoon will consist of three singles and two doubles contests. In singles Wray Brown, Ferris, will probably oppose Sidney Smith, Forest Park. Robert Norton is expected to meet Herbert Weinstock in another singles match, with Teddy Eggmann opposing Joseph Smith in the other. The doubles lineups have not been announced.

Capablanca Loses.

Ladies and Maids For Court of Veiled Prophet Announced

Virtually All of Season's Debutantes Accept Invitations — Old Scepter to Be Used Last Time This Year.

ARRANGEMENTS for the annual ball, Oct. 3, in honor of that much-pampered personage, the Veiled Prophet, are moving apace this season, so much so that at this unusually early date acceptance of his royal commands to the maids and matrons of honor have been received, and the great question of the feminine personnel of this years' court is answered today. The inability of a few of the maids to respond favorably to his dictates by reason of illness or unavoidable absence from the city has shortened the list of those young women somewhat, yet it still contains most of the debutantes, as is the custom; some of the college girls who have remained at home until after the great occasion, and a few who will pause to courtesy to his majesty and then depart for a year of serious pursuit before joining the gay ranks of the debutantes.

An interesting story has been revealed concerning the scepter used in the Queen's coronation ceremony. It consisted of little more than a gilded wand until five years ago, when the Prophet, for reasons best known to himself, had goldsmiths fashion a jeweled staff (the photograph of which appears elsewhere on this page), heavily encrusted in rubies, and filagreed. Upon its handle appear the names of the four young women who have carried it with sovereign power, with a space for the next Queen's name, to be added after her coronation. Then it will be taken by courtiers of the court and placed in his majesty's treasure chest, to be kept for posterity. Next year, at the golden jubilee of his first appearance, the kindly King of St. Louis' make-believe kingdom has decreed that a new scepter shall be fashioned, still of gold, for that, after all, is the metal of most court jewelry, but studded with diamonds, as befitting that occasion.

Below is published the entire list of matrons—"ladies" of honor, as his majesty now has dictated—and the maids from which the white-bearded ruler has selected his 1927 Queen.

Thomas-Dimmock Wedding Tomorrow

A WEDDING of unusual interest in St. Louis is that of Mrs. Marian Winstead Thomas of St. Louis and Marion Dimmock of New York, which will take place tomorrow in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of that city. The arrangements are to be simple because of the recent death of the bride's father, the late George W. Winstead, with whom she made her home at the Buckingham hotel. Her mother, who died several years ago, before her marriage was Miss Caroline Scott. There will be no attendants, and after a wedding trip Mr. Dimmock and his bride will make their home on East Fifty-third street, New York.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Mary Institute and Vassar College, and later studied journalism at Columbia University in New York. She is a great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus J. Lackland, pioneer St. Louisans, and is a cousin of Edgar Lackland Taylor and the late Rufus Lackland Taylor. Her father came to St. Louis from Dresden, Tenn., where he was at one time in the race for the governorship, and practiced law in St. Louis.

Parties and Dances For Debutantes Of Early Season

Miss Julia Wells, Miss Janet Shields and Miss Frances Wilson Among Those Who Will Make Bows.

AS PLANS for the social season progress, new dates for debut parties are announced and today brings an interesting list.

Two affairs for Miss Julia Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Wells of 53 Kingsbury place, have been announced. She will make her bow at a dinner dance to be given Saturday night, Oct. 22, at the St. Louis Country Club, by her parents, and will share honors with Miss Janet Shields, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Shields at a luncheon at the same club Oct. 3, when the hostess will be Mrs. J. Clark Streett. Mrs. Streett will give a similar party at the Country Club Oct. 12 for Miss Frances Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham Wilson Jr.; Miss Mary Brooks Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Holmes and Miss Nancy Semple, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Humphrey Semple Wednesday, Oct. 13. Miss Florence Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McK. Jones of the McKnight road, will be presented to society at a tea Friday, Oct. 7, and again at a dinner dance at the St. Louis Country Club Saturday evening, Nov. 12.

Miss Virginia Hemenway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hemenway of 35 Kingsbury place, has chosen Tuesday, Oct. 18, as the date of a debut tea, to be given at their home from 4 to 6 o'clock. Miss Hope Skillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Skillman of Hotel Chase, will make her bow at a tea to be given by her mother Tuesday, Oct. 25, and the following day, Oct. 26. Mrs. Frank U. Hammett of 6331 Pershing avenue, will give a similar affair to introduce her daughter, Miss Celeste.

A luncheon has been arranged by Mrs. John Pierre Cabanne for her niece, Miss Mary Ambrose Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sheppard Smith Nov. 9. Miss Smith will make her debut at a tea at the Smith home Thursday, Oct. 20. The first party for Miss Kathleen Sheldon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Sheldon of 14 Kingsbury place, will be a tea the afternoon of Nov. 1, and the second a dinner dance which her parents will give for her at the St. Louis Country Club Dec. 29.

Princeton Triangle Club To Give Play Dec. 28

WITH the Christmas holidays still three months away, and the social season scarcely begun, the announcement came yesterday from Princeton University of the return to St. Louis of its Triangle Club the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 28 for the annual musical play. The name of the production and other details have not been announced, but arrangements for the entertainment of the club are being made.

The men will arrive the morning of the performance, to be given at the Odeon, and at noon Robert Burkham will be host at a stag luncheon for them at the Racquet Club. Mr. and Mrs. Burkham's son, Robert Jr., is entering Princeton this fall as a freshman, and his father is a graduate of that university and president of the Princeton Club of St. Louis. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. George H. Shields will give a tea dance for their debutante daughter, Miss Janet at the St. Louis Country Club, to which the members of the Triangle organization will be invited. The after-theater plans for the men have not been completed.

Miss Helen Williams Engaged

At an informal tea yesterday afternoon at their home, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Williams of Webster Park announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Thayer Williams, and Kenneth Littledale, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Littledale of Southwood avenue.

Weddings and Engagements

Miss Louise Janes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Janes of 50 Joy avenue, Webster Groves, will become the bride of Eugene Renard, son of Mrs. Clemence Renard of Webster Groves, Oct. 11. The ceremony will take place in the Church of the Holy Redeemer in Webster Groves. The bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Sophie Janes. Joseph Renard will be best man for his brother.

The engagement of Miss Marie B. Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse J. Walsh of 6168 McPherson avenue, and Melvin L. Joyce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael D. Joyce of 7000 Waterman avenue, was announced last night at a buffet supper and dance given at "Alta Vista," the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Joyce in Glencoe, Mo. There were 100 guests. No definite date for the wedding, which will take place this fall, has been announced. Miss Walsh was educated at the Visitation Convent, and Mr. Joyce is a graduate of St. Louis University.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hill of 6320 Alamo avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Marjorie Dana Hill, to A. Donald Cook Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cook of 4934 West Pine boulevard.

The wedding took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and was followed by a dinner at Hotel Chase.

The bride was attended by Mrs. A. P. Thursby Jr., Miss Ellyn de Loache and Miss Mildred Barnes. Dr. A. P. Thursby Jr. was best man. After a motor trip north, Mr. Cook and his bride will make their home at 5610 Enright avenue.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Clara Vanama, daughter of Mrs. Louis Vanama of 4701 Ridgewood avenue, to Clarence Gleiforst, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Gleiforst of 3800 Humphrey avenue. Lindbergh Memorial Body to Meet Tuesday

The Spirit of St. Louis Memorial Committee will hold its third meeting Tuesday, Sept. 20, at 10 a. m., at Jefferson Memorial when further plans will be made for raising funds with which to erect a memorial to commemorate the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Mayor Miller has promised the committee that when the date for the opening drive is selected he will issue a proclamation for "Lindbergh Day." The members of the committee who conferred with the Mayor were Mrs. Howard Bailey, first vice-chairman, Mrs. John P. Dubail, second vice-chairman, and Mrs. James H. McCabe, chairman.

Plans will be outlined at the meeting Tuesday whereby every man, woman and child in St. Louis and vicinity will be given an opportunity to contribute $1 or more to the fund. To every one who subscribes $1 will be given an attractive certificate, and his name will be enrolled in two honor roll books, one to be presented to Col. Lindbergh, and the other to be kept in the archives of the Missouri Historical Society.

A contribution to the fund has been received from a woman in Jefferson City, Mo., who contributed because she admired Lindbergh for his poise, modesty and courage.

What Made His Hair Grow?

Read His Letter for the Answer

"Two years ago I was bald all over the top of the head.

"I felt ashamed for people to see my head. I tried different preparations, but they did no good. I remained bald, until I used Kotalko.

"New hair came almost immediately and kept on growing. In a short time I had a splendid head of hair, which has been perfect ever since—and no return of the baldness."

This statement is by Mr. H. A. Wild. He is but one of the big legion of users of Kotalko who voluntarily attest it has stopped falling hair, eliminated dandruff or aided new, luxuriant hair growth. KOTALKO is sold by busy druggists everywhere.

"Ends My Search!"

"After looking a long time for a face powder that wouldn't irritate and coarsen my skin, Black and White Face Powder has ended my search—and is a reward worth waiting for," says lovely Miss Josephine Keith, of Brooklyn, N. Y. "This exquisite powder goes on so much more smoothly, stays on so much longer and looks so much prettier and more natural than any I've ever used that I'll never again be without it! Its delicate, yet clinging fragrance is as individual, as strikingly different, as its soft fineness of texture and its beneficial effect!"

You'll know you've made a real find when you use Black and White Face Powder a day or two; and your satisfaction will constantly increase. Like the other Black and White Beauty Creations it is of a quality acceptable to those who seek the best, at prices within the reach of all. Sold everywhere.

Best results come from using Black and White Skin Soap with the other Black and White Beauty Creations.

Poise!

And the Youthful Step
—Wear Foot Savers

Poise is one of woman's most enviable charms. But to have poise you must have bodily comfort—freedom from foot aches and pains. This calls for properly constructed footwear—that fits and supports the arch as Nature intended.

Foot Savers' exclusive, patented features give scientific arch support—impart a youthful buoyancy and ease to every bodily movement. They give you poise, grace—add joy to every activity.

And Foot Savers are as beautiful and captivating, as they are practical and comforting. Come in and see the clever new model. One of our experts will assist you in getting a perfect fit.

This charming model offered in black patent and black kid.

How Well Do You Know It?

The International Shoe Company is the greatest shoe manufacturing company in the world. This company will in all probability ship one hundred twenty-five million ($125,000,000.00) dollars worth of shoes to retail shoe dealers during 1927.

The International Shoe Company employs thirty-two thousand (32,000) people—it operates forty-three (43) separate and distinct shoe factories, many located right in the City of St. Louis, others in nearby smaller towns, and a few factories in New England.

Last year this company produced forty-seven million (47,000,000) pairs of shoes in these factories.

Aside from factories the company owns and operates nine tanneries of leather and subsidiary factories which produce all of its cartons and shipping cases, all of its blackings, stains, dies, and chemicals—all of its own patterns and lasts; these subsidiary factories produced fifty-six million dollars' worth of materials last year.

The International Shoe Company is an outstanding shoe concern in this, the world's largest shoe market. It manufactures and sells shoes of all kinds for men, women and children, its late production of all of these types being in the neighborhood of one hundred seventy-five thousand (175,000) pairs of shoes every day.

Every day this space will be devoted to some one particular manufacturing plant which is contributing to the dynamic growth of St. Louis.

KEEP YOUR SKIN YOUNG
Remove all blemishes and discolorations by regularly using pure mercolized wax. Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine, almost invisible particles of aged skin peel off, until all defects, such as pimples, liver spots, tan, freckles and large pores have disappeared. Skin is beautifully clear, soft and velvety, and face looks years younger. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use this face lotion: 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel. At Drug and Department Stores everywhere.

Vandervoort's Presents the New Autumn Silks

Chosen from these choicest materials which the season has to offer, Vandervoort's presents its collection of exclusive importations and exquisite domestic Silks.

OF paramount importance is the transparent velvet, distinctly this season's own—a luscious velvet of orchid-like fragility and translucent as an October cloud. It is well chosen for evening wraps and soft-draped gowns.

¶ Gleaming dully are the metal brocades, reflecting many hues. The accepted slender silhouette finds they drape gracefully in dance frocks, and they are used less formally for blouses. Plain metals are best in sheath-like gowns.

¶ Suppleness of weave characterizes the satin crepes, which use one side for trimming the other. They are well adapted to the new smart lines in dress.

¶ Printed velveteens (cotton) are new and youthful, as are their small-figured designs.

¶ In Fall colors, black has a place in Silks which none other can hope to attain. Browns and tans, which belong especially to Autumn, have an exalted position, and navy blue is extremely good. Shades of red, from deep wine to scarlet will be seen at smart gatherings.
Silk Plaza—Second Floor.

New Woolens Have Distinction

THE accepted materials for Fall wool frocks are those of lightweight weave. Wool Georgette, crepella, wool crepe, and plaids are newest. Suits will take tweeds; sports coats new novelty mixtures; and dress coats, broadcloth and soft-piled materials.

KEEP YOUR SKIN YOUNG
Removes all blemishes and discolorations by regularly using pure mercolized wax. Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine, almost invisible particles of aged skin peel off, until all defects, such as pimples, liver spots, tan, freckles and large pores have disappeared. Skin is beautifully clear, soft and velvety, and face looks years younger. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use this face lotion: 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel. At Drug and Department Stores everywhere.

Coated Tongue Warns of Dangerous Disorders of Stomach, Liver and Bowels

If you aren't feeling just right, go to the mirror and look at your tongue. If it's coated, it shows why you feel so weak and tired; why you have pains in the stomach and bowels, gas, sour stomach, headaches and dizzy spells; why you have no appetite and can't sleep.

Get New Health and Vigor

The best thing you can do is to get a bottle of Tanlac and begin to take it right away. Tanlac has a wonderful record in such cases as yours. For 20 years it has been helping sick people back to health and strength. Your own druggist has sold hundreds of bottles of it. In your own neighborhood there are doubtless many hearty, happy men and women who had suffered for years, tried scores of medicines—and at last found in Tanlac a sure, permanent relief for their ailments. Ask them—they will tell you what a wonderful medicine it is!

Relief or Your Money Back

If you are sick, weak and run down—if you are thin, flabby, nervous and sleepless—if everything you eat distresses you—give Tanlac a chance to help you. It costs less than 2 cents a dose. It contains no mineral drugs. It is made of roots, barks and herbs—nature's own medicines for the sick. Get a bottle from you. druggist and begin to take it right away. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

HEALTH BODY TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS SEPT. 26

Tuberculosis Campaigns Will Be Discussed at Group's 3-Day Conference.

The Fourteenth Annual Mississippi Valley Conference on Tuberculosis will convent Sept. 26 in St. Louis for a three-day meeting. A program has been arranged with a view to covering the work of physicians, nurses, secretaries, staff workers and executives of organizations engaged in public health work. About 1000 delegates from 12 mid-Western States are expected to attend.

A number of prominent speakers have been invited to open discussion on racial problems, mental hygiene, teacher training courses, high school health programs and other public movements to aid in the fostering of good health. A two-day medical session for physicians and surgeons is on the program, with a nurses' session, child health session and chest clinic provided for. The medical schools of Washington University, St. Louis University, the Trudeau Club and St. Louis Medical Society will combine efforts to make the medical session as complete as possible.

Dr. Ethan Allen Gray, Chicago, president of the Tuberculosis Society, will open the initial meeting with an address, following which the delegates will discuss the National Campaign in 1928 for early diagnosis, teacher training courses, school health programs, health programs in industry and the necessity of surveys. Tuesday a "publicity clinic" will be held to instruct social workers on "how to get their message over."

Wednesday's session will cover the relation of tuberculosis to a heart disease campaign, the cardiac clinic and related subjects, and a discussion of the Christmas seal campaign for next year. A number of national committees will be in session during the conference.

PEDIGREED BIRDS TO BE SHOWN

Roller Canary Breeders to Meet in December.

Whooping cranes that kill snakes, doves that perform circus stunts, and blue-blooded canaries will be among the birds on exhibition at a show to be given by the International Roller Canary Breeders' Association at Hotel Chase Dec. 10-12. More than 500 out-of-town members of the association are expected to attend the show. J. Wommack of London, England, will serve as one of the judges.

Dr. Herman Sanburn of Vanderbilt University is president of the organization, which was the first in the United States to undertake registration of pure-blooded canaries. O. B. Close, director general at St. Louis, is in charge of local arrangements.

ENGINEER TO TALK ON CABLES

Will Explain Development of Wires in Local Group.

T. H. Parish, electrical engineer of Worcester, Mass., will talk on "Wire and Cable" before the industrial electrical engineers' section of the St. Louis Electric Board of Trade, Tuesday, Sept. 29, at 8 p. m., at Hotel Statler. He will explain the development and use of wires and cables for the transmission of electrical energy from the early days of the discovery of electricity to the present.

The meeting will be the first in a series arranged by the Electrical Board of Trade for the benefit of electrical maintenance men and

My contracts with him prior to tha tended over five years. He told me, at one time or a much the entire history of the dry movement in the Un which he, in later years, was the outstanding figure.

There were many incidents in that long story that did not appear in the printed version. All of them do credit to Wheeler, as does his omission of some of them. He was inherently a square shooter and a practical man. He was, perhaps, the keenest judge in the country of the value of publicity. But he also knew the proprieties of writing. He knew, too, down to the last trifling detail, the rules of the game in which he had so long been a commanding figure. And he played by the rules.

Wayne B. Wheeler was a giant intellectually despite his frail and slight physique. He stood only 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighed about 135 pounds and looked as if a gust of wind would blow him away. But when he talked he spoke in high-powered words, striking phrases, apt illustrations. There was nothing of cant or hypocrisy in his bearing or language; nothing to suggest the professional reformer. On the contrary, he created an impression of being intensely practical. Like many another genius, he was inclined to be somewhat careless in his dress.

Among his assets he possessed one of the most winning smiles ever seen in Washington, the utmost frankness and good nature and a sunny optimism. His social friends were anything but long-faced Puritans and he was ranked as a rorking good fellow in the group where he was most at home. He knew human weaknesses, was on speaking terms with virtually all the vices as well as the virtues, practiced none of the vices himself but was generously tolerant of those of others with whom he came in contact.

"Why do you have anything to do with Congressman X?" a caller once asked him in my hearing. "Don't you know he is an old hypocrite? He votes dry, yes; but he gets tanked up regularly every week-end. I would drop him, if I were you; he can't do anything but harm to the cause."

Ready to Help a Toper.

"Yes," Wheeler replied, "I know about that. I've talked to him about it. He isn't proud of what he does, but he has got the habit of getting drunk and he can't break himself of it. I feel sorry for him and will help him in any way possible."

That was his attitude when he went to the White House half a dozen years ago to talk with Warren Harding about the drinking reported to be indulged in occasionally at the White House.

"I talked with the President three times about that," Wheeler told me. "I told him that so far as I was concerned, I didn't want to meddle in his personal affairs or habits. He could do what he wanted to. I told him that so far as Warren Harding was concerned it was none of Wheeler's business how many drinks he took.

"But I also reminded him that he was President of the United States and that he was setting the nation an example. I didn't want him to encourage others to take their drinks and patronize bootleggers—a thing which he didn't have to do, of course, but which others, more humbly situated, would have to do. He finally agreed I was right and sent for me one day and told me he had decided to give up drinking himself. He never did take more

WHAT TOOK PLACE WHEN WHEELER AND SMITH MET AT CONVENTION OF 1924

They Talked a Little About Prohibition, but Mostly They "Swapped Stories," Late Dry Leader Related.

By WILLIAM P. HELM JR.,
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.

IT was my privilege, as a free lance writer in Washington, to collaborate with Wayne B. Wheeler, the militant general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, in writing his history of the League, 18 months or so ago. My contracts with him prior to that time had extended over five years. He told me, at one time or another, pretty much the entire history of the dry movement in the United States of which he, in later years, was the outstanding figure.

There were many incidents in that long story that did not appear in the printed version. All of them do credit to Wheeler, as does his omission of some of them. He was inherently a square shooter and a practical man. He was, perhaps, the keenest judge in the country of the value of publicity. But he also knew the proprieties of writing. He knew, too, down to the last trifling detail, the rules of the game in which he had so long been a commanding figure. And he played by the rules.

Wheeler Slight of Build.

Wayne B. Wheeler was a giant intellectually despite his frail and slight physique. He stood only 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighed about 115 pounds and looked as if a gust of wind would blow him away. But when he talked he spoke in high-powered words, striking phrases, apt illustrations. There was nothing of cant or hypocrisy in his bearing or language; nothing to suggest the professional reformer. On the contrary, he created an impression of being intensely practical. Like many another genius, he was inclined to be somewhat careless in his dress.

Among his assets he possessed one of the most winning smiles ever seen in Washington, the utmost frankness and good nature and a sunny optimism. His social friends were anything but long-faced Puritans and he was ranked as a rorking good fellow in the group where he was most at home. He knew human weaknesses, was on speaking terms with virtually all the vices as well as the virtues, practiced none of the vices himself but was generously tolerant of those of others with whom he came in contact.

"Why do you have anything to do with Congressman X?" a caller once asked him in my hearing. "Don't you know he is an old hypocrite? He votes dry, yes; but he gets tanked up regularly every week-end. I would drop him, if I were you; he can't do anything but harm to the cause."

Ready to Help a Toper.

"Yes," Wheeler replied, "I know about that. I've talked to him about it. He isn't proud of what he does, but he has got the habit of getting drunk and he can't break himself of it. I feel sorry for him and will help him in any way possible."

That was his attitude when he went to the White House half a dozen years ago to talk with Warren Harding about the drinking reported to be indulged in occasionally at the White House.

"I talked with the President three times about that," Wheeler told me. "I told him that so far as I was concerned, I didn't want to meddle in his personal affairs or habits. He could do what he wanted to. I told him that so far as Warren Harding was concerned it was none of Wheeler's business how many drinks he took.

"But I also reminded him that he was President of the United States and that he was setting the nation an example. I didn't want him to encourage others to take their drinks and patronize bootleggers—a thing which he didn't have to do, of course, but which others, more humbly situated, would have to do. He finally agreed I was right and sent for me one day and told me he had decided to give up drinking himself. He never did take more than a social glass or so, but I knew he was very fond of it."

Pleads Cause of Haynes.

Wheeler's fair dealing became an obsession where his friends were concerned. He went three times to the White House to plead the cause of Roy A. Haynes. Haynes was under fire from many angles and Secretary Mellon wanted to displace him. Wheeler had a talk with Mellon, found he couldn't budge the Secretary, and then took his cards to Coolidge.

Three times in the early months of 1927, Wheeler stepped in and checked the move to displace Haynes. Finally, it became patent Mellon was so intent on displacing Haynes that to block the move might have meant an open break between Mellon and Coolidge. Wheeler went back to his dingy office, bare for all its array of book cases and filing cabinets, and sat down at his battered old roll-top desk. He decided the fight ought to be called off, but he succeeded in having Andrews go at the same time.

Our collaboration in the writing of Wheeler's history of the Anti-Saloon League provoked discussion as to other joint literary efforts. At the time of his death I was under commission to prepare the rough draft of two magazine articles to appear under Wheeler's signature. Both of these were to be aimed at Gov. Smith of New York, who was rapidly becoming one of the outstanding candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928.

The first of these articles was to be entitled, "What Manner of Man for the Presidency." It was to decide the requisites, from the viewpoint of the drys, of the presidency and the qualities which the holder of that high office should possess.

Plans to Question Smith.

The other article was to be entitled, "I Ask Gov. Smith." We had outlined the opening questions before Wheeler left for Michigan on the vacation from which he was never to return. They were, roughly:

Will you, Gov. Smith, uphold the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution if you are elected President?

Will you personally observe the spirit as well as the letter of the laws enacted under that amendment?

Will you appoint as your Attorney-General a man thoroughly in sympathy with enforcement of the dry laws?

Will you weaken the enforcement agencies of the Government by appointing to them men not in sympathy with law enforcement?

For various reasons the work of preparing the articles was not followed during the summer. We had intended to put them into shape when Wheeler returned to Washington.

Shares Convention Row.

For Al Smith personally, Wayne Wheeler had high regard. For Al Smith's fighting qualities and campaigning ability, Wheeler had wholesome respect. For Al Smith's record on the liquor question, Wheeler had superb contempt which he was at no pains to conceal. I recall a questionnaire Wheeler was engaged in preparing some seven or eight months ago for publication in the newspapers. Here is a quotation,

GOOD CROP IN 1928 HOOVER'S HOPE FOR RELIEVING FLOOD SUFFERERS

Secretary of Commerce After Fifth Tour of Stricken Area Reports 47,000 Still Destitute, but That Relief Work Is So Efficient That None Will Lack Food, Shelter and Clothing Before Jan. 1, by Which Time Congress Will Be in Session.

By CARLOS F. HURD.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

TO BRING the Mississippi Valley flood region to the point of making next year's crop is the aim of Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce and director-general of flood relief activities. At the conclusion of his fifth tour through the stricken area, Secretary Hoover last week asserted he could "see daylight."

A good crop next year, Secretary Hoover says, will take the flooded region through the worst of its difficulties. A poor crop will mean a continuing problem—"but not so much of a problem," the Secretary adds, "as we have already had."

In the five months since the April crest began sweeping through Missouri and Arkansas levees, Hoover and the agencies directed by him have had first, to take people from flooded farms, plantations and towns into camps and support them there; next, to get them back home and help them in restoration work; more recently, to provide them with food in some cases and with feed and seed in many more cases; and most lately to ward off the threatened calamity of mortgaged foreclosures.

A sixth tour of the region is planned for mid-November by Secretary Hoover who has spent more than half of the long Southern summer in administering relief and rehabilitation from railroad trains and hotel rooms.

On his special train northbound from Charleston, Mo., after completing his latest round, Secretary Hoover told of the way the job has grown, and of his hope that another season may bring the need to an end.

Hoover's Plan Contemplates No New Overflow.

One essential work which does not come under Hoover's direction is the restoring of levees to the point where they were before the flood, and where they had withstood the high water of years before the phenomenal crest of 1927.

Levee building and levee repairing are the work of the War Department, and Secretary Hoover did not discuss these problems in detail, but said he had been pleased to hear that the Secretary of War had found a way to go ahead in advance of congressional appropriation, although the Comptroller-General blocked the first plan for use of the unexpended rivers and harbors fund.

It is essential to the working out of the Hoover plans that there be no new overflow. The second flood of last June, in a part of the April flood region, did greater economic damage and impaired the morale of its victims more than the first flood, Hoover says.

"All the flood sufferers are out of the camps now," Secretary Hoover said, in reviewing the five months' work. "There were 700,000 of the sufferers, and 626,000 of these were in the camps. Contrary to a widespread impression, there were more white than Negroes among the people affected. In the upper stages of the flood, many Negroes were rendered homeless, but when it reached Louisiana it affected a region populated chiefly by white people.

47,000 Still Destitute as Result of Floods.

"The reports made during this tour of inspection have shown that 92 per cent of these people are back on their feet, and that there remain about 47,000 still destitute as to food and other necessaries.

"For the relief work, about $27,000,000 has been provided. The Red Cross raised $17,000,000; $7,000,000 was expended in various branches of the Federal service; and $3,000,000 has been raised by other agencies. In addition, the railroads rendered services and incurred expenses aside from their own repair work which may be estimated at $3,000,000.

"As the result of these gifts, it is now assured that nobody is to go hungry, and nobody is to want for seed, feed, shelter and clothing before the first of January."

That does not mean, it was explained, that the money will be used up then, but that, on so great a task, estimates are made to cover not too long a period at once. Before Jan. 1 Secretary Hoover will have revisited the flood area and Congress will have convened.

Of the money expended, Secretary Hoover estimates that county committees in the 128 flood counties have handled about $12,000,000.

HERBERT HOOVER.

"No one can go over the territory and see the work that has been done," he said, "without admiring the resolution and courage of the people and the efficiency of the organizations.

Gives Full Praise to Main Street's Efficiency.

"These county organizations have shown the capacity of the Main Street American. I'm for him," the Secretary added, with more enthusiasm than he usually permits himself to show.

"There were 91 towns and villages which were called upon to organize themselves to care for five times their own population or more. They found the initiative and organizing ability and the kindliness needed to do the job, and they did it well. Many gave up their businesses and worked night and day for the needy.

"An unprecedented thing about this flood was that it brought better health instead of an increase of sickness. All other floods have been followed by a train of sickness. This time, out of the 128 counties, all but six have shown a better health condition than normal. In those six counties malaria and pellagra are prevalent, and the Red Cross and State Health authorities are working on them. The improvement seems to be due to the vaccinating of the refugees in camps against typhoid and smallpox."

On the tour just ended Secretary Hoover has questioned county committees as to conditions of food, housing, health, feed and seed supply. But he gave attention also to the major financial problems of the flood area—the problems of individual and community credit. He had these problems particularly in mind when he spoke of seeing "daylight," as compared with a rather gloomy previous prospect.

Bolstering Up Credit for the Needy Farmer.

In the matter of individual credit, the thing needful has been to get the mortgage holders to listen to reason. An important incident of the tour was the gathering at Greenville, Miss., hard-hit center of the "delta," of representatives of banking, mortgage loan and life insurance companies.

Before this meeting, there had been dismay in the delta. If mortgages were to be foreclosed before a new crop could be made, there was little use of making any further effort to carry on.

Acting individually, there would have been little for the mortgage-holders to do but to foreclose. But they were brought together, and they had to consider collectively, not only what would happen to the debtors in the event of foreclosures, but what would happen to the foreclosers.

An article appearing in a New York paper called attention to the situation, and pointed out that, if foreclosures took place, the new holders would find themselves with little more than the bare ground to start operations on.

A few days later the Greenville meeting, attended by a number of representatives of Eastern financial concerns, decided that all mortgage interest and principal collection should be deferred to Jan. 1, 1929.

"That gives them the chance to make a crop next year," Secretary Hoover said, in commenting on the action taken at Greenville. "One good crop will clear up the whole of the liabilities of this territory. I feel that the credit agencies, in their decision, acted wisely, and did not take undue risk.

"The emergency finance corporations, formed to finance this year's crop, served a fine purpose in maintaining the financial stability of the region. The three such corporations have been asked to continue in service over next year. Negotiations have been instituted between the mortgage holders, financial corporations and the local banks, to see what plan can be adopted for financing the crop and carrying the present owners over until the end of next year. Agriculture of that type requires considerable capital, and if it is allowed to go by default, everybody will suffer."

States Aid in Meeting Immediate Fiscal Problems

Community finance is another problem, and it gets into the province of the State Governments, a province where this particular Federal official is chary of interfering. But when the Louisiana Legislature at Baton Rouge unanimously invited Hoover to address it a few days ago, he did so and expressed approval of the Legislature's action in assuming the obligations of parishes (counties) in the flood area, which find it impossible to collect taxes.

"The Louisiana legislation takes care of the whole situation as to local indebtedness," he said. "The State assumes the normal budgets of the parishes, raising the necessary money by a bond issue, and the parishes have 10 years in which to repay the State, at 6 per cent interest. Louisiana lost a larger proportion of the State's crops, and hence has a larger area where taxes are uncollectible than any other state."

"The people are not asking for charity, but they are asking for time," was Secretary Hoover's conclusion as to the problems of individual and community finance in the flood area.

In the states other than Louisiana, Secretary Hoover has been informed, there will be time for the Legislatures to take relief action, if they choose, before taxes again fall due. In Arkansas, he was told, a regular session of the Legislature will come before another tax collection period.

Suggestion That Congress Aid Missouri Sufferers.

A problem of bond obligations in three Southeast Missouri counties, Mississippi, New Madrid and Scott, was presented to Secretary Hoover at Charleston. Levee and drainage bonds, on which interest, and in a few cases principal, will be due next year, cannot be met, it was stated, and if there is default, future bond sales will reflect the loss of buyers' confidence. Some of the Southeast Missouri people are asking that Congress appropriate money to meet their next year's interest, and make a long-term loan for the payment of principal maturities.

Secretary Hoover did not comment on this, or on other suggestions which involved possible action by Congress.

The Hoover hearings in the latest tour were strictly fact-finding affairs. No oratory was desired, and no political suggestions were countenanced. The Charleston hearing, held on a sweltering day in the Mississippi County Courthouse, was across a long table and was in tones several degrees lower than the stock conversation of the small town store counter or hotel lobby. At times, almost the only sound heard was the crying of babies in the rear of the courtroom.

"We don't want to overdo, and produce pauperism," Hoover said at one point, "but we don't want any suffering. We can't replace losses, but we must meet needs." Relief administered from the flood funds should be flood relief, he said, and cannot be extended to include later casualties independent of the flood.

Mosquito bars and whitewash, it developed, are his favorite preventives, the former for malaria and the latter for dirt.

"We have found," he said, 'that the way to repair houses is by wholesale, sending out a gang of repair men on a motor truck. In that way, the cost of repairs arverages $50 a house, including whitewash. The repair crews have orders to whitewash every house."

HOW GOVERNMENT PREVENTS LEAKAGE OF TIPS WORTH MILLIONS TO SPECULATORS

Crop Reports, Most Valuable of All, Are Compiled Behind Locked Doors — Guarding Supreme Court Secrets.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.

LAST week the cotton market jumped 200 points, or $10 a bale, on receipt of the Department of Agriculture's estimate that the yearly crop would be 800,000 bales less than the forecast of the month before. Likewise, on the announcement of the August estimate, there had been a rise of 200 points. What a fortune could have been made on a sure thing if a speculator had had access to a leak in the Department of Agriculture. Such advance information would easily be worth $1,000,000 to a Wall Street operator.

There was no leak because the announcements of the Crop Reporting Board are the most carefully guarded secrets of the Federal Government. The precautions taken by the Supreme Court, the Treasury, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission are mere routine compared to the safeguards set around the findings of this agriculture and market service. Furthermore, the law provides a penalty up to $10,000 fine and 10 years' imprisonment for anyone who should give out Government crop information in advance of official release, or for anyone who should speculate either directly or indirectly on the information he had obtained through his official connection with the crop reporting service.

How Estimates Are Made.

Although the findings are a dark secret until release, the crop reporting board does not conceal the methods which it follows in reaching its conclusions. For this reason comprehensive private services have been established and they have their effects on the market. The Government report, however, is official, and when it is released it eclipses the other agencies. It is the most comprehensive of all the services and its findings are considered the most accurate.

Cotton is not the only staple studied by the reporting service. Estimates are made of the yearly cereal crops, some of the vegetable crops and the yearly livestock production. The procedure in estimating all the crops and releasing the information is generally the same.

About 200,000 volunteer agents help the department in making its estimates. These men supply sample information about typical farm lands, representing approximately 2 per cent of all the cultivated land in the country. Relying upon this information, the reporting board merely multiplies the planted area by the estimated yield per acre. The elements considered in the yield per acre are effects of weather, soil cultivation, plant diseases and insect pests. Part of the primary information is sent to state capitals and state universities, and forwarded with expert comment to Washington, while other data from Federal agents are sent by special delivery mail to Washington, where they are taken from the city postoffice to the department by special messengers.

Precautions Insure Secrecy.

The unopened envelopes are placed in a special locked box in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture. On the morning of report day, all the estimates are turned over unopened and unassembled to the board, sometimes as early as 4 o'clock in the morning.

First, the entire floor occupied by the board and its clerks is cut off from outside communication. Telephones and buzzers are disconnected; doors are locked, and guards are stationed to prevent anyone leaving. Every window on the floor is screened and every window blind is down and fastened with seals similar to those commonly used on box cars. In these locked rooms the board and its corps of statisticians, calculators, multigraph operators and the like, must stay until the estimate is completed.

The subordinate employes merely add up figures, regardless of localities. It would be impossible for them to get a general picture of crop conditions. The reports and estimates are assembled and given to the members of the board, each of whom makes his own separate estimate. The chairman makes no estimate. In case of conflicting estimates the material is re-examined and discussed until a final figure is agreed upon. Until a few minutes before the final hour, nobody can say definitely what the forecast will be.

Releasing the Report.

The dates for release of the estimates are set months in advance, but every precaution is taken to make sure that no one gets the information a second before the others. One minute before the appointed hour a member of the board takes copies of the estimates into a room equipped with telephones and telegraph instruments connected to the press associations and Wall Street. Newspaper men and other interested persons are waiting.

Copies of the report are laid face down beside each instrument. The newspaper men and other interested persons are behind a chalk line on the floor, opposite their instruments. The chief telegrapher of the Department shouts "Get ready." Then at the word "Go!" the men spring forward toward their instruments, grab the report, turn it over and flash its contents over the wires.

Reports on cotton are released in the morning. This gives an opportunity to use them on the American exchanges that day. If it were released otherwise, the foreign markets would have the advantage of the information first. Reports on grain are released in the afternoon after the markets close. The foreign grain exchanges are negligible from the American speculative standpoint.

Minutes That Mean Millions.

Seconds and minutes count on the exchange. The following paragraph, taken from a newspaper describing the cotton exchange when the September report was released, shows how the sensitive cotton market reacted to the official forecast:

"The Government's report was announced at 12 o'clock. Trading ceased as usual five minutes before its appearance and was not resumed until 15 minutes afterwards. The sensational rise (200 points) occurred after resumption of trading. After the bulge, a wave of liquidating orders from old local trade and Southern bulls with their execution, caused a break of between 90 and 100 points from the top price in less than 15 minutes. After this profit-taking had run its course by 1 o'clock, the market had rallied by a large amount of new buying from outside sources and bullish local traders." Thus within an hour, cotton had gone up 200 points, dropped almost a 100 and then recovered. Truly, minutes meant millions.

Prying Into Supreme Court.

Other divisions of the Federal Government are not so careful to guard their secrets and to see that the public gets accurate information on the first flash over the wires. The United States Supreme Court jealously guards its secrets, but that grand old body is not as leakproof as the crop reporting board. There are a few examples to illustrate this.

Locating Highway 61.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SINCE reading your articles in the Post-Dispatch concerning the location of Highway 61, I want to express my gratitude and compliment your paper in its prompt characteristic of "lining up" on the right side of a proposition.

This road controversy between the Kingshighway Association and the West Route Association is of no personal interest to me as I have no property on either proposed route, and it cannot particularly benefit my home town, Parma, Mo., as it would not be nearer than eight miles from it if the West Route line were chosen. However, as an asset for Southeast Missouri I can see no comparison between the two routes.

As good banker and business man as Mr. Mathews is, I cannot see his point of view as a member of the Highway Commission in abandoning so good a road as Kingshighway to find a site for a new road when roads are so badly needed in Southeast Missouri. I am wondering if Mr. Mathews owned the entire counties of Scott and New Madrid if he would desire such ruthless destruction of his property and such waste in road building, or would he not take the new road from the State, extra, for the improvement of his property? As to Thomas Paine.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WELL, well, so Thomas Paine was not an atheist! It remained for you to clear him of that "preposterous crime" and now your pious readers can weep with joy over the revelation.

But why stop here? Why not also demonstrate that Ingersoll was a devout Baptist, that Luther Burbank believed in infant damnation, that Darwin and Huxley were really Tennessee fundamentalists, etc.? It can be done. And it would clear them men of the horrible reputations they now enjoy, and your noble readers would simply be overcome with happiness, and you would rightfully deserve the claim to be a liberal and progressive force in the community.

ALBERT KAPLAN.

The modern encyclopedias, as well as the recent biography referred to by the Post-Dispatch, show that Paine was a believer in God. Categorically, he was what is called a deist, that is, one who believes in God but denies the supernatural and miraculous. The Americana says of Paine's "Age of Reason": "It was written not to attack religion, but, in his own words, 'To show a higher form of religion.' Paine was not an atheist, as has been popularly believed, nor are the popular stories of his drunkenness true. His services to the American cause were lasting and important."—Editor Post-Dispatch.

Power.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NOTICEABLE among the things I have read recently is the evident belief that the splitting of the atom will find mankind unready for the leisure it will bring. Science though, is a slow art, and savants who labor constantly and often gratuitously for the welfare of the world would be the last to make you unhappy. They are workers, too. The greatest moments of their lives have been spent in their laboratories and the day they will have to abandon them for the want of something to do will find them utterly miserable. They do not expect this to come to pass though, for science daily is bringing us nearer God, and God will make all things happen as they should.

In the passing of the years I have noticed that one of mankind's greatest drawbacks is his fear of power. In bygone days when an individual accomplished the unusual, he was considered possessed with the devil, but today, thanks to science, we know better. The potion mixer of yesterday may have been the witch, but the potion mixer of today is the man of science. He does not have recourse to his laboratory to bring vengeance upon you, or to concoct silly doses for lovesick Romeos. He is a regular attendant, and has justly and righteously merited the respect of mankind.

Fruit and Nut as Well as Shade Trees.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I SHOULD like to ask through your columns just why do the advocates of tree planting on the public highways not advocate fruit and nut trees, where the soil is adaptable or suitable for such trees, inasmuch as fruit and nut trees would be so much more valuable to the citizens of the State and reduce the cost of fruits and nuts, which are becoming prohibitive?

At least every other tree should be a fruit or nut tree, and I believe every citizen would be willing to pay for at least one fruit or nut tree. I'm sure I would pay for more than one.

Make the highways attractive by mixing fruit and nut trees among the shade trees—half of each, at least, and give fruit and nuts to all. FUTURE.

MR. McADOO'S WITHDRAWAL.

W. G McAdoo's letter to a Tennessee publisher announcing he will not be a candidate for the presidency in 1928 might possibly be called a work of supererogation. It is at once a meritorious and superfluous act. It clarifies the situation by dissolving the remnant of the thick-and-thin McAdoo supporters. Whether this remnant is numerous enough to be a force for dissension in the next Democratic convention we do not know. We do know that many of the men who were leaders in the McAdoo movement of 1924 have lost their ardor. That their defection has influenced Mr. McAdoo's decision is a fair inference.

Such signs and omens could not have been misconstrued by any one of Mr. McAdoo's political experience and acumen. For him the clock has struck twelve. He has accepted the situation in a formal abdication and thus has released from further fidelity all who felt in any way committed to him. So whatever else fate has in store for the Democratic party it is reasonably certain that next year's convention will not repeat the brawling and bitterness of New York.

Mr. McAdoo's sketch of his career and his statement of political principles as contained in his letter of renunciation require candid examination. That he was an able Secretary of the Treasury under the extraordinary demands of the World War is a matter of record. That distinguished financier, Frank A. Vanderlip, put it well when, in one of the groping pauses of the war period, he said, "What we have got to do now is to think in billions." McAdoo did think in billions. The capacity and the vision to do so were a vital factor in the launching and successful conduct of the Liberty bond campaigns.

In the difficult emergency office of Director of Railroads Mr. McAdoo enlisted the best minds of the transportation world. The tremendous job of transportation that had to be done in that crisis was done and was well done, notwithstanding the shallow criticism of political partisanship and the hypocritical cant of Big Business.

Such official service might well have commended Mr. McAdoo's ambition for the nomination for President to the Democratic party provided he had been thoroughly grounded in the principles of his party and truly cherished the ideals of government embodied in those principles. In that profound requirement he failed. Of that great beatitude of tolerance, which is and ever must be the soul of true democracy, there was never an inkling in Mr. McAdoo's canvass. In the name of prohibition he made himself the champion of the forces of intolerance. Religiously and politically he was more than reactionary; his philosophy in its essentials was an heretical disavowal of the gospel as written in the Constitution. His nomination at Madison Square Garden might have completed the ruin of the Democratic party which that Bedlam so nearly accomplished.

He has stepped aside. That he could continue to be an irritant and embarrassment to the Democratic party may not be questioned. That he could ever realize his ambition to be the Democratic party's nominee for President is doubtful. Surely, if so chosen, he could not command more than a fraction of the party's support at the polls. Why? Because, despite his qualities the man is not a Democrat.

His withdrawal is compelled, it seems to us, by the logic of brightening events.

There seems to be grave uncertainty as to the calling of Mr. Shumaker.

THE OUTLAWRY OF WAR.

Ever since a Chicago lawyer, S. O. Levinson, back in 1918, invented the term, "outlawry of war," it has had a spectacular and somewhat paradoxical career. It was used by advocates of a League of Nations before the creation of the present League. It was used by Senator Knox and other enemies of the League to keep us out of that body, and to direct our aspirations toward a visionary world court. It was used by the irreconcilables to defeat the attempt to put us into the World Court at Geneva. It has lately been employed by Aristide Briand and Senator Borah to bring about a treaty outlawing war between France and the United States.

So it is not surprising to hear that Poland is using the term to cover her attempts to get other members of the League to guarantee her security. This merely shows once more how the term "outlawry of war" is amenable to the uses of sophists. Poland has no particular regard for the ideal represented by that phrase. If she had, she would suggest that the League do something real in the cause of disarmament, which, as Lloyd George asserted in his article in Sunday's Post-Dispatch, is the only way to outlaw war. Poland is merely playing the immemorial game of small nations which feel themselves in precarious situations. She is asking the powerful nations to guarantee that they will come to her aid in case she is attacked.

If the term "outlawry of war" had existed when the Powers guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium, it probably would have been used to explain that agreement—that solemnly sealed instrument which military necessity reduced to "a scrap of paper."

Tunney's favorite masterpiece probably is "The Ring and the Book."

A NEW PROHIBITION POLICY.

What could not happen while Wayne B. Wheeler was alive has happened within a few hours of his burial. The Government has announced that its prohibition policy in future will be that of laissez-faire, or let things go their own way.

No other construction can be put upon the announcement of Mr. Lowman, the new dry chief. He says that if the country can be made sober and temperate in fifty years it will be a good job, and leaves us to read between the lines that temperance and not prohibition is the Government's aim. It would, he says, be absurd to say that prohibition is a success, but he does believe temperance a success. He says the country grows more temperate, which it of course was doing before prohibition. All matured countries do.

What, then, is the effort to enforce prohibition to amount to? Mr. Lowman says only that the grafters and thieves who infest the enforcement ranks are to be run out. The force is to be made honest and efficient. But how active? Not very active, apparently. It would take a high degree of fanaticism to believe that a drive to enforce prohibition would get anywhere. After all, government is not a weapon which can be turned against the governed. A degree of reasonableness enters into it, and this has at last brought the Government itself to virtual nullification of the law.

Was there ever another such spectacle in any country? We make solemnly the gesture of doing what we cannot do. We know we cannot do it, but the bowing goes on. And what a profound bow Mr. Mellon makes in reproving the new dry chief for his candor!

BEAUTIFYING MISSOURI HIGHWAYS.

All that needs to be done to make the highways of Missouri beautiful with trees is for the people of the State to organize into communities and get the work started.

Members of the State Highway Commission, who have been interviewed by the Post-Dispatch are enthusiastic for such a popular movement. They cannot use the road money of the State for this purpose under present laws, but they point out that the next Legislature would no doubt amend the laws to such a laudable end.

The chairman of the commission, Mr. C. D. Matthews, says that he and his associates will welcome such a movement upon the part of the people of Missouri. It will grant permission to organizations to do the work, designate the kinds of trees to be planted, and provide a uniform plan for all the roads.

What we must keep in mind is that this is a way in which the highways of Missouri can be made unique. It is what the Canadian provinces of Ontario and Quebec have done. No motorist goes there, to ride in the grateful shade of the roadside trees, without enthusiastically commenting upon it. Those provinces, as the Post-Dispatch has pointed out in its effort to arouse Missouri to appreciation of our opportunity, helped the people plant the trees. They sometimes paid 80 per cent of the cost, at others all of it.

Why not organize Missouri in county units and let these units plant the trees? Would not this be the most practicable means of getting at it? Would it not have the merit of arousing county pride, something we are disposed to overlook in all the states? We believe it would.

Our notion of impudence is a boxing expert trying to tell us how the big fight is going to turn out.

GOVERNMENT AND OIL.

The nation's oil producers, faced by disaster because of tremendous surplus production from the Seminole field of Oklahoma, are asking the Federal Government to come to their aid by regulating production. Secretary of the Interior Work has already supported their contention, on the ground of discouraging waste, and Secretary Hoover is said to be sympathetic.

Not even oil men will, we take it, be inclined to question Secretary Work's assertion that great waste is involved in oil production. But petroleum engineers will question whether it is possible substantially to decrease this waste at the present stage of engineering development in the oil business. Despite numerous devices for saving oil in new fields where there are great flowing wells, waste still persists. Despite all sorts of means for getting oil from oil sands in older fields—means such as air lift, air pressure, vacuum, water drive and so on—it is still impossible to recover most of the oil in a pool. Oil operators have co-operated with geologists and engineers of the Bureau of Mines to eliminate waste in every possible way, until such waste as now exists is probably unavoidable.

That a Government commission could improve the practice of oil production is palpably absurd. Such a commission could regulate production if given the necessary authority. That, of course, is what Secretary Work has in mind, and that is what the oil men now think they want. But the difficulties of formulating and carrying out a policy of regulation that would be acceptable to the oil industry or to the public are obvious. The remedy might prove far worse than the disease. But it is the popular thing now for any industry in distress to turn to the Federal Government for succor. The oil men are doing what others have done.

Meantime, the Seminole field will gush away its abundance. Presently overproduction will cease. Normalcy will return. Will governmental regulation cease then? That is not the way of government. Governments cling tenaciously to prerogatives. Commissions never surrender and almost never die. The oil men, we believe, will serve themselves and the public better by depending on their own ingenuity to solve their problem.

Political expedients in Indiana are neither very political nor very expedient.

TROUBLES OF THE S. S. THORPE.

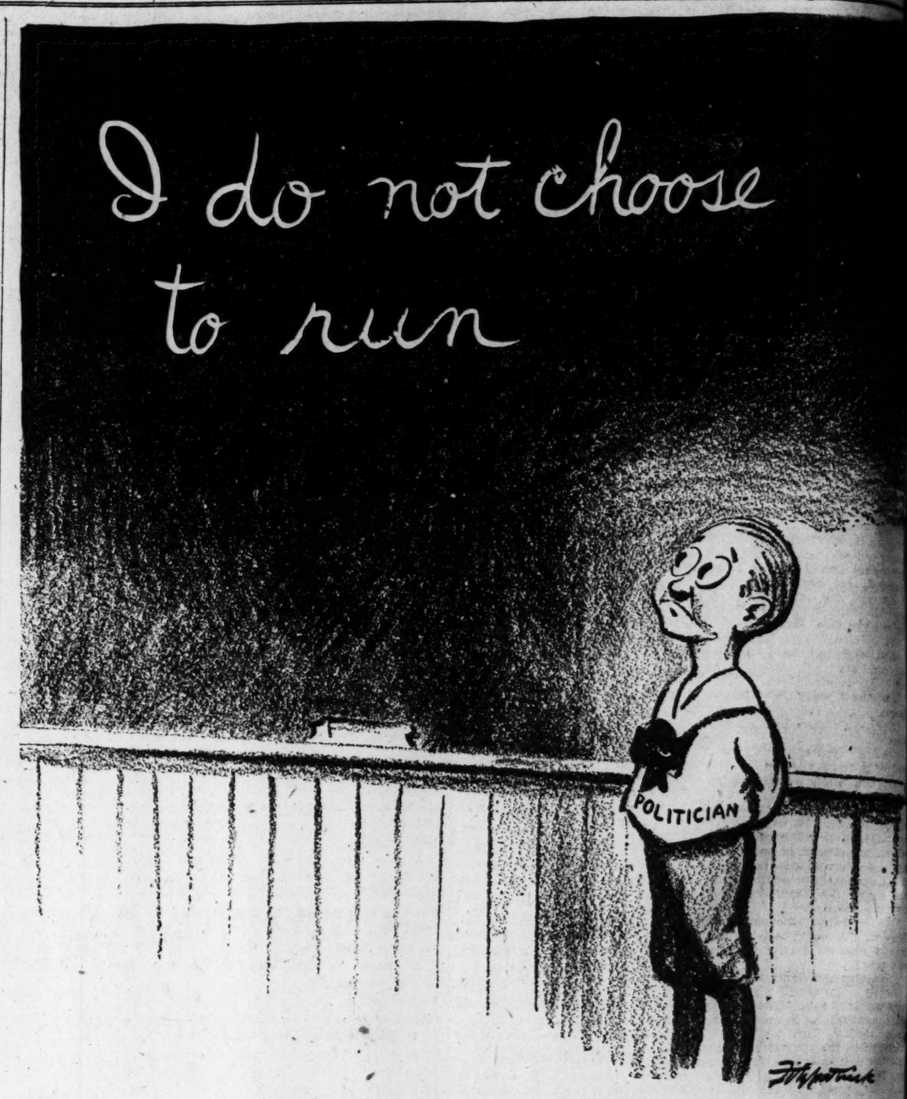
Returning from its pioneering trip to the Upper Mississippi, the towboat S. S. Thorpe reports that it encountered the two difficulties which this paper prophesied it would.

One of these was an almost uncharted channel, resulting from the recent floods. This is because the marking of the channel is not so well conducted on the river above St. Louis as it is on the stretch between this city and Cairo. Experience on the lower river has dictated a policy under which each light man is placed upon his own responsibility, and is obliged to see that the channel is always marked accurately. There is no red tape, no waiting for orders from distant headquarters, and none of the other vices which usually accompany government activity. But those who chart and mark the channel on the upper river have not yet learned this valuable lesson. When they do the trouble encountered by the S. S. Thorpe will be no more.

The other difficulty was the low water in great stretches of the river. The water which once came down from the upper tributaries of the Mississippi is evidently going somewhere else. There are months now when no water flows over the noted falls of St. Anthony, at Minneapolis—a condition unheard of in the old days of heavy traffic on the upper river. The problem here is one for engineers, but obviously a system of locks is necessary.

Neither problem should remain long unsolved. And neither will, if only the next Congress appreciates the spirit of enterprise which sent the S. S. Thorpe on its initial voyage, to revive the usefulness of a great highway which had been long neglected.

Mr. Hughes no longer wears his full length of whiskers. It may be recalled that he lost the presidency in 1916 by a close shave.



STILL WONDERING WHAT IT MEANS.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

AN INSIDE OPINION.

From the Daily Oklahoman.

IT WAS the voice of authority speaking when Col. John T. Axton, chief of chaplains of the United States Army, told a Washington congregation that the decline in Protestant church membership is largely due to the propensity of many clergymen to discuss almost any subject but the doctrine of eternal salvation enunciated nearly 20 centuries ago. The clerical source of the indictment gives it a force it would not possess if it had come from a recognized worldling or from the secular press.

Care was shown by Colonel Axton to avoid a comprehensive indictment and not make his charge all-inclusive. His attack was directed to a certain element of the ministry and was confined to those who admittedly have given offense. He carefully singled out those who apparently have forgotten the cause they were called to present and who have made their pulpits broadcasting stations for almost everything except the religion of the Nazarene. He shoots straight at the heart of ecclesiastical Gantryism and at nothing else.

Point is given the chaplain's argument by the fact that no declension in church membership is observable in congregations where the bread of life is broken on each succeeding Sabbath and where the beauties of holiness are extolled in language dignified and refined. Deterioration is most evident where tactics have been borrowed from Barnum and congregations converted into semi-political clubs. Churches that deal with the eternal verities and seek to satisfy the life-hunger of the multitude have lost none of their appeal. The mildew is found where mountebanks turn handsprings in the pulpit, deny the American's right to religious freedom, and let loose on disgusted congregations a conglomeration of offensive language that written laws have barred from the streets.

The revolt that is evidenced by an annual loss of 500,000 church affiliants is not directed against the cross, the mountain sermon, or the golden rule. It is directed against the manifest determination of ministerial misfits to lower the pulpit to the level of vaudeville and fill with unrefined indecencies houses dedicated to the glory of a risen Christ.

COMING AND GOING.

From the Savannah News.

JUST when Dayton, Tenn., had Mr. Darwin nicely buried, along comes the new president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science and tells the world Darwin was right. Furthermore, while maybe none of the apes with which we are acquainted looks exactly like our remote ancestors, nevertheless that ancestor was more like an ape than he is like ourselves. Which may be comforting to some folks. At any rate, if we did start to evolve ourselves from old Grandfather Ape we have something to be proud of—we were not satisfied to be apes. Which recalls the suggestion somebody has made, to build a monument to the first man-ancestor-monkey who dropped out of a tree, cut off his tail and said, "I'll be switched if I ever climb another tree!" Anyhow, if this scientist should happen to have guessed right, the improvement from monkey to man, if any, lends hope for improvement from man to something that is as much better than men as he is better than a monkey. How would you like to come back to old earth a million years from now and see what your descendants have made of the human race? At that, maybe you'd better not come back. You might be terribly disappointed.

CHANGE IN PUBLIC ARCHITECTURE.

From the Los Angeles Times.

MOST unusual of all our State capitols, the one recently built by Nebraska at a cost of $10,000,000, is a blending of ancient and modern types of architecture, the Egyptian predominating. The main entrance is said to resemble an old Egyptian temple, while the Governor's suite is modeled after rooms in famous cathedrals and castles of Southern Europe.

Nearly all our State capitols are of Graeco-Roman design, which is dignified without being severe. But modern architects of public buildings are going in for the Egyptian and ancient Spanish styles, simplifying them in a way that produces an exterior effect which has been criticised for its extreme severity. The setback style adopted by some of the designers of New York's big buildings is being imitated all over the country. It is simple and as its walls are built up in great steps or buttresses, it is of great stability, and is calculated to endure the ravages of time.

Ruskin says that "all good architecture is expression of national life and character." However, it is rarely an original expression, often denoting little more than taste in selection of old designs or the blending of them in a harmonious whole.

One wonders if Nebraska's adoption of the Egyptian idea, with its massive proportions, will be followed by other States in future capitol building. More than likely we shall have a greater variety than that seen in the almost uniform Greek and Roman models of our present State capitols; but it is going to take a long time to effect the change.

LAWLESS LAW ENFORCEMENT.

From the Chicago Tribune.

THE policy of the Federal authorities exemplified in the protection of Farley and Hudson, dry agents implicated in the killing of Percy Ingmire, is a public outrage. Farley, while drunk, drove a Government car into Ingmire's, killing the latter and crippling his widow for life. In the back seat was Hudson, also drunk. Both agents were indicted for murder in the California court, but the Federal authorities removed the case to the Federal Courts, where, by a recent agreement with the State authorities, Farley, who drove the car, will be permitted to plead guilty of manslaughter and Hudson will be released. It is reported that Hudson will be taken back into the dry enforcement service later.

The excuse offered for the Government's action in saving Farley and Hudson from the full consequences of their conduct was that they were intoxicated in the pursuit of duty; that is, they had taken liquor for the purpose of trapping a suspected vender, a woman, and were taking her and witnesses or alleged accomplices to custody when the collision with the Ingmire car occurred. The theory and policy of the authorities are an invitation to murder under the guise of law enforcement. They encourage the most unscrupulous and reckless conduct on the part of men employed to enforce the law, not break it.

BALLADE TO MY LADY.

To hymn the sun at rosy morn
When Nature wakes as from a dream
Must leave the bard bereft, forlorn—
The song should always match the theme;
Yet ever trite our words must seem
When day shines forth serenely clear
Though with fond praise our verses teem
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

To hymn the rose despite its thorn,
And really tell how we esteem
The rose—the poet's not yet born—
The song should always match the theme
We put in words the faintest gleam
Of thoughts that fade and disappear
In words so trite they needs blaspheme
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

If words are useless to adorn
The rose that we so lightly deem
I fear to rouse my lady's scorn—
The song should always match the theme
How put in words your charms supreme
If even roses make me fear?
To plan to hymn you—sorry scheme—
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

L'ENVOI.

Forego the rose, the sun's first beam—
The song should always match the theme
Then how sing you, whom I revere?
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

When Wheeler and Smi Met at 1924 Conve

Wheeler answering the question: "What chance has Al Smith for President?"

"None. No brewer's press agent can hope to become President of the United States."

Now that sounded so rough on Gov. Smith, but we held it up; in fact the questionnaire never was completed, but was to be left over until fall. But it was only the side which Wheeler turned to the public. There was another side to the case that the public did not see. For instance:

In 1924, when the Democratic National convention at New York City was heading for the rocks between the conflicting efforts of the Smith and McAdoo supporters to gain control, Wayne B. Wheeler was on the scene as the spokesman for the drys. He was out and out for McAdoo, the dry candidate.

Some of the Smith supporters sought in vain to win over to support the Smith candidacy. Wheeler was obdurate. He had looked up Smith's record from his infancy and the record didn't look good to dry eyes. He said so — courteously but vigorously.

"But you are mistaken," persisted the Smith supporter. "Have you ever met Gov. Smith?"

"No."

"Well, won't you meet him and talk with him? I am sure you would change your views."

"I'm sure I wouldn't," Wheeler hedged.

"Well, you'll meet him anyway, won't you?"

Wheeler looked his man straight in the eye.

"Did Gov. Smith send you to me with that suggestion?"

The persistent one was covered with confusion. He explained he was engaged in his mission without Smith's consent or even knowledge of what he was doing. In fact, he probably would find it very hard to get Gov. Smith to consent to such a meeting.

"Just what I thought," said Wheeler. "It would certainly hurt Smith's chances even to be seen with me."

Wheeler and Smith Meet.

Finally, however, persistent pressure on both Wheeler and Smith resulted in a meeting between them. This meeting occurred when the convention was in deadlock. It has never until this day been given publicity. It was at a New York club and the two men, arch - enemies, politically, were left alone more than half an hour. Both emerged smiling.

"What did you talk about?" I asked Wheeler.

"Well, we talked a little about prohibition, but mostly we swapped stories and got pretty well acquainted."

"Did you get an idea as to where Gov. Smith would stand, on the National ticket, so far as prohibition is concerned?"

"Yes; I have an idea Gov. Smith would announce he would obey the wishes of the people and carry out the party platform. But shucks! He wouldn't have any more chance than a grasshopper with a turkey gobbler. The wets would get him before he could say Jack Robinson."

"Why not publish that in your history of the League?"

"No; it might be misunderstood and might do Gov. Smith harm. He didn't see the matter in that view any more than I did anyhow, a meeting of that kind isn't of great consequence.

Part in Volstead Act.

What was of great importance, however, was the part Wheeler played in drafting the Volstead act. It was only after much digging that I overcame Wheeler's modesty and got him to talk.

By firing one question after the other, I learned that what stands today was drafted in its entirety by Wheeler. Before starting in on making he draft, Wheeler had every State prohibition law in books. He studied carefully the prohibition laws that had previously had been drawn by States and counties.

From this considerable compilation, he selected those passages which were considered part of the laws. These he incorporated in his draft. He then added what appeared to be the best passages of other laws. The whole he built up, climaxing with the text of what became the Volstead Act.

This draft, although Wheeler, ran the gauntlet of deliberations and conferences and finally was whipped into shape. Wheeler did more than that. He also virtually managed the passage of Volstead act. He was chosen to introduce it. Volstead was only chairman of the Judiciary committee in the House.

Volstead introduced the bill, but Wheeler pulled all the strings in command—and they were pulled to have it passed. Everybody knows, it was passed in the House by a large majority.

When Wheeler appeared before Congress, as he frequently did during the years intervening the passage of the act, he did it in a private capacity since become a paid agent of organizations. He was frequently time by buttonholing members of Congress with members. He knew where they stood and kept the news back to their bailiwicks.

The local Antisaloon organizations then got the receipt of word from Wheeler passed the word down within 48 hours the member was deluged with telegrams and letters from his district telling him to vote dry legislation.

That was new to Congress. And how it worked! Many wet members felt it necessary to get in line for dry legislation. The voice of the voters was heard in their command and they disregardless, in most cases, of their own inclination.

The method has changed. The threadbare in reconstruction is no longer so successful. Wayne B. Wheeler is dead. The original idea of lining up "dry" or "wet" just that way. But the fact that, despite the fact that back home had helped win many battle under the Colors. Wheeler kept his sense of fair play and his ability to attract everybody. Years afterwards, "Wheelerism" had become the name of Wheeler's method to the ears of

When Wheeler and Smith Met at 1924 Convention

Wheeler answering the question: "What chance has Al Smith for the nomination?"

"None. No brewer's press agent has hope to become President of the United States."

Now that sounded so rough on poor Smith, but we held it up; in fact the questionnaire never was completed, but was to be left over until fall. But it was only the side which Wheeler turned to the public. There was another side to the story that the public did not see. For instance:

In 1924, when the Democratic National convention at New York City was heading for the rocks between the conflicting efforts of the Smith and McAdoo supporters to gain control, Wayne B. Wheeler was on the scene as the spokesman for the drys. He was out and out for McAdoo, the dry candidate. Some of the Smith supporters sought in vain to win him over to support the Smith candidacy. Wheeler was obdurate. He had looked up Smith's record from his infancy and the record didn't look good to dry eyes. He said so — courteously but vigorously.

"But you are mistaken," protested the Smith supporter. "Have you ever met Gov. Smith?"

"No."

"Well, won't you meet him and talk with him? I am sure you would change your views."

"I'm sure I wouldn't," Wheeler hedged.

"Well, you'll meet him anyway, won't you?"

Wheeler looked his man straight in the eye.

"Did Gov. Smith send you to me with that suggestion?"

The persistent one was covered with confusion. He explained he was engaged in his mission with Smith's consent or even knowledge of what he was doing. In fact, he probably would find it very hard to get Gov. Smith to consent to such a meeting.

"Just what I thought," said Wheeler. "It would certainly hurt Smith's chances even to be seen with me."

Wheeler and Smith Meet.

Finally, however, persistent pressure on both Wheeler and Smith resulted in a meeting between them. This meeting occurred when the convention was in deadlock. It has never until this day been given publicity. It was at a New York club and the two men, arch - enemies, politically, were left alone more than half an hour. Both emerged smiling.

"What did you talk about?" I asked Wheeler.

"Well, we talked a little about prohibition, but mostly we swapped stories and got pretty well acquainted."

"Did you get an idea as to where Gov. Smith would stand, on the National ticket, so far as prohibition is concerned?"

"Yes; I have an idea Gov. Smith would announce he would obey the wishes of the people and carry out the party platform. But shucks! He wouldn't have any more chance than a grasshopper with a turkey gobbler. The wets would get him before he could say Jack Robinson."

"Why not publish that in your history of the League?"

"No; it might be misunderstood and might do Gov. Smith some harm. He didn't seek the interview any more than I did, and anyhow, a meeting of that sort isn't of great consequence."

Part in Volstead Act.

What was of great consequence, however, was the part Wheeler played in drafting the Volstead act. It was only after persistent digging that I overcame his modesty and got him to tell me of it.

By firing one question after another, I learned that the law as it stands today was drafted virtually in its entirety by Wayne B. Wheeler. Before starting the task of making he draft, Wheeler studied every State prohibition law on the books. He studied also many of the prohibition laws which previously had been drafted by cities and counties.

From this considerable accumulation, he selected first the passages which were common to most of the laws. These he embodied in his draft. He then selected what appeared to be the most effective passages of other laws. From the whole he built up, clause by clause, the text of what afterwards became the Volstead act.

This draft, although prepared by Wheeler, ran the gamut of many deliberations and committee meeting and finally was whipped into shape. Wheeler did the whipping. He also virtually made the selection of Volstead as the man to introduce it. Volstead was then chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House.

Volstead introduced the bill and Wheeler pulled all the wires at his command—and they were many—to have it passed. As everyone knows, it was passed by both Houses by a large majority.

When Wheeler applied pressure to Congress, as he did fairly often during the years immediately preceding the passage of the Volstead act, he did it in a way that has since become a pattern for other organizations. He did not waste time by buttonholing or pleading with members. He found out where they stood and then wired the news back to their respective bailiwicks.

The local Antisaloon League organizations then got busy. On receipt of word from Wheeler they passed the word down the line and within 48 hours the recalcitrant member was deluged beneath telegrams and letters from his home district telling him to support the dry legislation.

That was new in those days. And how it worked! Personally wet members fell over themselves to get in line for dry measures. The voice of the voters back home was their command and they obeyed it, regardless, in most cases, of their inclination.

The method has been worked threadbare in recent years, and it is no longer so successful. But to Wayne B. Wheeler came the original idea of lining up Congress in just that way. It was that idea, plus the fact that the organization back home had the vote, that helped win many a hard-fought battle under the Capitol dome.

Wheeler kept his winning smile, his sense of fair play and his ability to attract even his adversaries. Years afterwards, when the term "Wheelerism" had been coined and the name of Wheeler was anathema to the ears of those opposing him, he was investigated by the Senate subcommittee, headed by James A. Reed of Missouri, a bitter anti-Wheeler man.

One morning, during the course of hearings when Wheeler had been spending days on the stand under Reed's merciless cross-examination, Reed and Wheeler were soon engaged in confidential and apparently genial conversation just before the meeting came to order. This continued several minutes. Presently Reed left him.

"Come on, let's get this meeting started," Reed threw back over his shoulder. "I'm getting entirely too chummy with you."

How U. S. Reports Are Guarded Against Speculators

said to have gained a 15-minute advantage over his rivals and made $17,000 on the stock market as the result of a minor leak. He had appeared before the court in a New York public utilities case which had been consolidated with a similar suit from a Southern State. Similar issues were involved and the arguments of both cases were heard at the same time.

In handing down the decisions, however, the Court followed the not unusual practice of separating the cases. One of the Justices read the Southern State decision first. The lawyer, realizing that the Court would have to render a similar decision in the New York case, quietly slipped out of the courtroom, called up a New York broker and gave the correct order to buy or sell. Fifteen minutes later his judgment was vindicated when the same Justice read the decision in the New York case, holding the same as had been decided in the Southern State case.

There was no way to punish the lawyer. When the Justice was informed what had taken place he merely commented: "That old rascal!"

A Tip That Failed.

The Justices themselves have been guilty of unwittingly giving out advance information. One legend is that a long while back one of the Justices lectured in a local law school. To make his instruction more interesting he advised his students to come to the Supreme Court and listen to the various arguments. In the lecture room he discussed the pending cases, and sometimes predicted the outcome. A New York brokerage office assigned one of its bright young men to attend these lectures and report to his superiors. Things went well until an important decision was awaited. The Justice brought this case up in his lectures and said that the Supreme Court could decide only one way. The bright young man informed his office to that effect. When the decision was finally handed down it was the reverse of what the Justice had predicted. The only alibi the young broker had was a long, vigorous dissent from the lecturing Justice.

These examples are rare exceptions. Speculators have learned not to look for leaks from the highest court in the land. Many, many years ago, there was a scandal when one of the secretaries of a Justice conspired with two or three other persons to use advance information about a decision the Justice was writing. He and two others of the conspirators were indicted. It was fould that they had made a relatively small amount on the market.

Lawyers refuse to forecast what a Supreme Court decision will be. The Justices frame their questions so adroitly that nothing can be learned during the oral arguments, or else they throw everyone off the track by seeming to favor the weaker side. When the Edward F. Goltra barge line case was before the court, Lon O. ocker, special attorney for Gen. T. Q. Ashburn and the Inland Waterways Corporation, was subjected to almost brutal interrogation by the court. After the hearing, Goltra was jubilant and the Government group was downhearted. Yet when the decision was rendered the only satisfaction Goltra got was a sarcastic dissenting opinion by Justice McReynolds.

He Knows in Aadvance.

Outside the nine Justices of the court only one other person knows in advance what a Supreme Court decision will be. That man is Clarence E. Bright, manager of a printing company in Washington.

BALLADE TO MY LADY.

To hymn the sun at rosy morn
When Nature wakes as from a dream
Must leave the bard bereft, forlorn—
The song should always match the theme;
Yet ever trite our words must seem
When day shines forth serenely clear;
Though with fond praise our verses teem,
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

To hymn the rose despite its thorn,
And really tell how we esteem
The rose—the poet's not yet born—
The song should always match the theme.
We put in words the faintest gleam
Of thoughts that fade and disappear,
In words so trite they needs blaspheme,
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

If words are useless to adorn
The rose that we so lightly deem
I fear to rouse my lady's scorn—
The song should always match the theme;
How put in words your charms supreme
If even roses make me fear?
To plan to hymn you—sorry scheme—
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

L'ENVOI.

Forego the rose, the sun's first beam—
The song should always match the theme;
Then how sing you, whom I revere?
Our songs are all imperfect, dear.

British producers of American plays, in an effort to have their players speak like Americans, are using phonograph records of speeches of Taft and Wilson as models. Objection has been offered that Taft speaks like an Ohioan and that Wilson had a Virginia accent. Why not use the immortal disc which carries the precious words of the original 100 per cent American, William J. Simmons of Atlanta, uttered as he accepted the toga as Grand Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan?

Corns Now Needless

Prove It Overnight!

Why keep "treating" corns, when the first drop of Freezone stops all sensation of pain, and a few drops soon end the corn!

The most painful corn, even one sensitive to touch of stocking, can't throb ten seconds ofter Freezone comes in contact. All that's left to do, is lift the corn right off and it's gone! Isn't that better than surgery?

Feet that are "sights" from corns can grow back to normal, unblemished condition through the use of Freezone. Meantime, no pain—none at all—and no awkward pads or plasters to cause shoes to pinch and cultivate corns in other places.

The Freezone process is scientific and certain. The hardest corn that ever formed can't resist it—nor the soft corns between the toes where nothing has ever helped. A tiny bottle of Freezone copes with the worst condition of corns. Freezone has made it folly to have any corns at all, for any length of time.

For your own comfort, investigate Freezone. Every druggist has it, and the cost is a few cents!

How U. S. Reports Are Guarded From Speculators

He refuses to talk about his unique position and will not tell how it feels to be the only person who is trusted with the secrets of the court. Even the attaches of his establishment have been instructed to reveal nothing of the contract that the firm has with the Supreme Court. The officers of the company do not even want it to be known that they have the contract. They are content to let people believe that the decisions are handled by the Government Printing Office, which does all the other Government printing. The contract has been let to a private company because special work can be expedited.

When a Justice writes a decision, nine proofs are made. These are distributed to the Justices who make whatever suggestions they deem proper. One proof is corrected and sent back to the printing establishment, where the decision is set up in book form.

Bright, of course, does not actually set the type of the decisions. This work is done by compositors who receive only a brief section or "take," too little for them to tell what the decision is about. Bright assembles the type and is said to set the last paragraph himself. The last paragraph is almost invariably the clincher of the decision. It tells whether the decision of the lower court has been affirmed or reversed. Bright takes charge of the proofs and alone has sole access to the type. The proofs are delivered in a sealed envelope by Bright himself to the Chief Justice. Until the decision is read only 10 men know what those proofs contain. Even the trusted officers of the court are not permitted to see them until the decision has been handed down from the bench.

President's Message.

Several other branches of the Government have information that market speculators seek to get in advance of the public. To obtain the President's message long before it was delivered was once considered a coup. Now it is given out far in advance and since the war has not had a marked effect on the markets.

The Treasury Department has two bits of information the speculators are seeking. The first is the dates for raising or lowering of the Federal Reserve Board's discount rate, the second is the weekly announcement of brokers' loans. The first is kept a strict secret, although there are occasional rumors. The brokers' loan figures, which show the amount of borrowing for stock market purposes, had a marked influence on the market when they were released by the Federal Reserve Board each Monday, four days after they were received. The Board changed its policy of holding these figures when it noticed this effect and realized the possibilities of a leak. Now these figures are released upon receipt.

I. C. C. Not So Cautious.

The Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission take comparatively few precautions to guard against leaks, in fact, the Federal Trade Commission has made available important decisions several days before they were allowed to be made public. Railroad attorneys and other persons who watch the Interstate Commerce Commission have either developed an uncanny faculty of predicting what the Interstate Commerce will decide or else they have some means of ascertaining what is going on behind the closed doors. The rumors concerning pending decisions of the Commerce Commission have a peculiar habit of proving true. About the only recent decisions of the Commerce Commission that kept the market worried were the stands taken on the Van Sweringen and the Loree merger proposals. So far as the writer knows, no one pretended to have the inside on what the commission intended to do on these issues. On the other hand, rumors of what the commission would do in the St. Louis & O'Fallon Railway valuation case floated about Washington for a week before the decision was made public. That decision had virtually no effect on the market. The explanation given here was that the operators had known it was coming.

Newspaper men could take advantage of the confidential information they receive if they were not bound by an unwritten code of ethics. It seems at times that some of the Government agencies are attempting to test the integrity of those whom they trust with their confidences.

A striking example of this was occasioned two years ago by the order of the Federal Trade Commission to the International Shoe Co. of St. Louis to divest itself of the capital stock of the W. H. McElwain Co., a former competitor of Boston. A dissenting opinion declared that "to issue this order will in all probability cause innocent stockholders to lose millions of dollars," a direct indication that the International stock would go down when the order was made public. The announcement of the order was in newspaper office three days before it could be published. When the news story about the order was published, International Shoe dropped eight points on the St. Louis market.

Washington is accustomed to talk about leaks and inside information. The real leaks from authentic sources like the Supreme Court, the Crop Reporting Board and the Treasury are truly well guarded against and develop only by rare accident. Like the other leaks they are too easily traced to the source and they leave their mark on those who seek to dabble in them.

ST. LOUIS R

HIGH-POWERED STATIONS TEND TO OVERCOME STATIC

50,000 and 100,000 Watt Transmitters in East Heard Remarkably Well in St. Louis.

Experiments in the East with high-powered radio broadcast transmitters ranging in power as high as 100,000 watts indicate important possibilities in the overriding of static as well as distance. WGY, at Schenectady, N. Y., using 100,000 watts; WEAF, at New York, with its new 50,000-watt station, and the Bell Telephone Laboratories, at Whippany, N. J., with a new transmitter with a capacity up to 50,000 watts, have been becoming into the Middle West during certain experimental hours with all the power and clarity of locals.

A National Electric Light Association report recently said that greater power for broadcasting stations probably will be the only way to eliminate man-made static and interference with radio reception. The report is the result of two years' work of a special committee and represents the combined technical skill of engineering staffs of electric light and power companies in all sections of the country in an effort to solve problems in eliminating radio interference.

"Development of radio transmitters of greater power and receivers of less sensitivity and greater selectivity," the report declares, "is probably the only means of satisfactorily eliminating man-made static."

Heard Strongly in St. Louis.

Commenting on the report, Chairman W. H. G. Bullard of the Radio Commission said it obviously was impossible, with the present number of stations, to permit increases in power. He said he thought the report interesting and instructive, and that it would receive the consideration of the commission. But, he added, at present "it is impossible for the commission to permit power increases."

WGY was authorized by the Radio Commission to transmit with 100,000 watts from 9 to 10 p. m. Central Time for 30 days up to Aug. 31. Tests were made using 30,000 and 100,000 watts alternately. An extension was granted, so that WGY could experiment with 100,000 watts from 9 to 10 p. m. from Aug. 31 to Sept. 15.

Night after night WGY has been received with extraordinary power in St. Louis. Observers, voluntary and appointive, all over this country have written several thousand letters and reports on the transmission experiments and these are being analyzed.

With very few exceptions the 100,000-watt transmissions appear to have met the favor of the radio listeners. The single complaint is that fading continues on high power in most places where fading is observable on the 30,000-watt transmission. However, to offset this are thousands of letters in which is is stated that the 100,000-watt signals come in with the volume and clearness of local stations, overriding every form of summer-time interference. Many who lived outside of the limits of any "local" station, informed WGY that they received pure, uninterrupted signals for the first time since early spring.

Little Difference Near Station.

Reception in Schnectady and immediate vicinity appears to be little different under the 30,000 and 100,000-watt conditions. Radio receiving sets which were selective enough to tune out the lesser signals and pick up outside stations have no difficulty in tuning out the 100,000-watt signals and bringing in outside stations within 20 kilocycles of WGY's frequency.

According to Martin P. Rice, director of broadcasting for the General Electric Co., the 100,000-watt transmitter delivers a more reliable and clean-cut signal to receivers that formerly had received the 30,000-watt and 50,000-watt broadcasts from WGY considerably marred by ground noise and static. While many listeners report less fading, apparently an equal number report no change noticeable in regard to fading. The outstanding comment is that the 100,000 transmitter delivers the program free from static and local interference.

Bell Tests Interesting.

While the 50,000-watt WEAF transmitter has been accepted as satisfactory and has given a clarity and quality new to broadcasting, its signals, apparently, have not been so generally received here as have those from WGY. Yet over many thousands of square miles of country WEAF has been heard, when the 50,000 watts were used.

HIGH-POWERED STATIONS TEND TO OVERCOME STATIC

50,000 and 100,000 Watt Transmitters in East Heard Remarkably Well in St. Louis.

Experiments in the East with high-powered radio broadcast transmitters ranging in power as high as 100,000 watts indicate important possibilities in the overcoming of static as well as distance. WJY, at Schenectady, N. Y., using 50,000 watts; WEAF, at New York, with its new 50,000-watt station, and the Bell Telephone Laboratories, at Whippany, N. J., with new transmitter with a capacity up to 50,000 watts, have been coming into the Middle West during certain experimental hours with all the power and clarity of locals.

A National Electric Light Association report recently said that greater power for broadcasting stations probably will be the only way to eliminate man-made static and interference with radio reception. The report is the result of two years' work of a special committee and represents the combined technical skill of engineering staffs of electric light and power companies in all sections of the country in an effort to solve problems in eliminating radio interference.

"Development of radio transmitters of greater power and receivers of less sensitivity and greater selectivity," the report declares, "is probably the only means of satisfactorily eliminating man-made static."

Heard Strongly in St. Louis.

Commenting on the report, Chairman W. H. G. Bullard of the Radio Commission said it obviously was impossible, with the present number of stations, to permit increases in power. He said he thought the report interesting and instructive, and that it would receive the consideration of the commission. But, he added, at present it is impossible for the commission to permit power increases.'

WGY was authorized by the Radio Commission to transmit with 50,000 watts from 9 to 10 p. m. Central Time for 30 days up to Aug. 31. Tests were made using 30,000 and 100,000 watts alternately. An extension was granted, so that WGY could experiment with 100,000 watts from 9 to 10 p. m. from Aug. 31 to Sept. 15.

Night after night WGY has been received with extraordinary power in St. Louis. Observers, voluntary and appointive, all over this country have written several thousand letters and reports on the transmission experiments and these are being analyzed.

With very few exceptions the 50,000-watt transmissions appear to have met the favor of the radio listeners. The single complaint is that fading continues on high power in most places where fading is observable on the 30,000-watt transmission. However, to offset this are thousands of letters in which is is stated that the 100,000-watt signals come in with the volume and clearness of local stations, overriding every form of summer-time interference. Many who lived outside of the limits of any "local" station, informed WGY that they received pure, uninterrupted signals for the first time since early spring.

Little Difference Near Station.

Reception in Schnectady and immediate vicinity appears to be little different under the 30,000 and 100,000-watt conditions. Radio receiving sets which were selective enough to tune out the lesser signals and pick up outside stations have no difficulty in tuning out the 100,000-watt signals and bringing in outside stations within 20 kilocycles of WGY's frequency.

According to Martin P. Rice, director of broadcasting for the General Electric Co., the 100,000-watt transmitter delivers a more reliable and clean-cut signal to receivers that formerly had received the 30,000-watt and 50,000-watt broadcasts from WGY considerably marred by ground noise and static. While many listeners report less fading, apparently an equal number report no change noticeable in regard to fading. The outstanding comment is that the 100,000 transmitter delivers the program free from static and local interference.

Bell Tests Interesting.

While the 50,000-watt WEAF transmitter has been accepted as satisfactory and has given a clarity and quality new to broadcasting, its signals, apparently, have not been so generally received here as were those from WGY. Yet over many thousands of square miles of country WEAF has been heard, when the 50,000 watts were used.

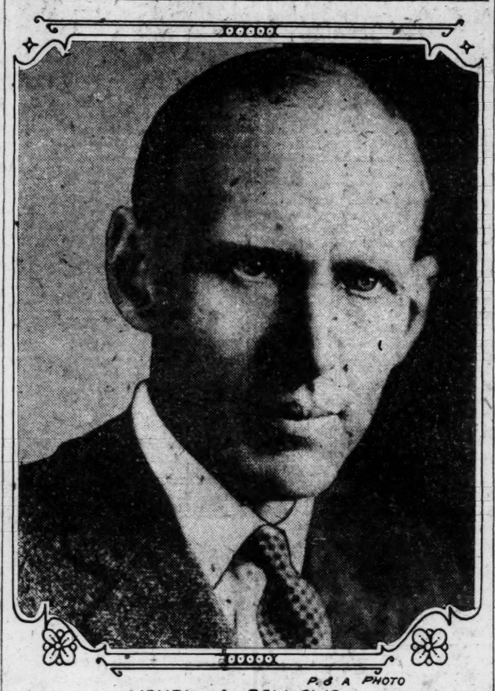
Radio Commissioner to Speak At St. Louis Radio Exposition



P. & A. PHOTO

HENRY A. BELLOWS

Federal Radio Commissioner, who is to be in St. Louis on Saturday, Sept. 24, and is to speak that evening at the St. Louis Radio Show. His address is to be broadcast from the crystal studio at the show by KSD, radio station of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Audience at Radio Show To Decide Singing Contest

Twelve Women and as Many Men in Atwater Kent Competition Which KSD Is to Broadcast.

As a result of elimination contests the past week, 12 young women and 12 men singers, all under 25 years of age, are to appear next Tuesday and Wednesday in the "Crystal Studio" at the St. Louis radio show to compete for the honor of representing the St. Louis district in the Missouri State finals Oct. 10 and 11 in the nationwide Atwater Kent competition to discover beautiful new voices for radio broadcasting.

A number of good voices were revealed in the eliminations, which were held Thursday and Friday nights in the jade room of the Congress Hotel. Quite a few of the competitors showed that they had done more or less broadcasting, and some displayed ability in shading and phrasing.

Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, chairman of the district competition committee, was in charge of the eliminations, as she will be of the competition at the radio show and of the State finals. The jury for the elimination contests was composed of officers of federated women's clubs and of the music sections of federated clubs.

Everyone attending the St. Louis radio show at the Coliseum next Tuesday and Wednesday nights will have an opportunity to decide by ballot which of the voices in the competition are the best. Natural quality of voice is to be the basis on which the best male and the best female voice are to be selected.

KSD will broadcast the competition at the show, beginning at 8:30 each of the two nights, as it will also the State finals.

As has been told, winners of the various Missouri district contests will compete in the State finals, winners of which will go to Chicago for the Mid-West competition. A man and a woman winner in the Chicago contest will enter the national finals, which will be held in New York and will be broadcast throughout the country. In the national finals a total of $17,500 in money and scholarships in leading conservatories will be awarded.

The boy and girl winning first place in the national finals are to get a gold decoration, $5000 and two years' tuition in a conservatory.

The boy and girl judged second best are to get $2000 each and a year's tuition. Third place winners will get $1000 each and a year's tuition. Fourth and fifth place winners are to get $500 and $250 each, respectively.

WOC AND WWJ ARE PUT ON NEW WAVE LENGTHS

Bellows Said to Predict Number of High-Powered Stations Will Increase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The following changes in broadcasting stations are reported by the Federal Radio Commission:

WWJ, Detroit, changed from 374.8 meters, 800 kilocycles, to 352.7 meters, 850 kilocycles.

WOC, Davenport, changed from 352.7 meters, 850 kilocycles, to 374.8 meters, 800 kilocycles.

WTMJ, Milwaukee, has been given permission to operate full time on 293.9 meters, 1020 kilocycles.

WHAD, Milwaukee, has been changed from 293.9 meters, 1020 kilocycles, to 270.1 meters, 1110 kilocycles.

WSOE, Milwaukee, will divide time on 270.1 meters, 1110 kilocycles, with WHAD.

As a step toward clearing up a congested broadcasting situation in the Middle West, the Federal Radio Commission has ordered WFBM, operated by the Indianapolis Light & Power Co., now on 1330 kilocycles, and WKBF, operated by N. B. Watson of Indianapolis, now using 1180 kilocycles to share time on 1090 kilocycles and to operate with 250 watts power each.

When the two stations move to the outskirts of Indianapolis, WFBM will be permitted to use 1000 watts and WKBF 500 watts.

To make room for these stations on the lower broadcast bands, the commission directed station WTAS, Chicago, to switch from 1090 to 1040 kilocycles and to share time with WBCN and WENR of the same city on the lower frequency.

The commission also ordered station WORD, People's Pulpit Association, at Batavia, Ill., to change from 1090 to 1070 kilocycles, to use not more than 12 hours a week and to divide time with WBBM, WJBT and WAAF, Chicago.

The changes were in line with a statement by Commissioner Bellows that the commission's policy from now on would be in two directions—to eliminate interference wherever possible, and to revoke licenses of stations declining to adhere to their assigned wave lengths.

He predicted that high powered stations would grow in number and said the commission would favor such stations because of their ability better to serve the public.

NEW FEATURES ON KSD ARRANGED FOR FALL AND WINTER

Aeolian, Hoover, Sealey Periods Among Those Scheduled to Begin in Near Future.

The finest broadcasting that KSD has put on the air is being arranged for the fall and winter.

In addition to the Atwater Kent Hour, the Philco Hour which began recently, the Eveready Hour, the Ipana Troubadours, the Goodrich Silvertown Hour, the La France period, the Whittal Anglo-Persians, and the light opera, the following features are among those scheduled:

A Sealey Corporation broadcast, beginning Sept. 27. This will be given by harmony singers, a novelty orchestra and two Negro characters.

Great Moments in History, beginning Sept. 27. This dramatization of important historical incidents has been broadcast before by KSD, and is interesting and informative.

An Aeolian Hour, to begin Oct. 5.

Betty Crocker's talks to housewives in the Washburn & Crosby Gold Medal Period. This feature, which was very popular among women when broadcast by KSD last fall and winter, is to be resumed Oct. 5. It is scheduled for Wednesdays and Fridays.

The Hoover Sentinels, sponsored by the Hoover Co. This is to be a "quartet of quartets," including four string instruments, four brass instruments, four woodwind and four singers. It is scheduled to begin Oct. 6.

The Smith Brothers, who broadcast through KSD last season. This feature will bring a baritone and a tenor, in songs, and banjo, piano and saxophone numbers.

Weekly broadcasts of bridge games, sponsored by the United States Playing Card Co., as last season. This feature is to be resumed Nov. 1.

Arrangements have been virtually completed for broadcasting other interesting weekly programs, which will be announced soon.

WHO, DES MOINES, TO JOIN NATIONAL BROADCAST NETWORK

Rumors that station WHO, Des Moines, Ia., had joined the chain of broadcasting stations being formed under the name of the Columbia Broadcasting system were settled following the joint announcement by W. H. Heinz, manager of WHO, and Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., stating that the Des Moines station would become a member of the National Broadcasting company's network in the early fall."

It is expected the wire facilities will be ready for the addition of WHO at the same time WOW, Omaha, is to be added, which will be about Oct. 1.

5000-WATT TRANSMITTER FOR KFJF, IN OKLAHOMA CITY

Oklahoma City is to have a super-power broadcasting station. KFJF has been given permission to start work on a 5000-watt transmitter by the Federal Radio Commission, according to announcement of Dudley Shaw, manager. The new station will be 12 miles east of the city limits. The equipment to be installed will be variable, permitting any power from 5000 to 20,000 watts, Shaw said.

CHAIN OF LABOR STATIONS PLANNED WITH DEBS FUND

Ready to begin broadcasting labor programs from Station WEVD in New York, the Debs Memorial Radio Fund is said to be planning to establish a chain of labor radio stations which will present to the radio audience the aspirations of the labor movement of America.

WEVD is to begin to function officially Oct. 1 on 245.8 meters, 1220 kilocycles.

First of Columbia Chain Programs on KMOX Today

Many Noted Artists to Take Part — Grand Opera, "The King's Henchman," to Be Evening Feature.

Precedents for formal openings are to be disregarded today when KMOX, St. Louis radio station, is to take part in the first broadcast by the new Columbia Broadcasting System, of whose chain of 16 stations it is a member.

More than 100 singers and instrumental artists, some of them making their radio debuts, others known wherever radio receiving sets are to be found, will participate in today's program, arranged to supplement the first broadcast of the outstanding success among American grand operas, Deems Taylor's "The King's Henchman."

Some of the Artists.

For four hours, beginning at 1 o'clock Central standard time, symphonic orchestras, jazz orchestras, male quartets, string and woodwind ensembles, soprano, contralto, tenor and baritone soloists, pianists, violinists, cellists and trumpeters will appear before the Columbia microphone.

Among them will be Redfern Hollinshead, concert tenor; Ivor Kamran, Hungarian violinist; Ossip Giskin, cellist; Alexander Semler, pianist; Don Voorhees and his band of musicians; Red Nichols and woodwind players; Charles Harrison, tenor; Elsie Thiede, soprano; Elizabeth Lennox, contralto; Frank Croxton, basso; Harry Glantz, trumpeter, and others of equal fame and ability.

Promptly at 1 o'clock, without extra formality or ceremony, the identifying "Voice of Columbia" will go onto the air announcing the first feature—"The Vacationists' Return," a musical phantasy dealing with the imagined reminiscences of one returning from a summer abroad. At 2 p. m., will come a feature entitled "The Spirit of the Woods," which will bring forward a symphony orchestra, a mixed quartet, soprano, tenor and baritone, and a brass choir.

Grand Opera Tonight.

At 7 o'clock, Central standard time, "The King's Henchman" will be broadcast with Marie Sundelius, soprano; Rafaelo Diaz, tenor; Giovanni Martino, basso of the Metropolitan, Richard Hale and Henri Scott, baritones, supported by a specially augmented symphony orchestra and a chorus of picked voices, singing the music of Deems Taylor set to Edna St. Vincent Malllay's early Anglo-Saxon story. Taylor will interpret the opera.

A variety hour, with the latest songs from current shows, ballads and ditties of recent years, sung by Hollinshead, Harrison, Croxton and Archibald, will enliven the latter part of the concert. Instrumental and vocal novelties and a group of negro spirituals will be the finale.

Stations in Columbia Chain.

The Columbia System announces its regular weekly schedule, figured in Central Standard Time, will be as follows:

Sundays—1 to 4 p. m.; 2 to 3 p. m.

Mondays—7 to 8 p. m. and 8 to 9 p. m.

Wednesdays—7 to 8 p. m. and 8 to 9 p. m.

Fridays—7 to 8 p. m. and 8 to 9 p. m.

These hours will change when New York City changes from daylight saving time.

The following stations are included in the Columbia chain: WOR, New York-Newark, 422.3 meters; WEAN, Providence, 319; WNAC, Boston, 352.7; WFBL, Syracuse, 258.5; WMAK, Buffalo-Lockport, 545.1; WCAU, Philadelphia, 277.6; WJAS, Pittsburg, 270.1; WADC, Akron, 299.9; WAIU, Columbus, 282.8; WKRC, Cincinnati, 333.1; WGHP, Detroit, 319; WMAQ, Chicago, 447.5; KOIL, Council Bluffs, 277.6; KMOX St. Louis, 299.8; WOWO, Fort Wayne, 228.9; WCAO, Baltimore, 384.4.

As part of the opening week's program will be the return to the microphone of Major J. Andrew White, pioneer in radio, vice-president of the chain, and sports announcer, who will broadcast from the ringside in Chicago the Tunney-Dempsey fight.

The night before the fight, Columbia Chain listeners will hear Major White as master of ceremonies at the radio industries banquet.

Local Features on KMOX.

KMOX has again obtained for its St. Louis studio programs the services of Max Steindel and his string trio, including Joseph Faerber, violinist, and Esmeralda Berry Mayes, violinist and pianist.

Other KMOX features to be presented weekly are to include the Pevely Four, a mixed quartette composed of well known soloists; fantasies interpreted by Grace McGowan, soprano, and Meredith Beckman, tenor, with Jacquinot Jules as organist and Alice Maslin as pianist; the Twinkle Girls, a trio presenting popular songs of the day in close harmony, and a varied dance music program from 10:30 p. m. each evening till 1:00 a. m., with ten different orchestras entertaining.

Allen Taylor will announce the day time programs from KMOX, beginning at 11:00 a. m. each morning, except Sunday. George Junkin, director-announcer, will take over the microphone daily at six p. m. for the evening broadcast.

CALL LETTERS OF SEA ORIGIN

The custom of designating each radio station by call letters is a survival of the sea. It was much easier for a ship to identify itself or to call another, by using a combination of three or four letters than by spelling out its name. A dozen ships might have the same name, but a letter combination be-

LATEST IN SETS AND ACCESSORIES TO BE EXHIBITED

Famous Radio Artists and Announcers to Be Present at Exposition—Entertainment Features.

Elaborate exhibits of the very latest in receiving sets, speakers, power units, parts for professional and home set builders, accessories and table and console models, will be displayed by virtually all the leading radio manufacturers at the annual St. Louis radio show, which will open tomorrow afternoon in the Coliseum and will continue through Saturday night. In addition, there will be broadcasting and stage entertainment, appearances by noted announcers and radio artists, an address by Radio Commissioner Henry A. Bellows, and a convention, with addresses by noted engineers and merchandising experts, for the dealers.

"The exhibits at the third annual Southwest National Radio Exposition emphasize an important phase of radio development," said Robert W. Bennett, president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association. That is, that the improvement in the radio science and industry has been, for the past year, in the tonal quality of the speakers and in furniture. Science has stabilized the science and manufacturers have standardized their products.

Artistic Radio Furniture.

"Never has a science and industry developed so rapidly as has radio. Its development has been phenomenal. From a fad and guess work, in a comparatively short time one of the most potent factors in modern life has been developed. It is not only an instrument to provide entertainment and amusement for leisure hours, but it is now a necessity in commerce, finance, education and aviation.

"Its use in aviation was demonstrated in the recent Hawaiian flights. The aeroplanes equipped with radio instruments arrived safely, while other flyers met with disaster.

"One of the interesting features of the exposition will be an exhibit by the Bureau of Standards in the form of a field intensity measuring set, which is in operation in the air service in Maryland, and soon will be placed on all mail aeroplanes. It is the instrument used by the successful Hawaiian flyers. It is a highly sensitive instrument and unerringly tells a pilot whether he is on his course or is bearing to right or left.

"The exposition has been planned as an educational project as well as a place of entertainment and amusement and a commercial undertaking. Development of the science and industry has been so rapid that even those in the industry have not been able to keep abreast of the progress.

"The display of furniture is superb. It represents the acme of the cabinetmakers' art and craft. Only the finest woods are used in radio cabinets. These woods are carefully selected from the entire world. The designing and making of the cabinets are entrusted only to craftsmen and artisans of the greatest skill. The radio furniture is fashioned with as much skill and art as the finest musical instruments."

Plenty of Entertainment.

The Coliseum is artistically decorated in light blue and silver. A canopy of light blue conceals the iron girders. Against this background of blue, hovering over the arena, is a silver aeroplane, typifying 'The Spirit of St. Louis.'

A "Crystal Studio" has been erected at the south end of the Coliseum at an elevation which permits those on the floor of the arena or in the seats a perfect view of the announcers and artists as they appear before the microphone. The "Crystal Studio" is sound proof, that is, not a sound can penetrate into it from the crowds.

By means of the public address system the program will b heard in the Coliseum and will be broadcast by various stations in St. Louis, including KSD, KMOX, KFVE, WIL and WSBF, throughout the United States.

Graham McNamee, famed announcer, is to be arrive in St. Louis Tuesday, Sept. 20, and to appear in person afternoons and evenings of Sept. 20 and 21. He will depart for Chicago late Wednesday night to announce the Dempsey-Tunney fight from the ringside.

McNamee's word picture of what is happening in the ring will be received at the exposition and will be demonstrated blow for blow by two professional boxers in a "ring" built for this purpose in the Coli-

ONE DAY-FAN SET OPERATED FROM A MOTOR GENERATOR

An unique method of dispensing with batteries and eliminators is found in a new Day-Fan de luxe receiver. This set operates with its own motor generator which supplies hum-free, ripple-free current. This Day-Fan model is one of the most interesting yet designed. It is said to be exceptionally powerful and to have true, beautiful tone quality.

In addition to these motor generator sets, there are battery and AC Day-Fan receivers as well as a 6-tube junior model.

seum, at an elevation permitting an unobstructed view from every part of the exposition. The boxers illustrating McNamee's story of the fight are to be John (Pewee) Kaiser, as Tunney, and Harry Kaboskoff as Dempsey. The illustration will be about a second behind the actual blow, according to E. J. Straus, chairman of the Show Committee.

Notable Features.

A notable show feature Tuesday and Wednesday evenings will be the appearance of 12 young men and women singers each night to compete for the honor of representing the St. Louis district in the State finals in the nationwide Atwater Kent singing contest. The crowds at the show on those evenings will have a vote in deciding which of the 24 singers have the best voices. The contests are to be broadcast from the show by KSD.

Miss Alma Rotter, a St. Louis singer who has won national recognition as a radio and record artist, will appear in the Crystal Studio before the microphone.

The "Silver Masked Tenor" is to appear in the Crystal Studio wearing his silver mask and singing his Irish songs as only a real Irish tenor can sing them. He is scheduled for the afternoon and evening of Friday.

Allen McQuhae, the Irish tenor, who is nationally known and has been heard time and again by KSD's audience as he has sung in Atwater Kent Hours, is scheduled in the "Crystal Studio" afternoon and evening of Thursday. His appearance here is made possible by Brown & Hall Supply Co., Atwater Kent distributer, which is bearing the expense of importing him.

The Ray-O-Vac Twins are on the program for each afternoon and evening.

Among features planned for the visual entertainment will be Eddie Easter and his Six Radio Maids.

"Bill" Bailey's Orchestra will play throughout the exposition.

A stage has been built over the main entrance at the north end where visual entertainment will be presented. The ballot numbers and solo dancing will be under direction of Edwin Easter of Chicago, who was the ballet master of the recent St. Louis fashion pagent and the year before was a member of the Garden Theater Co.

Show Opens Tomorrow.

The exposition will be open to the public tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, though the formal opening will not take place until the evening, at 7 o'clock, when Mayor Victor J. Miller is to make the opening address. He will be introduced by Robert W. Bennett, president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association. Station WSBF will broadcast the official opening.

Special railroad rates have been granted to the exposition and convention on the certificate plan. Dealers, delegates and visitors attending the exposition and convention can get certificates from their local agents and present them to the Convention Validating Clerk at the exposition. When the required number—250—have been presented, an official of the railroads will validate them, granting holders of the certificates one-half fare return trip. This co-operation was obtained through the Southwestern and the Western Passenger Association.

It is expected that approximately 600 dealers and delegates from out of the city will attend the convention. The special rates apply to Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kentucky and the city of Memphis, Tenn.

Special Events at Show.

Special Dealer day and Baseball day will be Tuesday, Sept. 20. Radio engineers, manufacturers and sales managers will address the dealers by means of the Public Address System at exposition and convention. The addresses will be broadcast from the "Crystal Studio." Baseball games will be received during the afternoon at the Coliseum. The evening program will feature Graham MacNamee and local baseball announcers.

National Radio day will be Wednesday. This will bring a program of special interest to dealers of the Southwest. S. E. Wilkinson, a national authority on merchandising, will address the dealers at 12:30 p. m. on that day on "The Way to Retail Profits."

Henry A. Bellows, Federal Radio Trade Commissioner for the District, which includes St. Chicago and surrounding will attend the exposition day. He is to address the and the audience at the by means of the public system Saturday evening o'clock. KSD will broadcast lows 'address which will new radio law and its application to the trade teners-in.

William P. Mackie, secretary of the St. Louis Trades Association, is show ager. Officers of the St. Louis dio Trades Association are: W. Bennett, president; Niekam; Gus H. Cohn and Sampson, vice president; B. Singer, secretary; W. A. treasurer.

as never before, the overriding static being especially noticeable.

The Bell Telephone laboratory 3XN apparently is used only around 11 o'clock, Central Time Friday nights, but without definite schedule. This transmitter operates on 700 kilocycles, or 428.3 meters which is the wave length of Station WLW, Cincinnati.

Time and again this station's broadcasting, which has been by phonograph and reproducing phonograph records, has swept through the air with almost stunning power and clearness. One Friday night a couple of weeks ago, it was received in St. Louis and other Middle Western cities with a volume and quality surpassing those of powerful local stations.

It will pay radio fans to watch the air for this station on Friday nights.

NEW AC OPERATED SPARTON SETS FREE FROM DISTORTION

The new Sparton receivers operate without A, B and C batteries, all that is necessary to do to operate them being to plug into a light socket.

These new Spartons are said to be even more powerful and selective than former Spartons as well as doing away with bother with batteries. They also are said to be free from distortion even when a band or orchestra, is tuned in at full volume.

New Startling Radio Speaker Values for 1927-28

Unquestionably the finest quality speakers ever conceived — at prices within the reach of all!

MODEL "28"—A distinctive cone speaker of the popular drum type, with an elaborate heraldic designed grill, a reproduction of ancient hand carving. Employs the finest super-powered armature type unit.

THE NEW IMPROVED "Meistersinger"—Quality of tone reproduction is unrivalled! Powerful armature type unit specially designed for use with power tubes. 15" free edge cone, protected by a beautiful mahogany-finish wooden frame. Base is detachable so that speaker can be hung on wall.

"ADVENTURER"—Designed to appeal to admirers of ship models. The ship is finished in old ivory with a protecting ornamental frame. The large 17" free edge cone is driven by double magnet super-powered armature type unit. Unsurpassed tone quality and volume.

"CASTLE CONE"—A picturesque medieval castle in relief and finished in two-tone bronze. Employs the same powerful armature type unit and 17" free edge cone as the "Adventurer" model. Reception is faithfully reproduced in its natural sweetness and clarity of tone.

Maj. Edward Bowes will present in his Capitol "Family" program through KSD this evening Richard Hale, baritone, and Sylvia Miller, youthful soprano.

Hale has won extraordinary recognition in the most exacting and varied phases of his art. His song recitals have received high praise in this country and abroad. He won a real success in the title role of Gluck's "Orpheus". While "Orpheus" was written for a male contralto, the tradition in this country has been for a female contralto to sing this part and Hale was probably the first baritone to sing it.

Sylvia Miller, who is but sixteen years old, has attracted widespread attention.

The second KSD feature this evening will be the Collier's Radio Hour, beginning at 6:15.

Allen McQuhae, popular soloist at the Atwater eKnt Radio Hour, will again present that feature through KSD tonight.

His program follows:

Who Is Sylvia? .....Schubert
I Heard You Singing .....Coates
I Love the Dewy Dawning..Egan
Kathleen Mavourneen ....Crouch

as never before, the overriding of static being especially noticeable.

The Bell Telephone laboratory 3XN apparently is used only around 11 o'clock, Central Time, Friday nights, but without definite schedule. This transmitter operates on 700 kilocycles, or 428.3 meters, which is the wave length of Station WLW, Cincinnati.

Time and again this station's broadcasting, which has been of phonograph and reproducing piano records, has swept through the air with almost stunning power and clearness. One Friday night, a couple of weeks ago, it was received in St. Louis and other Middle Western cities with a volume and quality surpassing those of powerful local stations.

It will pay radio fans to scout the air for this station on Friday nights.

NEW AC OPERATED SPARTON SETS FREE FROM DISTORTION

The new Sparton receivers operate without A, B and C batteries, all that is necessary to do to operate them being to plug into a light socket.

These new Spartons are said to be even more powerful and selective than former Spartons as well as doing away with bother with batteries. They also are said to be free from distortion even when a band or orchestra, is tuned in full volume.

NEW AEROVOX RESISTORS ARE FINDING VARIED USES

Professional set builders and home builders of radio power units and receivers and amplifiers using the 171 and 210 type power tubes are using an increasing number of the new Aerovox dielectric condensers and resistances. Aerovox Pyrohn resistances are made of highest grade resistance wire wound on refractory tubes and coated with porcelain enamel. Wire, tube and enamel have the same expansion coefficient which permits the unit to be used under heavy load without injury. The resistance value is permanent.

Aerovox Lavite resistances fit any grid leak mounting, and are reported to be ideal for resistance and impedance amplifiers and for voltage taps in low voltage B eliminators.

Aerovox Metalohm grid leaks and resisters have a resistance element deposited on glass, and are said to carry the current in resistance and impedance amplifiers without change of resistance value, which is highly important.

Worth Remembering.

Alternating currents, if it accidentally gets into the telephone receivers in good quantity, will destroy the magnetism almost instantly

It's Surprising what a difference it makes to have

RADIO AS A UTILITY DISCUSSED BY KE

Manufacturer Believes Phys... Facilities Are Now of Se... ondary Consideration.

By A. ATWATER KENT.

The development of radio to ... has been chiefly a develop... its physical side— a develop... of the instrumentality by which broadcasts are made available listeners-in. This has now ... ressed to a point where the ph... ical facilities for radio recep... may be regarded as efficient, d... pendable, precise mechanical ... ities.

While there of course will be ... constant advance in radio engineering and the design and construction of receiving sets, progress in this line will not render antiquated or obsolete the carefully designed, well built standardized receiving sets of today.

A Practical Utility.

It is in the application of radio that the greatest changes in the immediate future seem likely. From an instrumentality used chiefly for amusement and recreation, I believe radio is certain to become a practical utility of the utmost value, both economically and culturally.

The use of radio in an increasing degree by the United States Government, as an agency to save dollars and cents to the farmer by the more intelligent care and marketing of their crops, is only an index to what may be done with radio as a utility returning dividends in actual cash.

Adapted to Education.

The value of radio as an agency in education is now being studied by educators, and tests being made in this field, I believe, will inevitably result in the adoption, generally, of radio in the schools. The city of Atlanta, is equipping all its schools with receiving sets and will put on daily programs fitted to the needs of the different grades. Additional programs of an educational and inspirational nature will be broadcast for the mothers and fathers. In Connecticut all rural schools are being equipped with radio and programs in music appreciation, as a first subject, are to be broadcast this winter from Station WTIC.

These are but straws indicating the way the wind is shifting. These tests, and others that are to follow, will in my judgment open the door to the general adoption of radio as an educational and commercial utility.

KOLSTER CLUB ORGANIZED BY DEALERS IN ST. LOU...

A Kolster Club was organized Wednesday night at a meeting of Kolster dealers at the Coronado Hotel as guests of the Strauss Co., distributer. Leo M. Schlude of the Hellrung & Grimm House Furnishing Co., was elected president; E. E. Bruns of the Baldwin Piano Co., first vice president; C. J. Krummenacher of the Krummenacher Co. second vice president; Thomas G. Crabb of the Strauss Co., secretary-treasurer.

Directors for the outlying districts were chosen as follows: Walter Rhein, Belleville, Ill.; L. J. Portell, Festus, Mo.; C. J. Hinrichs, East St. Louis; S. Adler, East St. Louis, and A. J. Gaskell, East St. Louis.

The club is to meet the second Wednesday of each month, and the next session is set for Oct. ... at the Coronado.

RADIO POWER

that gears any 6-volt set to all Broadcasting Stations

THE ability of a radio set to bridge space — to bring in radio programs from a distance and reproduce them clearly depends largely upon the power that operates the set.

The Basco Combination "A" and "B" Unit gears any 6-volt radio to all broadcasting stations within its maximum range. It provides the uniform, full-voltage power that is necessary for correct amplification and faithful reproduction of the broadcast programs.

This most advanced of all radio power units stores household current for "A" power, and rectifies 110-volt alternating current for "B" power. It provides, at all times, the same kind of reception you get for only a few minutes from fresh, fully charged batteries. It makes the radio work at its very best, does it at extremely low power cost, and saves you the expense of battery renewals and upkeep.

The guaranteed product of the Briggs & Stratton Corporation, builders of precision-made equipment for eighteen years.

Basco Power Units will operate any 6-volt radio set having 1 to 10 tubes. Easy payments can be arranged. Ask your Basco dealer for a demonstration.

RADIO AS A UTILITY DISCUSSED BY KENT

Manufacturer Believes Physical Facilities Are Now of Secondary Consideration.

By A. ATWATER KENT.

The development of radio to date has been chiefly a development of its physical side— a development of the instrumentality by which the broadcasts are made available to listeners-in. This has now progressed to a point where the physical facilities for radio reception may be regarded as efficient, dependable, precise mechanical utilities.

While there of course will be a constant advance in radio engineering and the design and construction of receiving sets, progress in that line will not render antiquated or obsolete the carefully designed, well built standardized receiving sets of today.

A Practical Utility.

It is in the application of radio that the greatest changes for the immediate future seem likely. From an instrumentality used chiefly for amusement and recreation, I believe radio is certain to become a practical utility of the utmost value, both economically and culturally.

The use of radio in an increasing degree by the United States Government, as an agency to save dollars and cents to the farmers in the more intelligent care and marketing of their crops, is only as index to what may be done with radio as a utility returning dividends in actual cash.

Adapted to Education.

The value of radio as an agency in education is now being sensed by educators, and tests being made in this field, I believe, will inevitably result in the adoption, generally, of radio in the schools. The city of Atlanta, is equipping all its schools with receiving sets and will put on daily programs fitted to the needs of the different grades. Additional programs of an educational and inspirational nature will be broadcast for the mothers and fathers. In Connecticut all rural schools are being equipped with radio and programs in music appreciation, as a first subject, are to be broadcast this winter from Station WTIC.

These are but straws indicating the way the wind is shifting. These tests, and others that are to follow, will in my judgment open the door to the general adoption of radio as an educational and commercial utility.

KOLSTER CLUB ORGANIZED BY DEALERS IN ST. LOUIS

A Kolster Club was organized Wednesday night at a meeting of Kolster dealers at the Coronado Hotel as guests of the Straus Co., distributer. Leo M. Schlude of the Hellrung & Grimm House Furnishing Co., was elected president; E. E. Bruns of the Baldwin Piano Co., first vice president; C. E. Krummenacher of the Krummenacher Co.r second vice president; Thomas G. Crabb of the Straus Co., secretary-treasurer.

Directors for the outlying districts were chosen as follows: Walter Rhein, Belleville, Ill.; L. J. Portell, Festus, Mo.; C. J. Heinrichs, East St. Louis; S. Anica, East St. Louis, and A. J. Gaubatz, East St. Louis.

The club is to meet the second Wednesday of each month, and the next session is set for Oct. 12 at the Coronado.

E. J. Straus, head of the Straus Co., presided at the dinner meeting.

MAJESTIC B UNITS HAVE REAL APPEAL TO WOMEN

Women are paying more and more attention to the purchase of radio apparatus for the home. Not only are they beginning to take more real interest in radio because of the special programs, such as cooking lessons, which are prepared especially for them, but they are actuated by the practical desire to have radio a thing of beauty in the home instead of "just a new bunch of contraptions" brought in by the head of the house.

The Majestic "B" current units have made a hit with men because of practical features — low cost of operation and because once installed they stay put, and insure clear, uninterrupted reception.

But the Majestic appeals especially to women, because it is absolutely dry and contains no acids or liquids of any sort to spill on rugs or hardwood floors—in a word, it is convenience personified in a radio power unit.

Radiograms.

A total of 206,534 radio licenses are in force throughout Australia.

Marconi was the first man to erect an antenna for radio transmission and reception.

WEBSTER SOCKET POWER UNITS REALLY 'BONE [illegible]

The new Webster "Bone-Dri" B and C socket power units [illegible] are bone dry, according to W. Dyer, St. Louis factory representative. The compactness and efficiency of these units is due to the Raytheon "A" rectifier and the unique "Bone-Dri" filtering element.

The original method of rectification in the Raytheon Cartridge is through two metallic conductors so arranged, with a non-conducting substance, that resistance to the flow of current in one direction is practically nil, while it is extremely high in the reverse direction, producing a pulsating direct current. Extensive tests of the Raytheon "A" Cartridge, it is reported, shows that their normal life may be safely placed at 10,000 hours, or more than a year of usual service. There is no glow bulb nor filament to break.

The "Bone-Dri" filter consists of a dry mineral compound which, when properly connected with specially designed chokes, smooths out the pulsating direct current delivered from the rectifier and "filters" from the loud speaker A. C. hum and rectification [illegible]

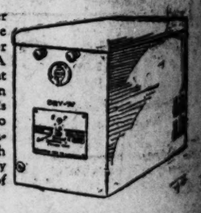
Instantaneous in Action

In creating and perfecting the Sentinel DRY-A and Sentinel DRY-A-B-C Units, Sentinel engineers have given the radio set owner a source of power free from all the uncertainties and bothers of battery operation. Any receiver using 3 or more tubes actually needs Sentinel DRY units to function at its best all the time.

Sentinel DRY-A Power Unit

and Sentinel DRY A-B-C Power unit are "Bone-Dry" in every sense of the word—no fluids, acids or electrolytes. Sentinel DRY-A provides 2½ amperes at a constant 6-volts. It is instantaneous in action. Sentinel DRY A-B-C is the most nearly complete radio power unit ever produced—combining Sentinel DRY-A with Sentinel B-C—providing every power need regardless of size of receiver.



Sentinel B-C Power Unit

Positively without an equal in its field. Delivers plate voltage for ANY set with ample reserve power; 80 milli-amperes of current at 180 volts. Built either with or without 3-way high resistance meter for accurate control of plate voltage. Every Sentinel unit is guaranteed.

FACTORIES RIGIDLY TEST RECEIVING SETS

Elaborate Inspection to Make Sure That There Are No Defects.

If one has built a radio set, he knows the trials and tribulations in finding what is wrong when it doesn't work. Imagine the skill required in a factory turning out more than a thousand sets a day, each in perfect working order and as efficient as all the sets produced the day before.

Testing instruments of microscopic precision and a rigid inspection after each step in production make this output possible. The sets in a plant in Newark, N. J., where Kolster receiving sets are made, and where, it is said, only three men are necessary in the service department to take care of returned sets, show visitors how the receivers are inspected at 50 different points on the production line.

Fifty Tests on a Set.

Fifty tests on each set leaves little chance for error. If any part of a set does not test electrically or mechanically up to a certain efficiency it is sent back for adjustment and for another trip, tagged second time, through the hands of the inspectors, who are careful to see that the deficiency has been remedied.

Here are some of the precautions taken by the modern radio manufacturer so that well-made sets may be shipped over the country every day and be in good working order when they reach their destination: Electrical and mechanical tests on raw materials coming in; tests after almost every production operation; tests of the completed chassis before and after installation in the cabinet, and, finally, two extra tests of the packing for shipping and the set's ability to stand rough handling in transit. At each inspection station is a supervisor who checks up on the tests by making his own.

The "gain" test shows the amount of radio frequency and audio frequency amplification in each set. That is, the extent to which the incoming signal is amplified is shown by an elaborate array of meters when the set is receiving. Each receiver is made to reach an established high standard.

Bump Testing.

An inspector frequently selects a carton containing a table model cabinet ready for shipping. The chassis has been packed separately. Standing at the head of a flight of stairs, he tosses the carton down a few steps. With a thump it lands on edge, bounds another step and bumps to the floor below. The carton is opened and the cabinet inspected for defects. If any appear, the method of packing is corrected and the entire lot of cartons is tested.

The "shake-box" is an invention of the engineers to initiate a cross-continental ride in a freight car. A cabinet, with chassis installed, is placed in a box mounted on a series of steel pipes which, in turn, rest on another series of pipes laid below the box. A motor draws box and set back and forth. The thuds when the pipes rise against each other and then suddenly sink into mesh are far from mild. Five hours of this treatment is given to bump the set as much as a trip across the country.

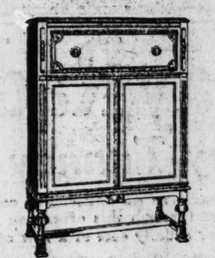
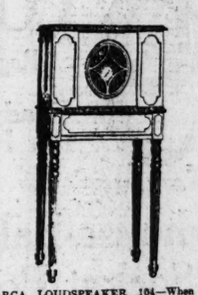
The new complete line of Radiolas —led by two custom-built models of the famous tone-perfect Super-Heterodyne

SOCKET POWER OPERATED

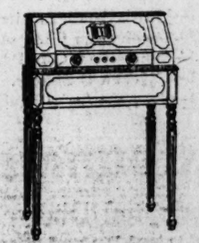


RCA RADIOLA 32—A special custom-built combination of the famous RCA 8-tube Super-Heterodyne with Loudspeaker 104—the two finest radio instruments ever designed. Operated directly from the electric light circuit—either A.C. or D.C.
Complete with Radiotrons $395.00

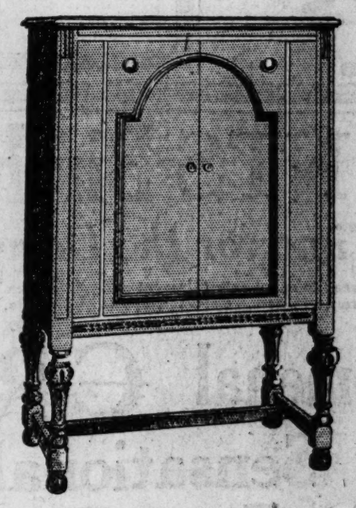
RCA RADIOLA 17—Operates directly from the electric light circuit without batteries or battery eliminators. This year's outstanding achievement in the radio art. Employs the new RCA alternating current tubes. Tuned with one knob.
Less accessories $130.00
With Radiotrons $157.50



RCA LOUDSPEAKER 104—When used with Radiola 28, provides a perfection and volume of tone production that have been a sensation ever since it was introduced.
RCA Loudspeaker 104 (A.C.) . . $275.00
RCA Loudspeaker 104 (D.C.) . . $310.00



RCA RADIOLA 28—For the many who prefer receiver and loudspeaker in separate cabinets, the 28-104 combination is the standard of comparison in the radio art.
Radiola 28, with Radiotrons . . . $260.00
A.C. Package for adapting Radiola 28 for A.C. operation with RCA Loudspeaker 104 . . . . . $35.00



RCA RADIOLA 30-A—Custom-built—A de luxe instrument, employing the same perfected Super-Heterodyne circuit as Radiola 32, but using the new Loudspeaker 100-A. Operated directly from electric light circuit—either A.C. or D.C.
Complete with Radiotrons $495.00

ALL the scientific resources of the General Electric and Westinghouse companies, in cooperation with the RCA Research Laboratories, have been placed at the service of the public in perfecting radio reception as well as broadcasting.

To meet the demand for de luxe cabinet sets, RCA offers a limited number of custom-built models, using the famous Super-Heterodyne principle, universally acknowledged as the ultimate in radio design.

These will be available in two designs, one incorporating the famous RCA Loudspeaker 104, and the other the remarkable new RCA Loudspeaker 100-A.

The new, complete line of Radiolas now available includes sets for all methods of operation and all requirements of location. There is a choice of storage battery, dry battery and socket power operation (direct from the lighting circuit)—as well as the use of outdoor or indoor aerial.

Every improvement of radio design is incorporated in these wonderful instruments.

Ask any RCA Authorized Dealer for a demonstration today.

These Radiolas are the product of the same engineers who have built the high-power broadcasting stations. They are designed so as to reproduce faithfully the perfection of tone now achieved by the transmitting apparatus in the studio.

WHY?

Because It PAYS Advertisers to Concentrate in the Post-Dispatch.

Concerning Condensers.

Stopping condensers can only withstand a certain voltage. When this is exceeded the insulation breaks down and the condenser is useless. It is better to buy a condenser with a large margin of safety in the first place than to do it after the cheaper condenser has broken down.

Great Features of This Astounding Offer!

1. Scientific Shielding---
Of a quality formerly only possible in the highest-priced sets.

2. The Genuine Neutrodyne Principle---
Prevents oscillation. Of course, it is more expensive than ordinary methods, but it is a feature of this marvel radio.

3. Long-Distance Accuminators---
As telescopes bring objects clearly into view so the Crosley accuminators produce the volume of far-away signals so they seem like local programs.

4. Volume Control Minus Distortion---
Whether you want "brass band" power for dancing or soft and mellow reproduction, the Crosley sets a high standard of controlled tone quality.

5. Illuminated Dial---
No need to break "the mood of music" with a sudden glare of light foor tuning, because the Crosley illuminated dial may be plainly read in the dark.

6. The Single Knob---
Simplifies tuning for ordinary reception of local and super-powered stations.

7. Beauty of Cabinet---
Best of equipment. An inspection of the beautiful cabinet makes this price seem impossible; such rich woodwork, the full-tone, enclosed cone speaker, and the spacious compartment for batteries and power units—check off every item of equipment. At such savings you might expect second-rate accessories—but not in this offer. The list reads like a Radio Hall of Fame

Light-Socket Your Set the Sterling Way

Price plus Quality!

PRICE yes, but above all QUALITY. And quality in "B" power units must mean power, adjustability and dependability right down to the point of complete satisfaction. That means Sterling "B" Power quality. It means the Raytheon BH Tube, too.

1. Sterling "B" and "B-C" Power Units give the power regulation necessary for Quality Reception.
2. Sterling engineers did not add a third voltage regulator merely to supply a talking point.
3. Too much "B" power kills tubes, tone quality and enjoyment.
4. The adjustment of power to the radio set of small voltage requirements is as vital as having an abundant supply.

Sterling engineers have provided for both requirements

For 21 years Sterling has been content to base its reputation on skillful engineering, first quality materials and truth in advertising. These principles have governed the manufacture and sale of 10,000,000 Sterling electrical devices.

One of these Sterling "B" Power Units will give you the most desirable power for your set, plus convenience and low price. Buy the Sterling—the years will bring you no regret.

STAR SQUARE CO. EXPANDS ITS RADIO DEPARTMENT

Novel Decorations; New Radio and Wheeled Goods Lines to Be Carried.

Extensive remodeling, to expand its radio department and give on the second floor display room for a new line of electrical fixtures, general electric supplies and wheeled goods, including bicycles and tricycles, is under way at the 1129 Locust street headquarters of the Star Auto Supply Co.

Attractiveness of display and surrounding is the chief aim in the decorating, according to Joseph L. Stiffelman, vice president and general manager of the company. The entrance to the new departments will be through graceful arches. With frescoes on black velvet and cream colored walls, with extensive use of wall mirrors, will be decorative features.

Stiffelman said that on a recent trip to Chicago he found radio factories and wholesalers generally predicting the best year the radio industry has known. "For that reason, as well as to provide needed space for display," he said, "we are pushing the remodeling, which will give us a really beautiful radio department, combining efficiency with attractive display. Beauty in radio design is becoming increasingly important. It is equally important in placing radio receivers and accessories before the consumer."

Stiffelman's prediction that the busy radio season was getting under way was borne out by Clyde Methot of New York, general merchandising manager for the Manhattan Electric Co. Methot said the radio trade was optimistic everywhere.

NEW PHILCO SOCKET POWER UNITS FOR ALL RECEIVERS

The Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. announces a number of improvements in its 1928 models of Philco socket powers, which run any battery-operated radio set from the electric current and do away with the ordinary A storage battery and dry cell A and B batteries.

Two new Philco AB socket power units have been added for sets up to and including six tubes, using the 112 or 171 power tubes. Two additional AB units have been added for sets containing 6 to 10 tubes, including either the 112 or the 171 power tubes. Each of the new units has relay control, which enables the use to control the A and B radio power, as well as the radio set itself, by the switch on the radio set.

Each of these units has the new Philco current economizer, which allows the user always to adjust the charging rate to the lowest point of current consumption that will keep the battery charged. Three charging rates are provided, as well as a boost rate for emergency.

The Philco B socket power contains no batteries, no tubes, no acids. It has no biding posts on the outside and there is no danger from high voltage transmission. It is especially adapted for the UX-171 and 371 power tubes.

FAMOUS ARTISTS TO BE HEARD FOR FIRST TIME ON KSD

New Atwater Kent Series to Bring Gigli, De Luca, and Others in Sunday Evening Concerts.

Another fall and winter series of Atwater Kent Hour radio concerts through KSD and 18 allied stations of the Red Network is scheduled to begin Sunday evening, Oct. 2. This new series is to be on as large a scale, and is to bring forward as distinguished artists, as have the past series which have made the Atwater Kent Hour one of the leading institutions of the American Continent.

In addition to many new artists, a special 20-piece orchestra has been organized under direction of Nathan Franko, who will conduct all the concerts which the orchestra plays part.

Franko was for 25 years a conductor at the Metropolitan and has conducted for nearly every great vocal, instrumental and vocal, for the past four years.

Gigli to Sing in Series.

Prominent among the artists to appear in this series of radio concerts will never have broadcast under the auspices of A. Atwater Kent three, are Benamino Gigli, leading tenor with the Metropolitan Opera; Giuseppe de Luca, Metropolitan Opera baritone; Nina Morgana, the soprano; Mary Chalney, violinist, and Mildred Seeba, soprano.

Among the popular favorites of the winter who will be heard again are Reinald Werrenrath, perhaps America's most popular baritone; Mark Kurenko, the Russian soprano; Albert Spalding, famous violinist; Alexander Brailowsky, Russian pianist; Margaret Matzenauer, world-famous contralto; John Powell, pianist; Kathryn Meisle, contralto; Edith Fleicher, soprano; Andre Benoist, pianist, and others.

KELLOGG AC SETS BUILT WITH KELLOGG'S OWN TUBES

Using Kellogg's own AC tubes, the new Kellogg batteryless receiver dispenses with A, B and C batteries and their care. This new model, the 510, is self contained, operating direct from a light socket and having the long Kellogg air column speaker that has won a reputation for fidelity of reproduction. Everything in the Kellogg receivers is Kellogg-made.

In addition to the AC models, there are five-tube and six-tube Kellogg receivers, all using characteristic Kellogg inductive tuning. They can be operated with batteries or from the light socket through power units.

BALKITE AB POWER UNIT FEATURED IN NEW LINE

A Balkite AB unit, which contains no battery in any form, is featured in the new Balkite line of power devices. It replaces both A and B batteries, suppling current directly from a light socket, delivering even, regular current and requiring no charging. It is not affected by standing idle, is noiseless and has nothing to wear out or replace.

This particular Balkite unit is in two types—one supplying up to 135 volts for power tube operation, the other giving 180 volts for the 171 power tube.

There are also, of course, Balkite A and B units and trickle chargers.

FEDERAL SETS FOR AC AND BATTERY OPERATION

Federal Orthosonic Receivers This Fall Include Both AC and Battery-Operated Sets.

Prolonged tests show that the orthosonic AC receivers, operating entirely from the light socket, meet the highest standards of efficiency and tone quality. No liquids are employed in the power unit.

Federal's engineers emphasize the fact that this equipment cannot be used with a receiver which normally operates on batteries.

In consequence there are really two distinct groups of Federal sets exactly alike in appearance and operation, and containing the Orthosonic circuit, but differing in their adaptation to power sources.

Seven-tube and six-tube models are featured, all fully shielded, very selective, and of fine tone. The seven-tube sets are loop-operated. To accomplish the complete reproduction of Orthosonic tone, which has been a cardinal point in Federal's sales compaign for two years, the Federal Radio Corporation has also announced a power tube coupler, which may be connected between set and reproducer.

AMATEURS TO SEND MESSAGES AT SHOW

Working of Short-Wave Transmitting Sets and Receivers to Be Explained.

By F. A. FILLMORE.

The O. B. P. Amateur Club, Chapter No. 1, of St. Louis will again have an amateur radio station at the radio show. It will be remembered that last year this group of amateurs had a short-wave transmitting and receiving station which was popular throughout the show.

This year they plan to elaborate a bit, in that they will exhibit to be three transmitters, two of which will be in operation during the show. There will be two sets of the tube variety, a 50-watt, 80 meter, and a 7½-watt, 40-meter transmitter. Either one of these sets may be used, according to the will of the operator in charge. It is planned to use the 80-meter apparatus mostly, as the interference on 40 meters in this location is expected to be quite bad.

For comparison, there will be an old spark set, of the type outlawed by the amateurs themselves. Long before the Government prohibited the use of spark sets on amateur bands, these sets had been discarded by the amateurs. This was done to eliminate interference for the broadcast listener. This set will not be in operation, but will only show the difference between the bulk of the old type "Rock Crusher" and the compactness of the newer "Bottle" outfits.

Of course, there will be an amateur receiver, which will cover most of the amateur wave-bands. All the apparatus will be assembled by the amatuers themselves, as is customary among them, no commercial assembly being represented

Last year messages were handled free of charge. This is to be done again at the show. Messages to all parts of the world will be accepted. However, delivery cannot be guaranted further than that they will be given to amateurs outside of St. Louis, to be relayed to their destinations. Nearly 300 messages were accepted last year.

The station is to be in operation from 2 to 10 p. m. during the show, and will at all times be in charge of an O. B. P. amateur, who will accept messages, answer questions regarding the amateurs and their activities, and operate the station. There will also always be one or more relief operators at hand.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch donated the booth.

CROSLEY BANDBOX SET USES AC OR BATTERIES

A 6-tube receiver that is stirring a deal of interest is the Crosley Bandbox made in two types, for battery or lamp socket operation.

The Bandbox is furnished in a metal cabinet of brown crystaline finish. This cabinet can be readily removed permitting the chassis, which is independently mounted, to be incorporated in a console or other piece of furniture.

The Bandbox employs a Hazeltine neutrodyne circuit which is capable of unusual performance. The set is provided with a single master station selector, with supplementary acuminators for sharp tuning and to aid in the reception of far distant stations.

The set also has a volumn control which cuts down local signals to a whisper without hurting quality and permits increasing volume for dancing. The signal dial is electrically illuminated. Complete shielding is one of the features of this receiver. All coils are incased in individual copper housings, variable condensers are properly shielded, and even the wire is shielded from other elements. The AC model Bandbox uses the new AC tubes.

FARRAND OFFICIAL NOTES EYE APPEAL OF SPEAKERS

Designs of radio loud speakers are more and more becoming attractive to the eye, according to George H. Kiley, vice president of the Farrand Manufacturing Co., pioneer builder of cone type radio loud speakers.

"In the speakers that will be sold to the public this season," Kiley says, "we find that considerable attention is being paid to making them pleasing to the eye—building them so that they harmonize with the homes they are placed in.

"Passing aside the elaborately decorated cone speaker in some shops we find that standard types of cone speakers are so designed that they harmonize with almost any living room furniture, graceful lines and severe simplicity being the keynote of the speakers of the season."

Compared with the crude speakers of a few years back, the present day reproducer is a tremendous step forward in eye value and ear value."

M'NAMEE WILL ANNOUNCE BALL GAME HERE TUESDAY

Arrangements have been made whereby Graham McNamee will broadcast a play by play account of the Cardinal-Philadelphia baseball game at Sportsman's Park next Tuesday over Station KFVE.

This was brought about through the efforts of Sam B. Singer of the Schweig-Engle Corporation.

HOW TO MAKE ANY SET SHORT-WAVE RECEIVER

Converter Is Easily Built and Will Open Interesting Field of Broadcasting.

Any radio receiving set may be converted instantly, at will, into a shortwave receiver by use of a shortwave converter. It is only necessary to disconnect the aerial and ground wires from the receiving set proper, and attach them to the two binding posts of the shortwave converter. The detector tube of the receiver is placed in the tube socket of the converter, and the cable plug from the converter is inserted in the detector socket of the receiving set. No other tubes are removed, no battery wires are disturbed, and the loud-speaker remains as usual. The tuning controls on the receiving set itself are not used. The tuning is all done from the one dial of the converter.

This shortwave converter is as easy to build as it is to operate. It is a shortwave set, comprising a regenerative detector and an attachment plug for connecting it to the audio end of the present receiving set and to the battery supply.

This method of connecting the two units together is novel. It consists of a five-conductor cable (two leads not used) and an old vacuum tube base for the plug. The glass of the detector tube is broken off and the base cleaned out. Three wires from the cable are soldered to the terminals inside the base, one to the A plus, one to the A minus, and one to the plate terminal.

To identify these terminals, hold the tube base with the side pin towards you. With the base in this position, the two rear posts are A plus and A minus, respectively, and the left front post is the plate terminal. The base of the tube is now filled with some wax compound, such as the top of a discarded B-battery. This is easily done. Place small pieces of the wax in the tube base and with a hot iron, melt them together. When the base is full, set aside to cool.

Another feature o fthe shortwave converter is its effective regenerative control. A 0 to 5,000,000 ohm standard clarostat is used for this purpose. Not only does it serve as a smooth and continuously variable control of great aid in receiving short waves, but it also saves one tuning condenser. In the circuit this resistance is connected across the plate or tickler coil.

A condenser of especially low minimum capacity is used to tune each secondary coil in the converter, and with a set of three coils this condenser will tune over a wave band extending from 15 to 200 meters. A vernier dial is a necessity on the tuning condenser, as the tuning will be found extremely sharp.

The choke coil is very important and must not be omitted.

FRESHMAN REVIEWS THREE BIG RADIO DEVELOPMENTS

"The summer of 1927 will undoubtedly be recorded as a period of more than ordinary importance," says Charles Freshman, president of Charles Freshman Co., Inc., New York, manufacturers of the Freshman masterpiece and Freshman equaphase radio receivers.

There were three developments of major importance which mean a great deal to the radio industry and to users and prospective users of radio receivers.

"First of these was the licensing of radio manufacturers by the Radio Corporation of America and associated companies, which permitted those manufacturers to use the important patents held by the R. C. A. group.

The Freshman Co. manufactures all radio receivers bearing its name under license of the R. C. A. and its associated companies, the General Electric Co., Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"The second important development was the perfection of the AC tube which makes it possible to build a radio set which operates directly from any 60-cycle 110-volt alternating current light socket.

"Over two years ago, Freshman engineers began experimenting with AC tubes which were then in the early stages of development. Our engineers built a set using AC tubes, but while it functioned comparatively well it did not come up to Freshman standards, so it was never put on the market.

"They continued their experiments until a few months ago, their efforts were rewarded by the perfection of a real AC set worthy of the name of Freshman.

"The third step was perfection of a new circuit embodying an entirely new method of stabilization—the Freshman equaphase circuit, which eliminates howls and squeals in the set."

NEW SENTINEL SOCKET POWER UNITS REALLY DRY

A dry BC power unit capable of handling the largest receivers is a feature of the new Sentinel line of socket power devices. This delivers 80 milliamperes of current at 180 volts. It can be had with or without a 3-way high resistance meter for accurate control of plate voltages.

The Sentinel dry A unit uses no acids, fluids or electrolyte, and is instant in action.

A Sentinel dry ABC unit is a complete plant in itself, permitting set operation without any batteries whatsoever.

All these Sentinel units have large reserve power.

TOWER COMPANY PATTERNS SPEAKERS FROM SHIP MODELS

Today mere realism in reproduction is not enough, at least in the eyes of some speaker producers, notably the Tower Manufacturing Corporation, Boston, Mass., manufacturer of speakers and head sets.

The new radio reproducer must give tone quality of course. It must reproduce music and voice, high tones and low, and have a wide range of tone intensity and volume. But it must have more. It must have style.

The new Tower cone speakers consist of two authentic sailing ship designs—the "Adventurer" and "Pirate Ship;" two designs suggestive of the days of chivalry—the "Castle Cone" and the Model "Is," and the new improved "Meistersinger."

Connoisseurs of genuine sailing ship models will be delighted with the "Adventurer Cone." Here is a real ship model and at the same time a radio speaker of excellent performance. The ship, true to type, is cast in bas relief with vivid natural colorings encircled by protecting metal frame with ornamental feet suggestive of the sea.

WARNING!

There is still a great deal of misleading advertising appearing in the public press on radio. Unscrupulous advertisers take advantage of the fact that a vast majority of the public is unversed in the technical side of radio.

Following the popularity of Battery Eliminators, manufacturers and dealers saw the advantage of selling sets complete with power units; then there are the new A C tube sets equipped for use with a B-Power Unit and a Transformer for the "A" side.

Many advertisements of the above popular "All-Electric Radio Sets" carry such statements as:

"No Batteries, No Eliminators, Your Light Socket Supplies all Power"

Such statements are absolute falsehoods and are unfair to honest advertisers. No electric radio set has ever been built or marketed which does not require a so-called "B Battery Eliminator," better termed a "B Current Supply" or "Power Unit." The current as it comes from the light socket is totally unsuited to operate any radio set without the use of power units.

Buy your new electric receiving set and power unit, therefore, from manufacturers and dealers who tell the truth.

TOWER COMPANY PATTERNS SPEAKERS FROM SHIP MODELS

Today mere realism in reproduction is not enough, at least in the eyes of some speaker producers, notably the Tower Manufacturing Corporation, Boston, Mass., manufacturer of speakers and head sets.

The new radio reproducer must give tone quality of course. It must reproduce music and voice, high tones and low, and have a wide range of tone intensity and volume. But it must have more. It must have style.

The new Tower cone speakers consist of two authentic sailing ship designs—the "Adventurer" and "Pirate Ship;" two designs suggestive of the days of chivalry—the "Castle Cone" and the Model "23," and the new improved "Meistersinger."

Connoisseurs of genuine sailing ship models will be delighted with the "Adventurer Cone." Here is a real ship model and at the same time a radio speaker of excellent performance. The ship, true to type, is cast in bas relief with vivid natural colorings encircled by protecting metal frame with ornamental feet suggestive of the sea.

VALLEY ELECTRIC CO., ST. LOUIS ANNOUNCES NEW RADIO SET

A new model, No. 71, of the Valleytone receiver, with seven tubes and single dial control has been developed by the Valley Electric Co., St. Louis. The No. 52 model Valleytone set, with two dial control is continued. Both receivers may be operated with any kind of power devices.

A new Valley automatic charger uses the new Raytheon cartridge element. A Valley B power unit, for one to six tubes, has been added to the powerful 8 unit that is designed to handle sets having as many as 12 tubes.

In addition, there is a new Valley A power unit, which uses the Raytheon element as a rectifier and does not use a battery in any way. It has no bulbs or moving part. It is not necessary to rewire a set to use this A unit, which is connected in the same manner as an ordinary A battery.

FADA ADDS 6-TUBE MODEL IN LOWER PRICED FIELD

The same "harmonated reception" that has been featured by Fada and is a characteristic of the big Fada sets has been built into the new Fada special, a 6-tube entry in the low-priced field.

This set has three radio frequency stages, detector and two audio stages, individual stage shielding and equalized amplification. It can be used for AC operation direct from a light socket or with batteries.

Tone quality, ultra selectivity and distance getting make the big Fada models exceptionally interesting receivers.

These models are housed in period cabinets or consoles, the Fada furniture being of beautiful design and craftmanship.

A 17-inch Fada cone speaker free floating and with permanent Parkerized magnet, has been added to the line. It is of Grecian design and with antique bronze finished base.

Plugs Cleaned With Silver Polish.

Clean the loudspeaker plug occasionally with silver polish. This will keep the plug bright and insure a good connection with the jack on the receiver.

PRINCIPLE OF MICROPHONE DISCOVERED 50 YEARS AGO

The fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the microphone, the invention that made possible radio broadcasting, finds the instrument given popular recognition as one of the really great inventions contributing to human happiness. For more than 40 years, while recognized by scientists as the essential factor in telephone transmission, the public knew nothing about the microphone and cared less. But today more than 20,000,000 radio fans know that it is the microphone that transmits to them their daily radio programs.

On April 14, 1877, Emile Berliner, a young German immigrant, unable to speak pure English, filed his application for a patent on the microphone. His first crude instrument, constructed from a small toy drum, a steel dress button and a needle, actually had talked. The microphone of today, as used both in the telephone transmitter and in radio broadcasting, is merely a refinement of the loose-contact principle applied by Berliner.

While the use of his microphone by telephone companies made Berliner rich, it is in its application to radio broadcasting he finds his greatest pride. Particularly is he proud of the fact that the microphone is making America a nation of music lovers.

U. S. RADIO OFFICE IN ST. LOUIS PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Six new offices are to be opened by the radio inspection service of the Department of Commerce if the $300,000 appropriation requested is granted by Congress.

Plans are to open offices in Buffalo, N. Y.; Dallas, Tex.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Denver, Colo.; St. Louis, Mo., and Minneapolis, Minn.

It also is planned to increase the field force of present offices by adding inspectors and clerks. The personnel of each new office would consist of an inspector and a stenographer.

New equipment for measuring the wave lengths and signal strength of stations is needed and will be available if the appropriation goes through.

Mohawk PYRAMONIC Speaker, $25

The Greatest ONE DIAL RADIO at Lowest Prices!

More than other sets give—and greatly lower prices

No other radio gives quite so lavishly of superlative performance as does the newest Mohawk 6-tube shielded One Dial Radio. High skill and singleness of purpose have developed the original Mohawk One Dial principal to a point that is practically perfection. A new standard of radio performance has been established, and a standard of beauty equally high has been established in the consoles which comprise the most recent Mohawk series. But of greater interest, perhaps, than these are the unapproachably low prices in the entire group. And, if you like, you can have, too, the convenience of the new Mohawk A. C. electric sets for light socket operation at only $110.00 additional.

Good Tubes for Tone Quality.

It is necessary to have good tubes to obtain good tone quality in a set. The proper tubes must be employed for the radio-frequency detector and audio functions. Most important of all, a power tube must be employed in the last stage, so as to handle the full volume without apparent forcing. The proper plate voltages and grid biases where needed, must be applied on the tubes.

NEW TYPE OF RESISTOR TO CONTROL "B" UNIT VOLTAGE

A new method of controlling the voltages at the output of a "B" power unit has been developed by Electrad, Inc., in the shape of a new type of resistor. It might be termed a variable potentiometer and it permits adjustment of the voltage at any tap without changing the voltage at the other taps. The number of by-pass condensers required is reduced to a minimum.

Instead of the usual metallic nichrome wire is closely wound on an asbestos cord having an insulated covered copper core. This resistance element in turn is wound on a threaded isolantite tube. Thus the fine resistance wire is wound twice before the unit is complete, each turn of the wire, as it is on the asbestos cord, is parallel to the axis of the tube. So a contact arm scribing an arc from one end of the tube to the other will not strike the fine wire at right angles but nearly parallel to the turns as they are on the asbestos cord. Thus, the contact arm slides evenly over the fine turns and can not snap them.

As the resistance wire is wound openly around the tube, the entire length of the bare wire is exposed for dissipation of heat directly into the air. Since there is no film of zinc in the wire it cannot rust or oxidize. The contact arm, moving across the turns of wire gives fine regulation with as many points of control as there are turns.

These variable potentiometers are made in ranges from 0 to 1000 ohms up to 0 to 50,000 ohms. Where it is found by calculation that a maximum of, say, 50,000 ohms is required at the output to obtain the necessary voltage drop and it is desired to have two variable voltage controls, then two of the 25,000 ohm units can be connected in series.

These units are rated at 10 watts which is sufficient for practically all purposes.

Radiograms.

In Great Britain, about 400 blind radio listeners are granted free licenses.

Upward of 2500 firms in the United States are manufacturing radio sets and parts.

It costs $5000 to $10,000 a month to operate a broadcasting station in the United States.

Bude, a little town in Cornwall, England, is believed to be the radio paradise of the world. American stations are received regularly and all Continental stations come in clearly. Even summer makes little difference in DX reception.

SPECIAL TEMPLE SPEAKER DESIGNED FOR STORE USE

A speaker especially designed for radio store use is the new Temple "Dealerola," which is mounted on an upright standard so that it may easily be hung in the entrance to a store, or be placed anywhere else, either hanging or mounted to the floor.

It has the same tone chamber as that in the 18-inch drum type Temple speaker, built for reproduction in the home, and has the same long compensated exponential type air column with double-action Temple unit. There is also a 13-inch Temple drum type speaker for home use, which gives the same fine, true-toned quality of reproduction as does the 18-inch type.

The principle in these Temple speakers is the same as in the Temple Giant, which has a 10 to 12 foot air column, weighs nearly 300 pounds and provides really extraordinary clear reproduction. As has been told, one of the Temple Giants is in use in the living room of a St. Louis residence and is giving radio fans a veritable thrill, somewhat of a demand for these great speakers is developing. Incidentally, one of these giants was mounted on the lake front at Chicago and a party of observers reported hearing it distinctly at a distance of six miles out on the water.

It might be termed a variable potentiometer, and it permits adjustment of the voltage at any tap without changing the voltage at the other taps. The number of by-pass condensers required is reduced to a minimum.

Instead of the usual method, nichrome wire is closely wound on an asbestos cord having an enameled covered copper core. This resistance element in turn is wound on a threaded isolantite tube. Since the fine resistance wire is wound twice before the unit is complete each turn of the wire, as it is on the asbestos cord, is parallel to the axis of the tube. So a contact arm scribing an arc from one end of the tube to the other will not strike the fine wire at right angles but nearly parallel to the turns as they are on the asbestos cord. Thus, the contact arm slides evenly over the fine turns and can not snap them.

As the resistance wire is wound openly around the tube, the full length of the bare wire is exposed for dissipation of heat direct into the air. These units are rated at 25 watts which is sufficient for practically all purposes.

SPECIAL TEMPLE SPEAKER DESIGNED FOR STORE USE

A speaker especially designed for radio store use is the new Temple "Dealerola," which is mounted on an upright standard so that it may easily be hung in the entrance to a store, or be placed anywhere else, either hanging or sitting to the floor.

It has the same tone chamber as that in the 18-inch drum type Temple speaker, built for reproduction in the home, and has the same long compensated exponential type air column with double-action Temple unit. Somewhat of a demand for these great speakers is developing. Incidentally, one of these giants was mounted on the lake front at Chicago and a party of observers reported hearing it distinctly at a distance of six miles out on the water. Yet it can be brought down to a veritable fairy whisper.

A new Temple comparator—a conical device of bakelite—makes comparisons between speakers easy.

NEW YAR PEDESTAL SPEAKER AN EXCELLENT REPRODUCER

A new speaker, of the pedestal type, has been under test in St. Louis for the past two weeks on a wide variety of broadcast programs, and has proved an excellent reproducer. It is the Yar Tru-tone speaker, made of cast aluminum.

Its pedestal is an air column, with a special unit at the lower end. The tapered throat of the air column expands at the top into a tone chamber fitted with a scientifically designed baffle plate arrangement that distributes high and low tones into the proper tone deflectors, and a distributing chamber compels crossing of tone waves. This speaker will handle up to 200 volts of B current without distortion.

It is attracive in appearance, blending with any room decorations, and it handles volume and gives out tones with clarity and excellent quality and fidelity.

It is made by the Yahr-Lange, Inc., which also makes the "Super Ball Antenna," a compact substitute for the conventional wire aerial, said to be non-directional and efficient. The aluminum ball, which is said to have a conductive surface squal to that of a 75-foot aerial, is non-corrosive.

PFANSTIEHL RECEIVERS PRESERVE OVERTONES

Preservation of the musical overtones, which make for true tone color and beauty, by a clear-cut, uncomplicated circuit is the aim expressed in the new Pfanstiehl receiving sets, which come in six-tube and seven-tube table and console models.

Efficient shielding, only one station selector with no adjusters or auxilliary dials, are characteristic of these Pfanstiehls. The control operates an illuminated dial calibrated in wave lengths.

The design of the receiver is carefully calculated to avoid distortion of the delicate vibrations which make the overtones. No extra parts are required to correct amplification errors. Obstacles to free flow to radio impulses through the receiver have been avoided. As a result, exceptional tone quality is claimed for the Pfanstiehl.

CHICAGO LEADS IN SONG TRIALS

Chicago has more aspiring young singers than any other city in America, if the applications to participate in the Atwater Kent auditions can be taken as an indication. Already 75 have signified their intention to participate in the Chicago local contest sponsored by the Atwater Kent Foundation.

Similar contests will be held throughout the country, but to date Chicago leads in the number of singers, men and women under 25, who have expressed their intention to compete.

WRAPE SEES UNPRECEDENTED DEMAND FOR RADIO SETS

Information received by Harold J. Wrape, president of the Benwood-Linze Co., from the Crosley plant at Chicago is that Crosley production and sales are two months ahead of last year, largely due to the reception by the public of the new Crosley Bandbox receiver. Wrape, who is national president of the Federated Radio Trades Association, says that an unprecedented demand for receivers and radio accessories this fall and winter appears a certainty, and that never before has there been such a market for radio sets at this season of the year.

The Crosley Corporation says that rapidly growing popularity of radio is indicated, and that factors in growth of interest are: Improvements in radio sets and the remarkably reasonable prices at which they are available. Better programs available to radio listeners than ever before. Broadcasting situation greatly improved by the Federal Radio Commission.

WIRELESS DISCOVERED IN 1895

Guglielmo Marconi, the Italian inventor, discovered the principle of wireless telegraphy in 1895, when but 21 years old. The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. of America was the first company in America formed for the purpose of engaging in the transmission of messages by wireless. It was organized Nov. 22, 1899, with a capitalization of $10,000,000, of which 25 per cent was owned by the Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Co. (Ltd.), a British corporation.

STROMBERG-CARLSON SETS USE ANTENNA OR LOOP

Total Shielding and Plenty of Amplification Make These Receivers Versatile.

In nearly every radio question and answer department will be found at least one query as to advisability of using a loop antenna.

In the first place a loop-operated receiver requires more tubes than are necessary to operate on the usual outdoor antenna type of receiver.

It is obvious that as the pick-up is decreased, as with a loop, amplification must be increased if the results as measured in volume are to be equal. In general, a receiver that operates on five tubes with an outdoor antenna will require six or seven tubes to produce the same results with a loop.

The real efficiency of a loop is realized when it is used on a receiver within a steel building or one constructed with steel girders and metal lathing. This kind of building is shielded against the usual form of radio waves and an antenna within the building, or an outdoor antenna whose lead-in must pass through the building, loses much of its efficiency through the shielding action of the steel building material. This is because the steel literally short-circuits the electro-static radio waves.

The other component of the radio wave—the electro-magnetic portion—however, is conducted throughout the steel of the building and, in doing so, sets up a magnetic field which a loop is able to pick up, but an antenna cannot.

It was the desire to satisfy all receiving conditions that led the Stromberg-Carlson Co. to place on the market what is known as "universal" type receivers. They are called "universal" because they can operate on either indoor or outdoor antenna where receiving conditions permit the erection of one, or operate with a loop where conditions demand one. Totally shielded construction of the receiver and use of three stages of radio frequency amplification provide sufficient power for a loop to produce satisfactory results.

Radio Firm Moves Into New Building

New building of the Simplex Radio Supply Co., Inc., at 3321 Washington boulevard. It has four times the space of the quarters the firm has just vacated, and houses both the retail and wholesale business and the extensive mail order business.

The members of the firm are W. F. Kuhn and F. F. Alberter, who established an auto and electrical supply in November, 1921 at 18th street and Lafayette avenue. They suffered the ups and downs that beset radio business pioneers and were hard hit when a change in quality of materials and parts virtually junked radio stocks. They moved to 2209 South 39th street.

In the spring of 1923 they had a disheartening experience trying to manufacture and market a radio receiver, but later in the year started a radio mail order business that grew steadily until recognition by radio manufacturers enabled them to move to Pine street as the Security Electric Radio Co., Inc. They had by this time a mail order list of 50,000 customers. The mail order business had been carried on under the name of Simplex Radio Supply Co., Inc. It was decided to merge the two businesses under that name, which was done last April.

Growth of the business necessitated the move to the new Washington boulevard quarters.

CUPPLES STORES TO RECEIVE BROADCASTS OF SPORTS

The Cupples Rhino tire stores are now tuning in broadcasting accounts of national sporting events its seven St. Louis neighborhood stores.

Play-by-play accounts of the remaining National League games and the world series are the first contes offered in this new sporting service.

Thursday night, Sept. 22, will be open house at all the stores, and the running ringside reports of the Dempsey-Tunney fight will be received.

NEW STEWART-WARNER SETS COMPLETELY SHIELDED

"Matched unit" construction, whereby every part of a set is designed with relation to every other part, continues to be a feature of Stewart-Warner receivers. Complete shielding and single control give distance getting ability and selectivity, and insure that the sets can cut through local stations. An especially interesting model is a six-tube de luxe set in a very attractive console.

Two loud speakers of artistic design and a new line of Stewart-Warner tubes are other features

HARBORD EXPLAINS R C A LICENSE PO

President Says Stabilization of the Industry Has Been Chief Motive.

Stabilization of the radio industry is assured now, according to Gen. James Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who was in St. Louis Monday to attend a meeting of RCA distributors and dealers.

An important factor in this stabilization, he said at the meeting, which was a feature of the meeting, is the licensing of 22 leading radio manufacturers to use the patents controlled by the RCA group. "There is a misconception," Gen. Harbord said, "that the Government issues a patent and the holder can stop anyone from manufacturing a device that infringes on it. A patent really is only a license to sue infringers. It has very little value until the courts have passed upon and upheld it. Until the courts decided we were in no position to license anyone. Now we have licensed 22 manufacturers."

Makes for Stability.

"The royalty is the least of our motives. The patent licensing policy is aimed at stabilizing the industry. We require that a firm to be licensed have a business large enough to pay a 7½ per cent royalty of at least $100,000. This virtually means that the small manufacturers must merge to be licensed."

Gen. Harbord cited the recent merger of five radio companies and their licensing as a single concern. "We were glad to welcome this group," he said.

Commenting on the refusal of licenses companies to use the superhetrodyne circuit, Gen. Harbord said that the large manufacturers already licensed were not using this particular circuit. "We prefer the superhetrodyne as to be in our business," he continued. "The development of this circuit is due largely to our research and experimenting as well as to our ownership of the patents. We have spent vast sums in developing and protecting it. It is unthinkable that anyone should expect us to help another company to manufacture under the superhetrodyne patents."

Harbord Denies Rumors.

Touching on the rumor that RCA licenses include Cunningham tubes for resale, Gen. Harbord said that the Radio Corporation felt that it was guaranteeing the circuits under the patents, and as it could guarantee that the circuits would work to best advantage only with certain tubes, it had a right to see to be sure that the best results were achieved.

Saying he had heard that it was rumored that the Radio Corporation of America was to become merely royalty collecting agency and presently would cease to make receivers, Gen. Harbord said emphatically that there was no truth whatever in this. The best answer to these rumors, he said, is the new AC receivers that the RCA are just putting on the market and the plans for intensive production and sales campaigns.

There is no truth, he said, to another rumor, that the Radio Corporation is to change its distribution policy.

Gen. Harbord said that remarkable progress had been made in a system of synchronizing moving pictures and musical or other accompaniments, and that the future of the "talking movie" has been brought relatively near.

Radio seems destined to spell the death knell of the fan which opened before the days of broadcasting, in the opinion of Gen. Harbord.

"It is true that a considerable portion of the broadcasting program is still given up to jazz," he said, "yet the fact remains that more and more the demand is for good music, better artists and interesting informative features. The radio audience today is familiar with most of the great musical compositions. Ten years ago that was the distinction only of a small group of music lovers.

"The jazz age, in the sense of the hectic pursuit of the fun of life outside the home, is passing, I believe, as radio becomes a permanent feature of daily life. Its full significance as a social force remains yet to be measured."

The difference between the two is that the filter must be used with some external power, and the eliminator is a complete unit unto itself.

The ABOX "A" Eliminator is a filter and charger in one compact unit. It is connected to a set by removing the connection from the "A" battery and connecting to the positive and negative terminals on the eliminator. No change is needed in the set.

There are also variable taps provided to adapt the eliminator to a set with any number of

REMER-TULLY CO. PIONEER IN RADIO MANUFACTURE

Recently licensed by the R. C. A. the Bremer-Tully Mfg. Co., Chicago, maker of Counterphase 6-tube and 8-tube receivers, speaker and power units, is a pioneer in the radio field and owner of numerous patents of its own invention. It is credited with having marketed the first commercial tune-core transformer, the first three circuit tuner, the first skeleton frame coils and the first variable primary units.

The concern was first associated commercially with the manufacture of condensers and coils, later branching into a complete line of parts, one of its inventions covering a toroidal coil still widely used, and another the first non-microphonic socket. Three years ago it began the manufacture of complete receivers to which the name Counterphase was given, taken from the counterphase method of neutralization, another B-T patented invention.

The principals of this company are both experienced electrical and mechanical engineers. Tully was educated under Prof. Jerome J. Green, one of the earliest pioneers, who demonstrated the transmission and reception of wireless signals in Chicago as far back as 1899. Bremer began to specialize in high frequency investigations during his college work at Armour Institute of Technology, in 1905.

At the radio show see the new Balkite "AB"

It contains no battery in any form

The new Balkite "AB" replaces both "A" and "B" batteries and supplies radio current from the light socket.

Balkite "AB" is not to be confused with so-called radio socket powers. It contains no battery in any form, no relay, nor any of the other usual accessories. It never requires charging. It puts an end forever to run-down radio power. It delivers even, uniform current to the set at all times.

This new complete unit operates only during reception. It is the most economical of all sources of radio power. There is no trickle charging when it is not in use. It requires no other attention than the addition of water 3 or 4 times a year. It is unaffected by standing idle.

Balkite "AB" is entirely noiseless. It has nothing to wear out or replace. It is a permanent piece of equipment, based on the famous Balkite principle of electrolytic rectification. The same principle on which 2,000,000 Balkite units now in use are based.

Balkite "AB" makes any receiver an electric set, a true instrument of pleasure. It means the swift passing of radio batteries and their attendant cares. It will be welcomed by anyone who has to tend a radio set. Particularly by women.

Two models, to serve any set. 135 volts, $59.50. 180 volts, $67.50. Your dealer will recommend the one you need. (For those who already own Balkite "B" there is Balkite "A." It is just like Balkite "AB," containing no battery, but for the "A" circuit only. Added to Balkite "B" it makes a complete light socket installation at low cost. Price $32.50.) Fansteel Products Co., Inc., North Chicago, Ill.

MORE POWER, GREATER COMFORT IN NEW CARS

No Radical Changes but Small Details Handled in Satisfactory Manner.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17. —Now that the motoring public has made a satisfactory scrutiny of the surface improvements of the new automotive crop, its attention gradually is being called to the mechanical progress embodied in the models shown.

Prior to the appearance of the new cars, prophets had warned the motorist not to look for sharp departures from current practice in the mechanical field. In this the prophets were particularly accurate. The refinements which they forecast have been so numerous and their results so successful that motor car performance has been improved in such a way that the application of the word "radical" to the new cars seems fully justified.

Better Performance.

For instance, an engine looks little changed and no design principle is cast into the discard when its piston displacement is increased or its compression ratio raised, but certainly it perform with a vigor that seems to indicate an entirely new note in engineering.

Apart from more beautiful lines, two outstanding gains must be recorded in favor of the new models. These are greater power and greater comfort.

Two principles, in some cases a fusion of the two, have been resorted to in the effort to step-up the power of the new models. Several manufacturers have enlarged their motors, increasing both bore and stroke.

Higher compression is the other principle. In some cases, cylinder heads have been redesigned to permit utilization of the last ounce of

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17.—Now that the motoring public has made a satisfactory scrutiny of the surface improvements of the new automotive crop, its attention gradually is being called to the mechanical progress embodied in the models shown.

Prior to the appearance of the new cars, prophets had warned the motorist not to look for sharp departures from current practice in the mechanical field. For instance, an engine looks little changed and no design principle is cast into the discard when its piston displacement is increased or its compression ratio raised, but certainly it perform with a vigor that seems to indicate an entirely new note in engineering.

Apart from more beautiful lines, two outstanding gains must be recorded in favor of the new models. These are greater power and greater comfort.

Two principles, in some cases a fusion of the two, have been resorted to in the effort to step-up the power of the new models. Several manufacturers have enlarged their motors, increasing both bore and stroke.

Higher compression is the other principle. In some cases, cylinder heads have been redesigned to permit utilization of the last ounce of energy in the gasoline charge within the cylinder. Still others have reduced the combustion chamber area by lowering the cylinder head. In the first two instances, the advantage is claimed that any motor fuel can be used successfully, while in the latter, the highly volatile, non-detonating fuels are declared indispensable to superior performance. Such fuels are to be found in every locality, however, and their availability is expected to be followed by still wider application of the higher compression principle.

Engine Alterations.

Larger inlet valves, lighter pistons, re-arrangement of valves and changes in manifolding are other manifestations of the desire for smooth power. In connection with the boost in the compression

PARIS AUTO SALON TO BE OPENED OCTOBER 6

Supercharged Pleasure Cars, Diesel Engined and Gearless Jobs May Be Shown.

What the Paris Salon de la Automobile will disclose this year in the way of novelties is still unknown, but there are almost certain to be radical departures in design, says the Paris correspondent of the Detroit News.

"Superchargers, for one thing," says the correspondent, "are attracting considerable attention, and it is reported that at least seven European sport model cars now furnish them as standard or optional equipment. Buggatti on his standard racing models supplies them, and will deliver roadsters guaranteed to reach 120 m. p. h. There is considerable speculation as to whether superchargers are to be taken up by builders of standard passenger cars.

"Engineers are also busy trying to improve the delivery of power from the cylinder to the rear driving wheels. The Constantinesco gearless car, brought out at last year's salon, will not be the only car of its type shown this year, but it is reported, will be accompanied by at least one other gearless machine, the new Voisin. Then there is the English Weller free-wheel attachment, which insulates the gear box from the back axle, and requires drivers to learn almost entirely new technique."

"Heavy oil motors of the Diesel or semi-Diesel type, better spring suspensions, and front-wheel drive are also attracting the attention of designers.

"This will be the first Paris salon since the war open to manufacturers of all nations. At least one German car, the Daimler-Benz, will be represented, and probably others. The United States has the biggest representation among the foreign car builders, 19 American manufacturers having taken space.

IDEAL 200-MILE TRIP THROUGH OZARK HILLS

Two-Day Trek via Steelville and Potosi Offers Good Roads and Lodgings.

A week-end journey of less than 200 miles, offering numerous stopovers in the heart of the Ozark hills and a guarantee of good lodgings at any of several of the best Ozark resorts, takes the motorist over U. S. Highways 61 and 66, the connecting roads between State Highway No. 21 from De Soto to Potosi and the county road from Potosi through Steelville to Cuba.

The total distance of the trip is 198 miles. Of this 137 miles is concrete, 23 miles gravel and the balance fair graded earth road.

Leave St. Louis Saturday.

As a suggestion: It would be best to place the greater part of the trip behind before nightfall Saturday, thus leaving Sunday to enjoyment of the Ozarks country.

Good lodging places are at De Soto, Potosi, Steelville or Cuba. Besides, near each of these towns are any number of excellent resorts which offer not only food and lodgings but various recreation.

For the motorist who wants to camp plenty sites abound near cool, clear streams which provide fishing and bathing.' The Joachim River, near De Soto; the Little Big River, near Potosi; the Meramec River, and the Huzzah Creek near Steelville, are among these.

U. S. 61—the continuation of Lemay Ferry road—is followed south out of St. Louis for 49 miles to the junction of U. S. 61 and State No. 21—11 miles beyond Festus. This stretch is concrete. At this point a right turn is made on the newly concreted stretch of No. 21 and this road is followed to De Soto.

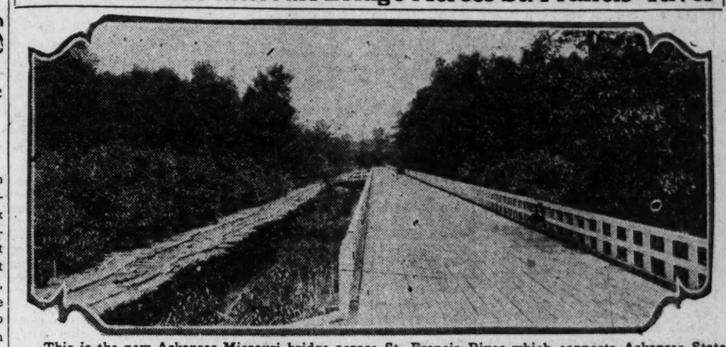
Beyond De Soto, through Old Mines to Potosi, No. 21 is a well-maintained gravel road. It is 23 miles from De Soto to Potosi.

Good County Road.

Beyond Potosi through Steelville to Cuba—on U. S. 66—one follows a county road in fair to good condition. It is 30 miles to Steelville, and eight miles to Cuba. This road passes through a picturesque rural country of hills and many streams. Many of the streams must be forded, but at this season the water is low and no difficulty will be experienced.

Turning north on U. S. 66 at Cuba, the motorist traverses a wide gravel highway the first eight miles—to a point two miles south of Bourbon. Here the concrete begins and it is followed directly into St. Louis. It is 83 miles from Cuba to St. Louis.

New Arkansas-Missouri Bridge Across St. Francis River



This is the new Arkansas-Missouri bridge across St. Francis River which connects Arkansas State Highways No. 1 and 39 with Missouri State Highway No. 25, via a seven-mile gravel road east of Paragould, Arkansas.

ROAD ASSOCIATION OFFERS $1000 FOR SAFETY IDEAS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Prizes totaling $1000 were offered today by the American Road Builders' Association for the best ideas for reducing highway accidents. The contest, held in connection with a national safety campaign, is open to everyone. It will close midnight Nov. 15.

First prize in the contest is $500. There will be nine other prizes, totaling $500. The awards are offered for the best workable plan that will decrease street and highway accidents. The plan may be a complete comprehensive thesis covering the entire subject or a mere description of a single idea that would contribute to highway safety.

KENTUCKY 1928 LICENSES ARE WHITE ON GREEN

By the Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 17.—Kentucky 1928 license tags, white lettering upon bright green background, have been approved by the State Purchasing Commission.

The new tags are similar to 1927 tags, except that the letters "Ky" and the figures "28" have been placed in the middle section of the tag, while the name of the county extends across the top of the tag. The numbers will be placed in the two sections on each side of the letters and figures "Ky and 28."

AUTO CLUB PROTESTS SPEED TRAP AT ELVINS

Deputy Constables on Route 32 Are Arresting Tourists for $8.15 Fine.

Numerous complaints have been made by motorists to the Automobile Club of Missouri that police officers of Elvins, a hamlet a mile beyond Flat River on the newly opened concrete mile stretch of State highway No. 32, are arresting tourists on a charge of violating a 15-mile per hour speed limit. Gustav A. Vahlkamp, attorney for the club, in a letter to the Mayor of Elvins, terms the officers' actions a "farce on American justice," and demands an investigation.

Tourists report that a deputy constable of Elvins drives a Ford over the highway very slowly, thus making it necessary for motorists to pass him. As soon as they do so, another deputy constable in a higher powered car, overtakes the motorist, arrests him for driving over 15 miles per hour and takes him before Justice of the Peace R. Blaylock, who fines him $8.15.

The highway runs through the town only four or five blocks and is not the main street. One St. Louisan reports that he was arrested beyond Elvins and returned to the town, where the same fine was assessed. Municipal authorities have no right to make speed arrests on highways outside of city limits. One victim reported to Vahlkamp that the Sheriff's office at Elvins was incensed at the deputies' action and stated they had no right to make arrests.

They Are Comfortable

The springs under all Paige cars are unusually long, and they are matched to the type of body they are to carry. Snubbing devices further cushion the cars. Chassis are carefully balanced, with deep, well-braced frames.

Diligent care has been used in providing ample leg room. The seats are wide and buoyant, built with deep, cushion springs.

The driver will appreciate the restfulness of the easy acting clutch and gear-shift levers, the ball-bearing spindles, the steering gear specially designed for balloon tires, and the sense of balance and security evident at all speeds.

We invite you to enjoy a ride in one of the Paige sixes or eights, noting particularly the comfort of the cars. Lower prices now are in effect, including a Paige six for the first time for less than a thousand dollars. The complete line includes twenty body types on four chassis, in sixes and eights, from $995 to $2665, f. o. b. Detroit.

$15,000,000 SPENT TO RETOOL FORD FACTORY

Four Thousand, Five Hundred New Tools Purchased and 15,000 Altered.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Sept. 17.—Total expenditure for purchase and alteration of tools and constructing a single set of body dies, preparatory to building the new Ford car, has amounted to $15,000,000, Ford Motor News reports. Two of the factors included in these preliminary steps were the purchase of 4500 new machine tools; and the alteration of 15,000 more. These two items involved an expenditure of nearly $10,000,000.

Preparing to produce the new rear axle alone necessitated the construction of an entire group of machine tools. One hundred and sixty-six gear-generating machines were completely rebuilt at a cost per unit of $3000 to produce two gears included in the rear axle assembly.

A number of hot metal spinning machines were purchased at a total cost of about $60,000. Other mechanical equipment, consisting principally of punch presses, was also required, the latter costing approximatily $1,000,000.

Alterations and purchases of machinery for production of the new steel-spoked wheel cost between $600,000 and $700,000.

The preparations involve 300 welding machines, many of them built especially for Ford purposes at a unit cost of from $700 to $9000 each.

Four million dollars of the total expenditure was spent for new machine tools. About $4,500,000 was expended for altering or rebuilding tools on hand.

A total of 43,000 machine tools were already in company plants before preparations began. Of these, 32,000, or nearly 75 per cent, were production tools. More than 50 per cent of all company tools have been rebuilt.

Packard 6 Roadability and Acceleration Remarkable

Rides as Smoothly as Pullman—Motor Has a "Pick-up" Ratio Above 35 M. P. H. of About 20 Miles Per 5 Seconds.

In a 200-mile test run which the writer made the past week in a new six-cylinder, four-door, five-passenger Packard sedan driven by Sam F. Green, manager of the Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributer here, the following interesting things were revealed.

Driven at a leisurely pace or extended to the limit of its powerful motor, this car purrs along with the smoothness of a Pullman. Smooth roads and rough, there is no change. Its long body, mounted on a 126-inch wheelbase is floated on springs remarkable for their riding qualities.

No Motor Vibration.

Deep seats give one the feel of sitting in one's favorite easy chair. There is no motor vibration at any speed, and the Packard power plant is one of the most silent the writer has been privileged to experiment with. Riding along over paved roads at 45 miles per hour one hears only the low hiss of the carburetor feeding gas to the engine.

The Packard factory claims the new Packard will do better than 70 miles per hour. It would be a law violation to drive so fast, but certainly the car is capable of this speed. At 50 miles per hour the accelerator is pressed but half way into use.

The power plant in the Packard sedan used on the trip is a six-cylinder L-head type engine with 3 1/16-inch bore and 5-inch stroke, and will develop approximately 80 horsepower. It is cast in one block and has a detachable cylinder head.

A remarkable thing of this new Packard job is its acceleration ability in the higher speeds, the ease with which other cars traveling at a fast clip can be passed. The acceleration ratio above 35 miles per hour is something like 20 miles per five seconds.

There are few places in Missouri which offer better opportunity to test an automobile than the Arcadia Valley region via State Highway No. 32. This road is recently graveled, in some places so thickly that high gear driving is a feat. The Packard six negotiated every bit of the way in high, climbed hills, raced through shifting gravel, and twice forded two creek beds with the water well above the running board.

Has Automatic Starter.

The new Packard has a number of interesting refinements. It has an automatic starter. One turns a key, the starter is automatically spun and the engine is in operation. Another automatic feature is its chassis lubrication system, manipulated from beneath the dash by a grease "gun." After driving all day over indifferent roads dust and rough stretches and natural driving wear cause squeeks. But in the new Packard a couple of charges from the grease gun, operated while the car is in operation, quickly eliminate this.

The new Packard sedan is called a five-passenger car, but the rear seat can easily seat four average people. Packard engineers, by devising a way of building the tonneau over the rear fenders, have enlarged the rear seating width by four inches.

This new car, completely equipped, is priced at $2470, delivered.

CHEVROLET DEALER APPOINTED

The Lackland Service Co., Overland, Mo., recently organized with Leslie Hall as president, has been appointed Chevrolet dealer in St. Louis County. The firm recently erected a building for its purpose at Lackland and Woodson roads at a cost of $25,000.

NEW JORDAN EIGHT ON DISPLAY HERE

Latest Addition to Line Has Larger Engine and Double Carburetor.

Jordan Motor Car Co.'s new offering, the Jordan Air Line 8, is being displayed here today for the first time by the Archer-Mann Motor Car Co., Jordan distributer.

In appearance the new job is a big brother to the six-cylinder line introduced at the New York show last winter. Mechanically it is a vastly improved power plant on the model "J" chassis. It is planned to turn out for the present four body types: a five-passenger, two-door Victoria, five-passenger sedan, collapsible coupe for four and a permanent top coupe with a rumble seat. All four types will sell for $2195 list. Later, it is expected, other body types will be added. The new Air-Line 8 is not superseding either of the present Jordan types, but rather complementing them.

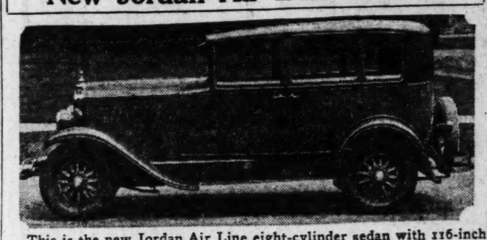
The new Jordan engine is slightly larger than that used in the Model "J," the bore being three inches (against the J's 2⅞) and the stroke 4¾. This develops 85-horsepower at 3.300 r. p. m. and makes possible speeds of 80 m. p. h. and better.

An outstanding development is the fuel delivery system. In the first place, a double carbureter, worked out by Stromberg in airplane research, is used. This unit, incidentally, is similar to that used by Col. Lindbergh with his Wright Whirlwind engine, the two differing only in one feature: the airplane carbureter had three venturi tubes with the one float chamber, while the Jordan carbureter has but two. Coupled with the new carbureter is a carefully worked out manifold design.

Other mechanical features which are noteworthy advances over former models include the use of a new high-compression cylinder head, invar strut Nelson pistons and a new Gemmer steering gear.

The chassis has a wheelbase of 116 inches and carries Murray bodies of strikingly attractive design. Radiator and hood follow the lines of the "Little Custom" six-cylinder model, although drawn to larger scale. Interior trim is luxurious and complete. The job runs on 18-inch wheels shod with 30x6.00 balloon tires. Shimmy is conspicuous by its absence, while road irregularities are ironed out by Houdaille shock absorbers at all four corners.

New Jordan Air Line 8 Sedan



This is the new Jordan Air Line eight-cylinder sedan with 116-inch wheelbase, said to be capable of 80 m. p. h.

Available for All Six-Cylinder Cars of this Type Produced Since July, 1925.

Popularity of the newly developed Chrysler "Red-Head" high compression engine has been so great since its announcement late in July that factory production is unable to keep pace with orders, Chrysler Sales Corp. reports.

"A large proportion of the orders being received ask for 100 per cent "Red-Head" equipment on cars wanted.

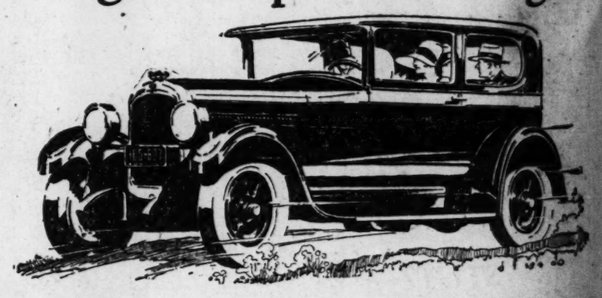
In The New Series A-5 Hupmobile Six

With Perfected High-Compression Engine

TAPPING new sources of power in gasoline of any grade, freeing the full smoothness and flexibility of modern anti-knock fuels, Hupmobile's development of high compression in the New Series A-5 Six brings an entirely new range of performance to six cylinder motoring.

First perfected in the radically new and different Hupmobile Eight three years ago, this advanced type of motoring luxury now comes to Hupmobile Six owners at a truly sensational price.

Nothing remotely approaching the performance of this Six has heretofore been obtainable in a moderately priced car. Getaway is instantaneous. Power is delivered with liquid smoothness at all speeds. Gear shifting is reduced to the absolute minimum.



Most modern of Sixes, the New Series A-5 now offers new beauty and completeness of equipment to match its finer mechanical qualities.

Get the thrill that only perfected high compression gives today. A trial of the Hupmobile Six can be arranged by phoning the nearest Hupmobile dealer.

ratio, the alterations in the engine units lay-out, lighter reciprocating parts and smoother carburetion and, in one case at least, an advance in timing, have come higher engine speeds which mean greater flexibility and smoothness in traffic.

In the latest devices employed to keep the automobile occupant comfortable, one finds new steel alloys used, longer spring leaves, more leaves in the rear and fewer in front, different degrees of arching, new ideas in suspending and shackling and many other thoughts which indicate conclusively that springs have been getting careful attention. Every motorist knows of the debate that has raged for years relative to the advantages or disadvantages of oiling the springs. Then came the arguments over boots or no boots.

Now, if one new type of spring works out and meets the favor of other manufacturers, all these questions may be answered. The "dry-leaf" spring has arrived. Its sponsor declares that it never will need lubrication because the composition of the metal used is such as to assure the exact amount of resiliency without oil or grease during the entire life of the car.

Greater Comfort.

Regardless of the method employed, virtually every manufacturer offering "greater comfort" is correct in his claim. In two medium priced six-cylinder cars, principles that are directly antithetical are used, yet a ride in both automobiles proves that both are more comfortable than their immediate predecessors—which, by the way, seemed to be the ultimate in ease.

Leg room and body room that surpass previous offerings are two other virtues that make for greater comfort in the latest models. Longer and wider bodies are being offered by motor car makers in several fields, a very convincing revelation of confidence in the belief that there is a tremendous market for larger automobiles.

NEW NASH MODELS EASY TO STEER, SAYS FACTORY

Easy steering is a characteristic of 21 new Nash models recently introduced, says the factory.

"Nash engineers," it reports, "have concentrated on overcoming the 'drag' of low pressure tires on the road, without changing gearings so that the steering wheel must be turned through a long arc to turn front wheels. Nash front wheels may be cramped by little more than a single turn of the steering wheel. This has been accomplished at no sacrifice to easy steering, since it requires no more effort than was needed when old-style high pressure tires were used.

"Parking is much easier with Nash type of steering. Women drivers who have piloted the new Nash models praise it, and they like the light controls on the steering wheel, the ease and surety with which the brakes may be applied, the almost effortless operation of the clutch, the convenient location of the long parking brake lever, and the grouping of the instruments, all under glass."

BAKER COMPLETES SPEED RUNS IN G. M. MOTOR TRUCK

Cannonball Baker, distance test driver, who on Sept. 5, left New York City in a two-ton General Motors truck powered with a six-cylinder Buick engine bound for San Francisco on what was called the first transcontinental run with a speed truck, arrived in San Francisco Monday morning, Sept. 12. The total elapsed time consumed on the 3693-mile trip was 5 days, 17 hours, 6 minutes.

Baker's vehicle was equipped with a tank carrying a 5176-pound load of Atlantic Ocean water to be dumped in the Pacific Ocean as part of the reception ceremonies of the General Motors Truck Co. officials tendered him on completion of the trip.

The truck required no mechanical adjustments during the trip and there were no tire changes, Baker reports.

Baker, who passed through St. Louis Wednesday, Sept. 7, was arrested between St. Louis and St. Charles for speeding.

STUTZ

96.30

miles per hour

Altantic City Speedway

Labor Day, 1927

IN the 150-Mile Free-for-All Stock-Car* Race at Atlantic City Speedway on Sept. 5th the three Safety Stutz cars entered won First, Second and Third Prizes! The average speeds of these three cars, for the entire distance, were as follows:

First: 96.308 miles per hour
Second: 94.025 " " "
Third: 93.962 " " "

For consistency of performance, as well as for rate of speed maintained, this showing has never been approached by three cars of any other single make. Furthermore, the speed attained by the winning cars establishes new records up to 150 miles in American stock-car racing.

With clocklike regularity and incredible velocity, the three Stutz speedsters circled the 1½ mile track until Stutz speed and stamina again outdistanced all rivals, including some of the best-known cars in America.

And another great trophy of excellence was added to the long list of prizes won by Stutz in the last fifteen months.

Again

STUTZ Wins Hill-Climbing Honors at Pike's Peak

On Sept. 5th, 1927, for the second consecutive time, a Stutz won the $10,000 Penrose Trophy in the Pike's Peak Free-for-All Hill-Climb. A Standard Safety Stutz Sedan with Weymann Body, the only closed-car entered, covered the mountain course in 21 minutes, 59.3 seconds. In doing so, it defeated the open models of several other well-known makes.

The Special Penrose Cup also was won by a Stutz; a Stutz Special making the remarkable time of 18 minutes, 25.1 seconds, and finishing 1 min., 59.3 sec. ahead of its nearest rival.

So, in one day, on speedway and mountain-course, Stutz again proved surpassing speed, stamina, acceleration and power—still more strongly establishing the superiority of this advanced automobile. It was the most astounding demonstration of a mechanical principle ever witnessed by the automotive world.

Today, the motor car buyer wants today's best—not the best of five or ten years ago. The "Challenger" Safety Stutz is the car of 1927, and of years to come.

Let us give you a demonstration and show you the difference between conventional cars of past prestige, and this modern performer of today.

Fastest Four in America Proves Its Claim to Title

Dodge Averages 67.35 miles per hour in Beating All Other Fours in Atlantic City A.A.A. Race.

The Atlantic City (N.J.) Speedway Association, without Dodge Brothers instigation or knowledge, bought a Dodge Brothers Four and entered it in a Labor Day race for Four cylinder stock cars. Four cars of other makes also competed. All were strictly stock cars as required by the rules of the association.

The race was for 25 miles—to determine which was "The Fastest Four in America."

The Dodge won.

Its average speed for the entire race, from a standing start, was 67.35 miles per hour (officially timed by A.A.A.).

Generous confirmation, to say the least, of the modest claim of "Mile-a-minute Performance!"

Even more remarkable than the speed, however, is the fact that the car had been driven only 10 days and yet was able to withstand this difficult test without once stopping.

Thus the race not only offers conclusive proof of the Dodge's superiority in speed, but stands also as a glowing tribute to the rugged materials and excellent workmanship that go to make it—

America's Fastest and Finest Four!

CHEVROLET AUGUST OUTPUT SETS RECORD

Other G. M. Divisions Show Huge Gains—Buick, Olds Reach Peak Sales.

August was the greatest production month in the history of at least three General Motors divisions, and reports from the various factories show that Chevrolet, Buick, Oldsmobile, Pontiac-Oakland and Cadillac August production each was several thousand units greater than ever before in the same period.

Chevrolet in August completed 91,453 units, bringing the total output for the first eight months of 1927 to 786,336 units as against 513,507 in the same period last year and 732,000 units in all 1926. In August, 1926, Chevrolet turned out 76,586 units, or 14,867 less than August this year.

Buick Sales at Peak.

Buick sales for July and August, 1927 also shattered all records in Buick history, says C. W. Churchill, general sales manager the Buick Motor Co.

Buick July and August deliveries numbered 58,800 units as compared with 44,811 the same period, 1926, or an increase of 13,989 units, Churchill states.

Oldsmobile Record Month.

Oldsmobile not only broke all previous August records last month, but also registered the largest production month in the history of the company, the factory reports.

The company found it impossible to fill all orders, more than 3500 car orders remaining unfilled at the end of the month. Record production is being maintained this month.

Ground has been broken and construction work is now under way on the $3,000,000 expansion program which will substantially increase Oldsmobile production facilities.

Big Oakland-Pontiac Output.

"Our August output was the largest we have ever had for that month and topped last year's total by approximately 3000 Oakland and Pontiac cars. Scheduled production for September and October will likewise be the largest September and October output we have ever had, says W. R. Tracy, vice president of the Oakland Motor Car Co.

Cadillac Production Increases.

The Cadillac Motor Car Co. has just completed a two-year manufacturing program including expansion and re-equipment of its plants to increase production from a maximum of 30,000 to 60,000 cars per year, the factory reports.

"La Salle production alone during its first six months has already surpassed that of any company building an exclusively fine car during its first 12 months."

Millions Spent at Roadside Markets.

According to estimates of the American Automobile Association, motorists throughout the United States will buy $100,000,000 worth of provisions at roadside markets conducted by farmers during the tourist season of 1927.

LOS ANGELES TO GET NEW FIRESTONE PLANT

The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. is to erect a $7,000,000 tire factory in Los Angeles, Cal. Construction will be started October 1 by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. of California, a new subsidiary. Russell A. Firestone, son of Harvey S. Firestone Sr., is head of the coast organization. Harvey S. Firestone is president. E. A. Oberlin Jr., is treasurer and L. T. Lyle is secretary. These officers and L. R. Jackson, form the directorate of the California company.

The new plant is to have ten acres of floor space. Initial daily capacity is placed at 5000 tires and 7000 tubes.

OLDS CAR MAKES 3380-MILE AUSTRALIAN TRIP IN 7 DAYS

A. J. Dunkerley, of Melbourne, recently drove his Oldsmobile touring car the 3380 miles from Darwin, Northern Territory, to Melbourne, in seven days, 18 hours and 54 minutes, says an Olds Motor Works report.

"Dunkerley purchased his Oldsmobile in Melbourne and drove north by easy stages. After a few days in Darwin he decided to attempt to lower the time record by automobile to his home in Melbourne.

"Despite treacherous road conditions, the Oldsmobile with its owner-driver, lowered the best previous record by 20 hours and 17 minutes.

"An exciting experience during the tour occurred at Dajarra, in Queensland, when the car, speeding at more than 35 m. p. h. over an old railway track, struck a washout and was hurled over a 20-foot embankment. A minor repair was made by the owner and the trip continued.

"A thorough examination by expert mechanics in Melbourne showed the car to be in excellent condition mechanically after the phenomenal run."

AUGUST CAR OUTPUT INCREASED OVER JULY

National Auto Chamber Reports 310,075 Units Made for 14 Per Cent Increase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Production of 310,075 motor cars and motor trucks in August by member companies of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce based on shipment records, was reported recently to the directors' meeting of that body here. The total is an increase of 14 per cent over July and 8 per cent above August last year.

The eight months' total for these companies is 11 per cent ahead of the corresponding period last year.

America can be enlightened by a better understanding of European transport conditions, in the view of Windsor T. White, chairman of the motor truck committee of the Chamber, who reported to the directors on his visit to Scandinavian countries while a delegate to the International Chamber of Commerce meeting in Stockholm.

"Conditions are ideal for motor transportation in Europe," said White, "from the standpoint of distances. Countries are thickly populated and the length of haul for freight is relatively short. At the same time American business men should bear in mind that Europe has its long established traditions and customs, and recognition of this is one of the most important things to realize in carrying on trade relationships with these countries."

Outstanding Values Through Standardized Quality

CHRYSLER cars are designed and built for people who want that extra something which makes all the difference between performance and value that are merely satisfactory and performance and value that are truly distinctive.

It is natural then, that the Chrysler should make irresistible appeal to the discriminating motorists of America.

Pick-up and power and speed that amaze as much as they exhilarate — instant responsiveness to steering wheel — brakes that insure safety—most unusual riding comfort—marked freedom from mechanical cares—alluring smartness of line and color.

You will find these qualities vividly outstanding in every Chrysler—inbuilt and inevitable because of the unique Chrysler plan of Standardized Quality manufacture.

There are four great lines to meet the four great divisions of the market—"52," "62," "72" and the Imperial "80." See them. Among them you are bound to find the car that exactly fits your needs—the car that actually provides that "extra something" at a price unbelievably low.

It is said that constipation is the direct cause of more deaths than any dreaded dangerous disease. Stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles are the curse of our nation today. The greatest authorities of our time tell us that constipation is the direct cause of most of our ills and is the primary cause of thousands upon thousands of untimely deaths every year. That is easily understood when you stop and think what happens when you become constipated. No person would knowingly swallow any filthy, rotten thing, yet millions of people, by failing to keep the bowels and kidneys functioning regularly permit the worst kind of filth to remain within their body for days at a time. When stagnant, decaying filth and waste is not thrown off as nature requires, the body becomes a living cesspool. Deadly poisons are created, usually causing stomach, liver and kidney trouble, coated tongue, bad breath, sallow complexion, etc.

AUGUST CAR OUTPUT INCREASED OVER JULY

National Auto Chamber Reports 310,075 Units Made for 14 Per Cent Increase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Production of 310,075 motor cars and motor trucks in August by member companies of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce based on shipment records, was reported recently to the directors' meeting of that body here. The total is an increase of 14 per cent over July and 8 per cent above August last year.

The eight months' total for these companies is 11 per cent ahead of the corresponding period last year.

America can be enlightened by a better understanding of European transport conditions, in the view of Windsor T. White, chairman of the motor truck committee of the Chamber, who reported to the directors on his visit to Scandinavian countries while a delegate to the International Chamber of Commerce meeting in Stockholm.

"Conditions are ideal for motor transportation in Europe," said White, "from the standpoint of distances. Countries are thickly populated and the length of haul for freight is relatively short. At the same time American business men should bear in mind that Europe has its long established traditions and customs, and recognition of this is one of the most important things to realize in carrying on trade relationships with these countries."

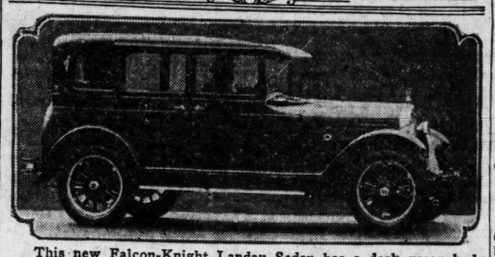
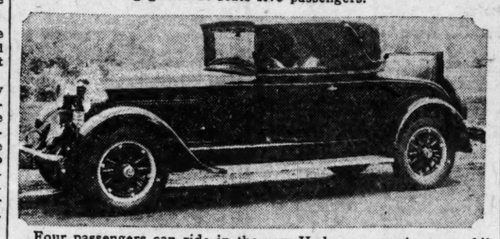
What's New in Motor Cars



This new Falcon-Knight Landau Sedan has a dark green body and black running gear. It seats five passengers.



Four passengers can ride in the new Hudson super-six custombilt stationary coupe. It has a collapsible top.

This new Dodge six-cylinder, two-door senior coupe, seats four passengers. It is capable of 70 m. p. h. according to the factory.

New Falcon Landau Sedan Here

The new Falcon-Knight landau sedan, seating five passengers, is now on display here by the De Luxe Automobile Co., Peerless-Falcon-Knight distributer. The new car is priced at $1295 delivered.

The new sedan has a dark green body and black running gear. The body beading is likewise black and has a green centerline.

Wooden wheels are standard.

The upholstery is black Spanish grain leather.

New Hudson Coupe on Display

The latest addition to the Hudson custombilt line is a stationary coupe with rumble seat and collapsible top. The car is priced at $2325 delivered.

The new coupe has an ivory colored body and black running gear. The wheels are wooden and in color match the body. The collapsible top is tan mohair.

The upholstery, both front and rear compartments, is mottled black and tan Spanish grain leather.

New Dodge 6 Senior Coupe Here

A coupe for four passengers is the latest addition to the new Dodge six-cylinder line, and is being displayed by the Tate Motor Car Co., Dodge distributer here. The car, according to the factory, is capable of 70 m. p. h.

The new coupe has a dark green body, black running gear, and is trimmed in gold. An optional color combination is blue with cream trimmings.

Upholstery is broadcloth.

All door and body panels on the new car are padded to eliminate noises, and beaded cushioning strips have been placed between fenders and body.

New Low-Priced Paige Announced

Paige has announced two new models at a new low price. The cars are a sedan and brougham, each seating five passengers. The latter is to sell for $995, list, marking the first time in Paige history that this company has offered a six-cylinder car for less than a thousand dollars.

The new models will soon be on display by the Wilson Motor Car Co., Paige distributors here.

The new cars are to be equipped with new type manifold recently introduced by Paige to increase efficiency of the motor by more evenly distributing gasoline vapor to combustion chambers.

"Tests show this manifold increases efficiency of the cars from 5 to 10 per cent, for acceleration, hill climbing, power and speed, with a corresponding decrease in gasoline consumption," the factory says.

New Colors for Willys-Knight Line

Optional color combinations in the Willys-Knight Great Six line were announced this week by Willys-Overland, Inc. They are as follows:

Gunmetal gray for upper body, with pastel gray-blue running gear. Striping is deep ivory. Upholstery is gray-blue tone mohair.

Upper body in evergreen, lower body and the wheels pastel Nile green. Striping, ivory and vermilion. The interior trimming sage colored broadcloth with the seat cushions and backs unholstered in patterned broadcloth.

Upper body seal brown with lower body quail brown, and wheels finished light quail brown. Ivory and vermilion striping. The upholstery is heather broadcloth with seat cushions and backs in patterned broadcloth.

Upper body black, lower body maroon, and crimson wheels. This combination is set off strikingly by means of the gold and ivory striping. Upholstery is blue-gray mohair.

An even better car at even lower prices

Since its first day before the public, the Pontiac Six has been scoring a series of triumphs. First came the triumph of its introduction, which resulted in world record sales for a new make of car! Then came a steady succession of important improvements in quality, luxury and convenience.

—improvements that resulted in smoother operation and greater handling ease, in greater comfort, greater economy and greater owner pride—in higher standards of quality and higher levels of popularity!

And now Pontiac Six again represents a sensational new standard of value—the result of this notably finer quality, combined with beautiful new Duco colors on bodies by Fisher, at lower prices on all body types.

This history-making announcement has turned all eyes on the Pontiac Six. It has created a known standard of what buyers have a right to expect in a low-priced six. It is causing thousands to make comparison the basis of their buying——and because no other six at or near $745 offers so many luxury and quality features, Pontiac Six sales continue to establish new high levels. Come in. See and drive the finest low-priced six in automobile history!

New lower prices announced July 15th on all passenger cars.

Eyes Strengthened 50% by Proper Eye Care, Says Doctor

Suggests Simple Home Treatment Which Quickly Relieves All Irritation and Sharpens Vision.

No longer is there any excuse for most of our eye troubles. For specialists have perfected a simple but amazingly effective treatment which not only quickly relieves burning, itching, smarting, aching eyes, but also banishes eye headaches, eye-strain and blurred vision.

This simple treatment is called the Bon-Opto system, and is now being prescribed by physicians and specialists everywhere. It is based on the latest scientific discoveries. Scientists have recently proved that 90 per cent of all eye troubles are due to weakness in certain little muscles which adjust the eye. Eye-glasses alone will not strengthen these muscles. But the Bon-Opto treatment seeps through directly to them, heals and tones them, and soon restores them—and therefore the eyes—to their old-time strength and vigor.

Don't neglect your eyes. The discomfort felt after an automobile ride, a movie or any close work, are important danger signals. Yet every irritation and ache can be almost instantly banished by a Bon-Opto eye-bath, and more serious trouble prevented. Bon-Opto should be in every home. Your eyes are far more important than your teeth. As often as you use your tooth-brush you should take your eye-bath.

So get a package of Bon-Opto. Results guaranteed. Money back without question if you are not delighted with the improvement in your eyes and sight. Bon-Opto is sold by good druggists everywhere.

Get it today of your druggist and send us your name for free booklet "Stronger Eyes and Better Sight". Valmas Drug Co., Dept 180H Rochester, N. Y.

INTERESTING 12,500 MILE TRIP MADE BY ST. LOUISANS

W. B. Knight and Family Visit Rocky Mountain Regions in Buick Sedan.

A 12,500-mile trip through the most picturesque parts of the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions has just been completed by W. B. Knight and family, 6106 Kingsbury boulevard.

Starting from St. Louis, they took U. S. 40 through Kansas City to Denver, Colo. After a tour of Estes Park, they went to Salt Lake City and from there visited Zion Park, the north rim of the Grand Canyon, Bryce's Canyon and returned to Salt Lake City.

From the Mormon city Knight turned northwest through Yellowstone Park to Boise and then followed the Columbia River Highway to Portland, Ore. Seattle was the next stopping place, and from here they visited spots of scenic and historic interest in the State of Washington.

Taking U. S. 99 to Grant's Pass and Crater Lake, they next came to Crescent City, on the Pacific Ocean. Still going south, this time on Red Wood Highway, they arrived in San Francisco for a short stay, and then on to Santa Barbara and Los Angeles. A brief sojourn kept them in Los Angeles until they went further south to San Diego, the most southernly point of their entire trip.

On their return home, they visited Yosemite Park on Ridge Route U. S. 99, taking them over the Tiago Pass and around the western shore of Lake Tahoe to Reno, Nev., thence over U. S. 40 to Salt Lake City and Colorado Springs. From here they traveled over U. S. Route 40 to Kansas City, and then to St. Louis.

The indicator of Knight's Buick sedan showed that they had covered 12,500 miles. This is including all side trips along the regular route, and all mileage recorded while driving around in the larger cities visited.

WHIPPET GOES 12,008 MILES IN 720-HOUR NON-STOP RUN

A Whippet motor recently traveled for 720 hours without a motor stop, averaged 31.11 miles to the gallon of fuel and covered a total distance of 12,008 miles, says Willys-Overland, Inc.

"For 30 days and nights the Whippet roadsters' engine was kept running without a stop, the climax of the tests coming at the end of the route at Ithaca, N. Y., where the car was driven around a half-mile dirt racetrack, breaking the track record for stock four-cylinder cars over a five-mile distance. The Whippet made the five miles in 6 minutes and 34 seconds.

"During the gruelling test the Whippet roadster was driven by 331 drivers. In addition to the unusual fuel economy mark the Whippet consumed but seven quarts of oil and seven gallons of water. This gives an oil consumption of 1705 miles to the quart for the entire trip."

CHANDLER WINS 200-MILE RACE IN SOUTH AMERICA

The 220 mile South American race from Santiago to Panimavida, Chile, recently was won by a Chandler six in five hours and thirty-five minutes. The second car to cross the finish line came in 12 minutes later, says the factory.

"While this time may not seem remarkable, the entire route is in extremely poor condition, making the drive dangerous for even ordinary travel, not to mention racing. Three cars were unable to even complete the distance."

BUYS TEN CHEVROLET TRUCKS

"The truck business has doubled in the past few months, showing the rapidity with which both trucks and light delivery cars have gained favor of business houses in St. Louis," says Charles H. Hilmer, president of the Hilmer-Belcher Chevrolet Co.

As illustration of this, is the sale of 10 Chevrolet trucks by this firm to the Hygrade Laundry Co., 2724 Park avenue, all of which have specially constructed bodies to fit the requirements of the laundry business.

WHITE TRUCK EXPORTS GAIN

White truck and bus deliveries abroad during July and August showed an increase of 107 per cent over the same months in 1926, while deliveries in Canada increased 60 per cent, the factory reports.

"White export business for the entire eight months to Sept. 1 show an increase of 25 per cent in deliveries over the some period, 1926.

THREE STUDEBAKER CARS VICTORIOUS LABOR DAY

"Labor day was a great day for the Studebaker Commander," says the Studebaker Corporation of America, in a letter to the Weber Motor Car Co.

"First, two stock Studebaker Commander sport roadsters at Atlantic City won first and second place in the 75-mile stock car race. The winning car sped around the mile and a half oval at an average rate of 85.95 miles per hour.

"Also, on Labor day, a stock Commander sport roadster took second place in the annual Pike's Peak hill climb. The Commander was beaten out of first place by only 48 seconds by a car costing more than double the Commander."

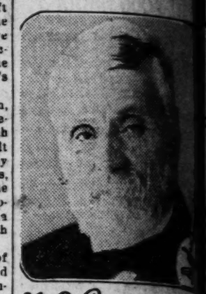
Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.



W. B. Caldwell, M. D. AT AGE 83

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can do for you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE TRIAL BOTTLE.

NOW JORDAN CHALLENGES THE WORLD

Announces New Air Line Eight With Aeroplane Characteristics

Startling and Revolutionary Development With Tremendous Increase in Power, Speed and Acceleration Without an Added Pound of Weight.

New and Scientific Combination of Power and Efficiency Which Made the Flights of Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Byrd Possible—Now for the First Time Applied to a Motor Car.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, September, 18.—Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Company, today announced the initial production of a motor car which will revolutionize all prevailing conceptions of power, speed and efficiency in an automobile.

In all previous engineering efforts to attain high power and efficiency the method has been to build a giant motor of the uneconomic type which, of course, required a giant chassis.

A few have built special racing models designed for the track alone but lacking every day utility.

Some had to be satisfied by stepping up the speedometers to give the impression of speed.

Coincidental with the development of those modern aeroplane motors which made possible the recent flights of Colonel Lindbergh, Major Chamberlin and Commander Byrd, Jordan engineers working quietly with Continental and Stromberg experts conceived the idea of producing a light motor with high speed characteristics that would give a tremendous increase in power, smoothness and flexibility, without adding a pound of weight to the car.

Greatest advance in years

The new Air Line Eight marks the greatest advance in motor car performance that has been made in fifteen years.

The increase in horse power is 33%. Torque is 170 foot pounds—an increase of 21%—and torque is what lifts you over the hills.

Heretofore some cars showing eighty miles an hour on the speedometer were actually doing sixty-eight. In fact, very few people in this country have ever actually ridden over seventy miles an hour.

This new Air Line Eight has not yet been tested to the limit. On the test cars the indicator hit the stop pin at eighty-two miles an hour.

In fact, this motor car can be driven as fast as anyone except a race driver would dare to drive an automobile. It would perhaps be physically impossible for any automobile to pass it on any ordinary road.

Startling acceleration is possible—five to forty miles in high in twelve and one-half seconds.

The speed in second gear is fifty-two miles an hour with ordinary gear ratio.

Astounding hill climbing ability

The fastest test cars before this new Air Line Eight was developed, struggled over Uniontown Hill in Pennsylvania at a little better than twenty-five miles an hour. Drivers on this four mile grade felt like flies climbing out of a milk pitcher.

Jordan engineers, driving the Air Line Eight, were arrested at the top of the Uniontown grade for going forty-eight.

A startling fact regarding the motor is its unusual economy when measured against its performance.

Such skill has been employed in designing the new aerotype duplex carburetion system that the motor is certain to meet all conditions of sudden climatic and altitude changes with maximum power, speed and economy.

Just as important is an entirely new scientific feature—the thermostatic control—which automatically regulates the richness of mixture required in different temperatures and altitudes, thereby avoiding the necessity of changing carburetor adjustments at any time during the variations of seasons.

Specially designed for Speed

Of course it was necessary in order to handle this tremendous increase in power and speed, to build a perfectly balanced chassis of the finest materials obtainable with studied distribution of weight.

This makes possible extremely high speed without vibration, side sway or so called "shimmy."

Only a car using the finest materials and in absolutely perfect balance could possibly use such a powerful motor. The average car could not stand the strain.

Here is a summary of the striking features of this new Air Line Eight.

The center of gravity is low and the bodies are by the finest custom designers.

A new steering device was necessary. It is of the hour glass worm type which operates at any speed with a flip of the finger. So perfectly is it balanced that at the highest speeds the driver can actually take his hands off the wheel.

Very few of the present day chassis could stand a motor of such power. The new Jordan chassis is built not only for perfect balance, but complete rigidity and strength.

Bohnalite pistons and Lanchester torsion neutralizer help to provide a marvelous smoothness and softness in motor operation which is delightful.

Crank-shafts are necessarily the heaviest, made from selected forged steel, double heat treated, machined all over and balanced to a hair line, just as in an aeroplane motor.

Sixty-Five distinct Advantages

With silent timing chain and broad bearings the motor is extremely silent.

Brakes have been designed to the point of highest efficiency for quick stopping.

Springs are long, covering eighty per cent of the wheel base, and with patented rattle proof, self adjusting spring shackles and Houdaille shock absorbers all around, it is the most comfortable car on the road.

Sixty-five distinctive advantages have been incorporated in this car which cannot be covered in this article.

Those interested in the progress of motor design as embodied in the Air Line Eight may obtain complete information by writing to the Jordan Motor Car Company, or through any Jordan representative.

The models include the Air Line Eight Sedan—a new five passenger Victoria and a Playboy Coupe with collapsible or permanent top—all in striking colors.

The first sixty days production will be required to supply dealers and take care of advance orders.

TO GIVE 2000 BADGES AT COURT OF HONOR

Scouts Who Advanced Will Be Rewarded Tomorrow Night.

More than 2000 badges signifying advancement in rank will be awarded to 500 St. Louis Boy Scouts tomorrow evening at the organization's annual Fall Court of Honor, to be held at the Scottish Rite Cathedral at 8 o'clock. The first, the first to be held for the awarding of higher badges since last May, is expected to shatter all local records for a Court of Honor, both in the number of badges presented and in the number of scouts receiving them. Most of the badges were earned at Camp Ironwood, where the work is facilitated by the presence of experts in the lines covered by the various merit badges.

Preceding the ceremonies for a half hour will be an organ recital by Prof. Wade Fallert, while the scouts applying for the awards are assembling. The opening ceremonies will be conducted by Scoutmaster R. R. Smith of Troop 71, assisted by a chorus of scouts from Troop 155, and the drum and bugle corps of Troop 214. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Dwight Bradley of the Webster Groves Congregational Church.

Conduct Eagle Ceremony.

Eagle Scouts Kenneth Allen, Elmer Werder and Gustav Gruenewald will conduct an Eagle Ceremony, calling attention to the ideals and value of scouting, and Eagle Scout Murray Cabell will act as Knight of Achievement in the Eagle presentation.

The badges will be awarded by the following men: Clarence H. Howard, president of the local council, medals for scouts who participated in the jamboree; Morgan Roggeshall, chairman, suburban district court of honor, second-class badges; Earnest N. Birge, district commissioner, west district, first-class badges; Judge Hugo Klein, chairman, south district court of honor, star badges; James A. Cook, member, city court of honor, life badges; Frank V. Hamilton, chairman, city court of honor, eagle badges.

Eagle Scouts Win Palms.

In addition to the regular presentation, ceremonies will be made for the awarding for the first time in St. Louis of palms to Eagle scouts who have earned additional merit badges. Heretofore an Eagle has been the highest rank in scouting, but it is now excelled by the Palm Eagle. The palms will be given by Chester B. Bowles, vice president of the local council.

Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals' baseball club, will make the address of the evening.

All scouts who are to receive awards or who are to participate in the opening ceremonies are expected to report at the west front entrance of the Cathedral between 7 and 7:30 o'clock, to receive instructions. Every troop having candidates for Star, Life, Eagle or palm badges has been requested to send its troop flag and bearer to take part in the opening ceremonies.

C. M. Taylor, outdoor member of the Troop Committee of Troop 18, at the Compton Heights Baptist Church, assisted in the rescue of 12 persons imprisoned in a Pullman car thrown into the Missouri River during the wreck of the Rock Island passenger train at Centaur, Mo. Although the Pullman was in 10 feet of water, with water chest-deep inside the car, Taylor and another man threw a plank from the bank to the car door for a bridge, waded into the car, and dragged out all the passengers, some of whom were injured.

The account was obtained from witnesses, as Taylor refused to discuss the rescue.

Boy Scout Notes

North District.

The scouts of Troop 47 spent the week before school opened on a camping trip at the troop's permanent camping grounds near Bonne Terre, Mo. During the camp the scouts constructed a nine-foot dam across a small creek to form a swimming pool. Other activities on the outing were a nine-mile hike to Hildebrandt, a trip to Twin Caves and a swim in the Big River.

Fred Miller was elected scribe at a meeting of the troop last week. Harry Sachs was appointed junior assistant. The troop is on an overnight hike this week-end, to pass outdoor tests. The hike will end with a treasure hunt. Two of the scouts of the troop was advanced to the star scout rank at Glendale this summer, and another was promoted to first class.

Troop 206 now has a full Troop Committee that is present at all meetings and attends all hikes with the troops. At the last meeting Monday night four tests were passed: Two boys passed first-class signaling, one first aid and one second-class signaling. This troop visited Troop 72 the other evening.

Scoutmaster Simons of Troop 3 will receive three merit badges at the court of honor tomorrow night. Several members of the troop will also receive badges. All scouts have been asked to be present at the next meeting to get details of the next hike.

Troop 72 of the Neighborhood House had as visitors at the last meeting Scout Kurst of Troop 243 and Scoutmaster Herzog and his Troop 206. Mr. Kohler, former scout instructor, also visited the troop and helped the scribe with the records.

Troop 147 invested Fred Bauer as a second-class scout at its last meeting. Chairman of the Troop Committee Voos gave a talk on the meaning of the word, "Honor," and Edward Lore explained the meaning of the flag. During the past week Senior Patrol Leader White passed the carpentry and metal working merit badges. Scribe Roy is the first second-class scout in the troop to take advantage of the new merit badge system by passing basketry. The troop now has a new junior assistant scoutmaster. Scout Sherrer has advanced to first-class rank, and Scout Moritz has become second-class.

West District.

The Liberty Congregational Church, 3871 Finney avenue, is contemplating organizing a scout troop with the assistance of P. R. Deberry, a scoutmaster with seven years' experience.

Troop 2, of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, had its first fall meeting last Friday night. This troop is planning a mystery hike for Saturday, Sept. 24. The hike will be conducted by patrols, the patrol "Dad" being in charge of each patrol. A display of all nature history specimens and pieces of craft work obtained during the summer was made last Friday night. After the display, specimens kept to be property of the troop were placed in permanent display cases provided for the purpose.

Troop 5, of the West Presbyterian Church, 5872 Maple, is forming a "Dad's" club. Plans are under way with Harry Frank, chairman of the Troop Committee, assuming active lead of the project. The fathers of several of the boys have already expressed a desire to join the club, and the auxiliary is expected to be organized immediately. Among the men already interested in the movement are Prof. Stephens, J. R. Eakin, James E. Dome, E. C. Nicholson, W. L. Smith, F. S. Spurr, R. L. McClean, H. H. Reinhard and D. W. Voyles. One of the early activities planned by this club will be an overnight hike Sept. 23 and 24.

Scout Terry Walters was made Senior Patrol Leader of Troop 23 at a special meeting last week. An election was held by the older boys of the troop and Ray Molitor, a new boy who has been transferred from Troop 180, was elected to membership. New patrols also were organized. A Flying Eagle Bicycle Club has been formed and several trips have been taken by the boys.

Troop 70 held its annual election of officers Sept. 9. Those elected are: Senior patrol leader, Harold Crowder; scribe, Malcom Lowry; patrol leader of the Eagle patrol, Malcolm Jones; Fox patrol, Edwin Still; Stag patrol, Arthur Boroughf; Panther patrol, Francis Forster. The entire troop committee was present, and outlined plans for the fall work, which will include an automobile hike to Springfield, Ill., several overnight hikes, and a fathers' and sons' hike. Plans were made to improve an enlarge the troop drum corps. Troop 71 has not missed a meeting all summer. Last Saturday the scouts went on a hike to Cliff Cave under the leadership of Assistant Scoutmaster Carroll Voigt.

South District.

Troop 157 will give a public entertainment of several acts on the lawn of the Advent Evangelical Lutheran Church, Winnebago and South Grand boulevard, next Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. This will be the annual fall get-together meeting for the troop, which has been meeting all summer.

A new member, Arthur Crigger, has joined Troop 143, making 28 scouts now in the troop.

Four scouts of Troop 57 were presented advanced rank badges in a scout candle altar ceremony at the last meeting of the Joseph M. Fournier Jr., American Legion Post No. 3, which sponsors the troop. Scoutmaster Fichtel conducted the ceremony, which the post plans to repeat whenever a scout from the troop advances in rank. It is expected so doing will increase the interest of the legion members in the troop, and encourage the scouts to work for the higher badges.

Sixteen scotus and three troop committeemen of Troop 160 went on an overnight hike to Belleville two weeks ago Saturday. A rainstorm, coming up in the night, the hikers took refuge in a barn, from which they were roused by a motorist whose automobile was mired in the dirt road. The boys turned out in the rain and pulled the car to solid ground, as a good turn. The return hike was made Sunday.

Troop 37 will hold its first meeting of the fall Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All former scouts have been invited to be present.

Troop 143 began its regular meetings at the Hancock High School Monday. The mystery contest is drawing to a close with Scouts Kirk and Adams tied for first place with 55 points. Scout Forshee is second with 45. At the Court of Honor tomorrow night 143 will have nine scouts, Assistant Scoutmaster Jones and Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Shoemaker receiving merit badges.

Girls Install Officers.

Installation of new officers for the coming year occupied the girls of Girl Scout Troop 30 at the first meeting of the season last Monday. The troop had not met during the summer. Dorothy Forsberg was elected editor, to handle the news of the troop during the winter.

Walther League to Have Picnic.

The annual picnic of the St. Louis Walther League will be held this afternoon at Crystal Springs Farm, near St. Charles. Special street cars will leave the Wellston loup at 1 o'clock and will be met by busses at St. Charles, which will take the picnickers to the farm. About 750 are expected to attend.

Dr. McIvor to Preach Today.

The Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor will return to his pulpit today at the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster place, after vacation of two months in Nova Scotia, his early home, and in the mountains of Pennsylvania. At the morning and evening services the full choir, which has been reorganized, will sing under the direction of Ernest Prang Stamm.

Testimonial Dinner for Findly.

A testimonial dinner for William T. Findly, whose resignation as general secretary of the Chamber of Commerce becomes effective Oct. 1, will be given Monday evening, Sept. 26, in the chamber's dining room. Among the speakers will be former Mayor Kiel, Mayor Miller and Harold M. Bixby, president of the chamber.

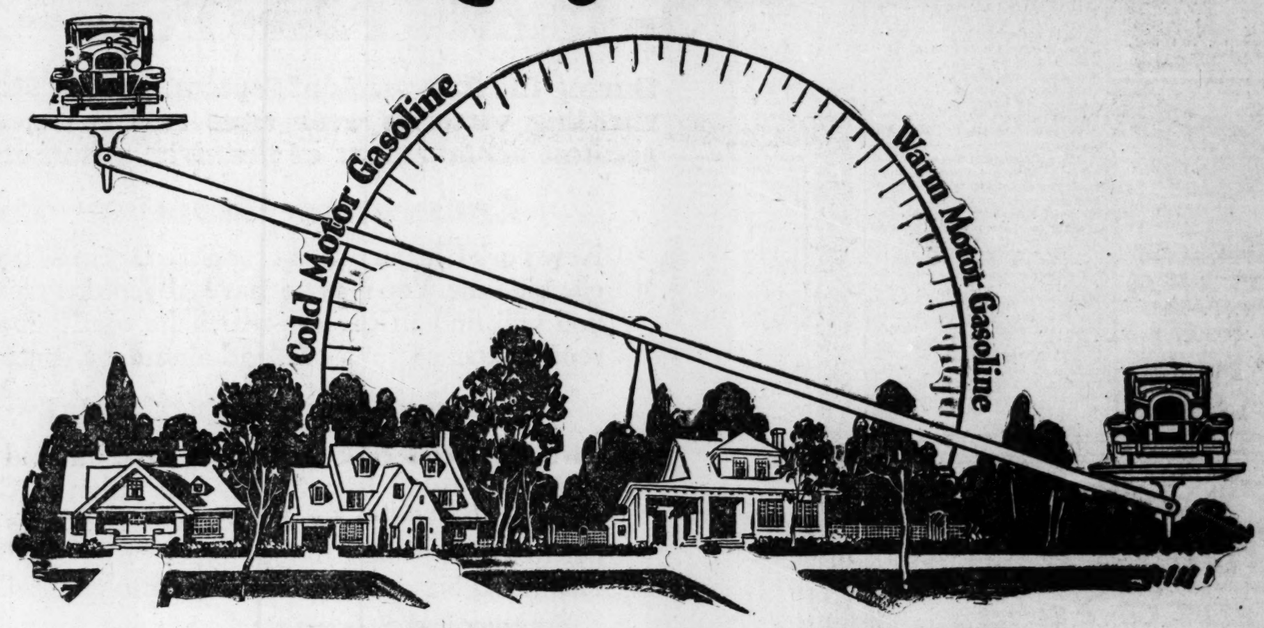
How many blocks to warm up your motor?



PIERCE PENNANT gasoline is "balanced." It is properly proportioned between cold-motor gasoline and warm-motor gasoline

The motor of this car, with all the latest efficiency aids, is thoroughly warm in the first block!

Warm gasoline runs your car better than cold gasoline. In modern automobiles, the gas begins to be heated almost from the first explosion. You drive only a block or two before the motor is thoroughly warm. Even with the older cars, it is a matter only of a few blocks more.

Why, then, buy cold-motor gasoline, since practically all of your driving is done with a warm motor? Cold-motor gasoline DOES NOT HAVE THE POWER when used in a warm motor. The U.S. Bureau of Standards, the colleges, the automotive engineers, all specify gasoline properly proportioned for both cold-motor operation and warm-motor operation—in other words, correctly "balanced".

PIERCE PENNANT is "balanced" gasoline. Likewise—and this is important — PIERCE PENNANT motor oil is "balanced" or "proportioned" to give proper results in warm as well as cold motors.

An hour's driving will prove to you for keeps the better performance of PIERCE PENNANT products. A week will show you that this better performance ACTUALLY "costs less per mile."

HER 14 SONS ALL ILLITERATE

English Mother Testifies Only Women of Her Family Can Read.

By the Associated Press

CROYDON, England, Sept. 17.—Women are the only literates in the family of Mrs. A. Harris, she testified in Police Court here.

In excusing one of her sons for failure to register a change in ownership of a motor cycle, Mrs. Harris said none of her 14 sons could read or write, neither could her husband, a laborer. "They went to school," said the worried mother. "But none can read or write, except my girl of 15 years. I am the good scholar of the family, and I left school when I was 11."

STUDENTS OF ART GIVE FULL TIME TO SUBJECT

Vocational School at Central High Offers Intensive Training at Early Age.

One of the features of the Board of Education's new Vocational School, now in operation at Central High School, is the Art Department, where students of high school age may begin their art education more intensively than has hitherto been possible.

The Vocational School was started in February with branches at Yeatman, Roosevelt and Franklin schools, but this term all the work is being concentrated at Central. It is the purpose of Superintendent of Instruction Maddox and the board to provide a school where students may concentrate entirely on the one subject in which they wish to perfect themselves without having to carry extraneous studies.

Students in the art department of the Vocational School may attend a half day or a full day or the evening sessions the first four evenings of each week, or they may elect to study both days and evenings. Their work is entirely confined to art subjects, the objective being to give them firm groundwork in drawing. Later, by carrying advanced courses, they may develop into advertising illustrators, magazine or newspaper artists or become painters. The art school is under the direction of Miss Jessie Geyre.

Other divisions of the vocational school, which are open to adults also, prepare students for shop or business jobs, giving them only those studies which are applicable directly to the work they wish to do.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER

1—Sets new coast-to-coast record!

2—Wins 1st and 2nd places in Atlantic City Stock Car Race!

3—Climbs Pikes Peak—22 min. 47 sec.

During the first week of September, The Studebaker Commander, by thrilling victories over time and space, again proved itself "the greatest achievement of post-war automotive engineering."

Endurance—Stamina—Dependability

New York Harbor to San Francisco Bay in 77 hours and 40 minutes—total elapsed time. You may not have Ab Jenkins' craving to shatter records, but you will find in the car which he used dependability, freedom from repair expense, long life, and abundant, eager power for all your needs.

Speed—Smoothness—Comfort

Two Studebaker Commanders were entered in the 75-mile race for stock cars listed below $2000, at Atlantic City on Labor Day. They finished first and second, with average speeds of 85.95 and 84.58 miles per hour. The latest models of Chrysler "72," Buick Master Six, Nash Advanced Six and Hudson were also entered.

You won't ever want to go that fast, but you can find daily use for the acceleration, the smoothness, the comfort which the quiet Big Six motor offers at ordinary speeds.

Mountain-Climbing

In the stock car race to the top of Pikes Peak on Labor Day, The Commander was second only to a car which lists at three times The Commander price.

Thus we not only claim but prove that this versatile automobile will out-perform any other car within a thousand dollars of its price.

No wonder The Commander outsells the combined totals of all the other cars in the world that equal it in rated power.

NEW LOW PRICES

All Studebaker models have more than $100 in extra equipment without extra cost, including front and rear bumpers; shock absorbers; coincidental lock to steering-ignition; engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on dash; etc.

FINANCING OF HOTEL JEFFERSON ANNEX ARRANGED

St. Louis and Chicago Banks Underwrite Project —Buildings Will Represent $5,000,000 Outlay.

800 ROOMS IN ENLARGED BUILDING

Negotiations Under Way for Conversion of Old St. Nicholas Into Hotel Again.

By Berry Moore.

Arrangements have been completed with the First National Co., the investment department of the First National Bank in St. Louis, and the Continental Commercial Co. of Chicago, for financing the proposed 13-story addition to Hotel Jefferson. Plans also provide for the remodeling of the present hotel on a scale conforming with that of the new building.

When the work is completed, the two buildings will represent an investment of $5,000,000, but the loans to be made by the First National Co. and the Continental Commercial Co. do not approach that amount.

The addition will be built on ground in the rear of the present structure and extend from Locust to St. Charles streets, with the Bell Building at Thirteenth and Locust, and the new King Garage at Thirteenth and St. Charles streets on its west. The building contract has been let to the Boaz-Biel Construction Co. and contraction is to be started Sept. 25.

800 Rooms Each With Bath.

Several years ago the Board of Public Service approved an ordinance for vacating the alley running north and south from Locust to St. Charles, and for the intersecting alley running west to Thirteenth street, in this block, in order to permit the extension of the hotel.

Plans call for 800 rooms, including the present Jefferson and the new addition, which is approximately double the capacity of the present, as it now stands. There will be a tile bath in connection with each room.

The addition will form an "L" above the first floor, with an open court. The main dining room will occupy the first floor of the new building.

The entire first floor, including the lobby of the present Jefferson, will be reconstructed, with the new plans including a mezzanine and large banquet and ball room, coffee shop, etc. The basement will be occupied by a cafeteria.

The depth of the addition exclusive of the north and south alley, which it will embrace, will be 200 feet on both Locust and St. Charles.

The original plans for the enlarged hotel contemplated extending the lobby of the present Jefferson from Twelfth to Thirteenth and from Locust to St. Charles. With a magnificent lounge running from north to south, but were blocked by construction of the Bell building.

Chicagoans Hold Half Interest.

About two years ago, Lyman T. Hay, president of the Hotel Jefferson Co. and the Gaines Estate, sold a half interest in the hotel to a Chicago group headed by Mac L. Rich and Carl C. Roessler, who have operated Chicago hotels for more than twenty-five years.

The present Jefferson was opened on the eve of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition by Festus J. Wade, and the Mercantile Trust Company, of which he is president, made the loan for the project. The present building is twelve stories high with superstructure and has a frontage of 220 feet on Twelfth street extending from Locust to St. Charles streets.

Negotiations, it is understood, are under way for a 30-year lease of the Victoria building at the Northwest corner of Eighth and Locust streets, with plans for its conversion for hotel purposes. The building is sought by Harry Sodini, proprietor of the Maryland Hotel, in connection with Denby & Steinbaum, real estate operators. The building is owned by the Hemmelgarn-Harrison Lumber Co. of Cape Girardeau, Mo., with E. C. Grimes as its manager. Oreon E. & R. G. Scott hold the loan on the building. The building was that of the St. Nicholas Hotel, before its conversion several years ago into an office building.

In this column last Sunday, it was stated that Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, was principal owner of Hotel Majestic at Eighth and St. Charles streets. This was an error, it appears, as Mr. Bradshaw

CHAIN STORE FIRM LEASES 29 STORES

Great Atlantic and Pacific Co. Entered Field in St. Louis 11 Weeks Ago.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., whose headquarters are at 3127 South Grand boulevard, has signed a lease with the Gloria Lee Realty Co. for a store room at 2001 South Thirty-ninth street. The building is composed of six store rooms, and the tea company will take the corner store.

Another lease has been signed with Vincent A. Hellman and Fern B. Hellman for store room at 2913 South Jefferson avenue. Another store room in the same building has been leased from Lilburn and Elizabeth May.

The Arlette Realty Co., whose agents will be Henry R. Weisel Co. has leased a store room at 528 North Taylor avenue.

Work has begun on the store room leased from Morris Epstein, at 2333 South Kingshighway boulevard. This should be ready for occupancy within the next six weeks.

The most recent store the tea company has opened is located at 3308 Meramec avenue. It was leased from Herman Klein of 3203 Meramec avenue.

Officials of the company state they are still looking for desirable locations. Since the tea company has been in St. Louis, 11 weeks, it has opened 29 stores.

Watkins & Co. Has $60,000 Sales.

John A. Watkins & Co., reports the following sales and loans, amounting to $60,000: 5931 Elmbank avenue, seven-room modern home with lot 100x135 for Wiley E. & Laura B. Daniel to Joe. W. and Agnes H. Capstick, consideration $6000. Eighty-acre farm with five-room frame house, barn and outhouses in Lincoln County, near Wright City, Mo., from Joe W. and Agnes H. Capstick to a client. Loans made were in amounts of $2000 to $15,000.

Report of Rengel-Weber Sales.

Rengel-Weber Realty Co. reports the following recent sales: Single flat, 3618 Vista, Louis Fisher to J. A. Newman; brick cottage, 3224 Dakota, W. F. Eberlin to G. F. Herrmann; cottage, 3863 O'Meara, E. M. Harris to A. Wagner; 40-foot lot, on Rhodes west of Macklind, John Gysbers Jr. to T. S. Watts. The firm also reports an increased activity since Sept. 1, and expects that as soon as the hot wave moderates there will be a very good demand for residential properties.

WOULD RENAME STREET DELMAR

Delmar boulevard will extend all the way downtown if the wish of the Morgan Street Improvement Association is fulfilled. The organization, at its meeting last week, voted unanimously in favor of renaming Morgan street, when widened, Delmar.

The association expressed its desire that the widening process be hastened, that the present car tracks be kept on the street, and that a one-hour parking rule be applied to one side of the street.

Henri Chouteau was elected president of the organization, with W. A. Meletio, A. E. Voigt, Sam A. Bonder, Max Roufa, Anthony Repetto and L. G. Hadley as vice presidents. Morris Roufa was elected secretary, Sam A. Bonder treasurer, and Michael Kutten sergeant-at-arms.

HENRY R. WEISELS CO. TO BE AGENT OF FOX THEATER BLDG.

Henry R. Weisels Co. has been appointed agent by Fox Theatrical Enterprises, of New York, and the Theater Realty Co. for their buildings at Grand and Washington boulevard. A. M. Frumberg of Laughlin, Frumberg, Blodgett & Russell is attorney for the Fox interests in St. Louis, and president of the Theater Realty Co.

Construction of the Fox Theater is now under way. The six-story fireproof Humboldt Building, now under the management of Henry R. Weisels Co., will be surrounded by new structures.

On the Grand boulevard front, south of the Humboldt and north of the Grand entrance of the new theater, will be erected a two-story building. On the lot immediately south of the main theater entrance and at the northwest corner of the east and west alley, another two-story building is to be constructed. On the Washington boulevard frontage, immediately west of the Humboldt Building and 93 feet west of Grand, a one and one-half story building will be erected in the Spanish style of architecture. This building will contain 12 stores. All of the stores will be ready for occupancy in about six months.

Seeks Two Blocks in South Holly Hills.

J. I. Epstein & Son report the sale in South Holly Hills of 1250 feet, two blocks on Kingshighway Southwest, and bounded on the east by Carondelet Park. August A. Wachter Insurance Co. represented the purchaser.

Holdoway & Co. Sales.

William J. Holdoway & Co. reports the sale of 4873 Margaretta avenue, a brick bungalow, for Walter D. Dodd, and 119 Edwin avenue, Glendale, Dutch Colonial, for George P. Hironimus, to Thomas Carswell.

Real Estate Dealers Return.

James M. Franciscus has returned from a month's sojourn at the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs. Isaac A. Hedges returned during the week from a tour of Europe.

$3,896,600 IN NEW BUILDING CONTRACTS DURING AUGUST

St. Louis had $3,896,600 in new building and engineering contracts last month, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation. The August total showed a decrease of 32 per cent from July of this year and 11 per cent from August, 1926.

In the total for August of last year there was included a single $1,000,000 contract. Eliminating this, August shows a gain of 16 per cent over the same period of a year ago.

Large increases over August of last year were shown in commercial, industrial and public work and utility construction, while residential building decreased.

Analysis of the August construction record showed the following items of importance: $2,006,200, or 52 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $660,300, or 17 per cent, for commercial buildings; $318,800, or 8 per cent, for public work and utilities, and $227,300, or 6 per cent for public buildings.

New construction started in Missouri in August amounted to $12,685,700, representing a decrease of 62 per cent from August of last year and 10 per cent from July of this year.

The building activity in Missouri during August included the following important items: $5,200,500 or 41 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings: $2,840,900, or 22 per cent, for public works and utilities; $1359,700, or 11 per cent, for commercial buildings, and $951,000, or 7 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

New construction started in this State in the first eight months of this year has reached a total of $116,612,200. This figure showed a drop of 12 per cent from the amount reported in the first eight months of last year.

BELLIS REALTORS — GARFIELD 0378

GREATER ACTIVITY IN REAL ESTATE ON DENNY ROAD

One Tract of 70 Acres Is Sold by Carroll Berkley at Price Said to Be $65,000.

As a center of real estate interests, Geyer road, between Clayton and Manchester roads, is beginning to reflect the activity of Denny, Clayton and Manchester roads. With relatively low prices prevailing on this highway as compared with those obtaining on Denny road, paralleling on the east, opportunities for profitable investments on Geyer road are attracting attention, according to real estate men.

Recent purchases on the Geyer road include 70 acres on the west side, one-half mile north of the Clayton road, by Carroll Berkley, and 25 acres on the east side by a client of Edward L. Bakewell. Another 10 acres on the west side of Geyer road, just north of the Clayton road, also has been purchased by Berkley. Bakewell's purchase is at the southeast corner of his Phoenix Stock Farm development, situated between Clayton and Manchester road, and extending from Denny to Geyer road.

The reported consideration for the 70 acres was $65,000, and for the 25 acres, $25,000. The price paid for the 10 acres was not disclosed.

$56,000 Profit in 5 Years.

As an illustration of the advance in prices in this territory, statistics furnished by Berkley show that 18 years ago the 70 acre tract was sold for $9000, and five years ago for $22,500. Just before the over-night advance in prices in this part of St. Louis County about two years ago, a client purchased 15 acres on the west side of Geyer road about 2000 feet north of Manchester, through Charles L. Weber. The price paid was not given out. An adjoining 25 acres was recently sold by the Weber agency for $900 an acre. He has declined $900 an acre for his tract, it is said.

Previous outstanding acquisitions in this section of St. Louis County included 23 acres at the southeast corner of Geyer and Clayton roads by Jack Dubinsky, who has declined a large profit on his investment.

Geyer road is now being improved and installed with water mains in connection with those on Clayton road, which have been put in as far west as Ballas road.

Refuses $3000 an Acre.

Eugene J. Altheimer of Altheimer, Calmer & Williams, with others, purchased 35 acres at the northeast corner of Clayton and Denny roads, and H. W. Herwick 150 acres at the southwest corner of Clayton road, both purchases being made on the eve of the big increase in land values in this part of St. Louis County. Herwick has refused an offer of $5000 an acre for the corner part of his tract. A client of LeGrand Jones recently acquired 40 acres on Clayton road, just east of the Denny road, for which he has turned down a handsome profit.

Apparently the Bakewell development on the west side of Denny road, extending through to Geyer road, launched three years ago, has given this section its impetus. This tract has been divided into acre tracts, which are being acquired for homes. The new Bakewell, Adelbert von Hontard and Louis A. Hager homes are among the most attractive on Denny road. The Denny road frontage of this tract is held at $2500 an acre.

Litzinger road has been extended from Warson road on the east to Denny road on the west, which will improve transportation facilities.

CLOSE LEASE ON STORE AT 903 PINE STREET

Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., announces closing a long-term lease on the store at 903 Pine street, in the Maryland Hotel, with the Poole-Maytag Co., St. Louis agents of the Maytag washer. The company, with general offices in the Arcade Building, has six other retail stores in various parts of the city opened during the last five years.

A store room at 4909 Delmar boulevard, in the Roosevelt Hotel, was leased during the week to a chain store hosiery company who plan to open at least a dozen neighborhood stores this fall. Isaac T. Cook & Co. represents this concern.

LONG LEASE TAKEN ON 22ND AND WASHINGTON CORNER

The Puritan Oil Corporation has taken a long-term lease on Twenty-second street and Washington avenue from Bertha A. and Harry W. Kroeger.

New roadways and increased automobile traffic assured for Washington avenue, has caused the oil corporation to take a lease for an additional term through the Mercantile Trust Co., which represented all parties in the transaction.

A Bungalow Ranging Around $10,000

(Associated Architects' League of St. Louis. Plan 6-8 130.)

A LARGE porch, with a door opening directly into a living room which has a neat fireplace, balanced by casement windows. The dining room is rectangular in shape and a bay with three windows adds to its attractiveness. The sunroom is lighted from both sides by double windows and is square in shape. This is a nice feature when one wants a table in the center of the rooms for it allows easy passage.

The kitchen has built-in cases, a pot closet, flues for the range, sink, and plenty of space for the table and ice box.

The two bedrooms open into small hall, and tiled bath is directly between them. The bedrooms have plenty of closet space and the bathroom has a linen closet.

This house can be built for $9800 to $10,500, including heating, sodding and fixtures.

Fire Resistant Medium.

The evils of fire-inviting construction have received tremendous publicity of late. Our annual fire loss is estimated at five hundred millions of dollars. Builders and owners are coming to realize that all construction should be truly fire resistant, whether built of wood fully protected or of incombustible materials.

TOURIST LOCATION—Fine, in Arcadia; 26 acres, houses, barn, etc.; highway passes through property. Low price. JAS. C. MORFIT, 718 E. Big Bend rd.

WHY pay commission when you can buy from builder? Five-room brick, tile bath, gas, water, electric. Ask for Mr. Birk at 6021-23 Carson rd. Wabash 96M. (c)

ARE YOU HANDY? If you can fix up a place, we'll supply the material, you do the work. Practically no cash needed and monthly payments will be made same as rent. We have in our hands that is badly in need of fixing up. We'll give it to you at what it stands us, which is very little; county water, electric; lot 50x103.2; sheds, large chicken yard, etc. Fix it up and make money on it; I saw a man advertised one like this and sold it in a fifty. so if you're interested, come and see us. Take line 10 Charlack rd. See Mr. Armbruster in 2-story brick northwest corner, or drive out to Lackland, west to Lackland to Charlack rd., then north 2 blocks.

WHY SWELTER in the heat of the city? Own your own home in Outer Best Terrace, where the cool breezes blow; get out of the rut; $10 down and $10 a month will buy a lot; also some choice 4-room bungalows for sale. Owner will sacrifice. SCHROEDER-WATSON REALTY CO., 8154 Chestnut. GArfield 2030

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE
YOUR FRIENDS DO NOT HAVE TO SIGN FOR YOU. NO COMMISSION OR FEES. NO DEDUCTION: YOU GET EXACTLY THE AMOUNT APPLIED FOR.
You do not have to have a finely furnished home to borrow money from us, as your ability to pay a small monthly payment is all we ask.
Your employer is never notified, neither do we make inquiries of friends or relatives, therefore all transactions are between you and us.
When dealing with an old-established firm which does not use "high-power" methods you risk neither your security nor your peace of mind.
YOU MAY PAY
$ 1 per month on a $ 20 loan
$ 2 per month on a $ 40 loan
$ 3 per month on a $ 60 loan
$ 4 per month on an $ 80 loan
$ 5 per month on a $100 loan
$10 per month on a $200 loan
$15 per month on a $300 loan
On our Twenty-Payment Plan with LEGAL RATE of interest payable monthly. It costs nothing to investigate.
Every dollar paid on the loan reduces the cost.

BODY OF DANCER LIES IN STATE

Former Pupils of Isadora Duncan, in Greek Dress, Pay Tribute.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—In an azure-draped room before a complete stage setting which the noted dancer had used in her dance interpretations, the body of Isadora Duncan lay in state today at the home of her brother, Raymond, while a silent procession of friends passed before her light oak casket, covered with violet velvet.

The body was brought here from Nice, where the dancer was killed Wednesday when her scarf became entangled in the wheel of an automobile in which she was riding. The body was met by Elizabeth Duncan, a sister, who arrived today from Salzburg, and a group of the deceased dancer's former pupils, dressed in Greek dancing costumes. Floral tributes from friends and former associates banked the casket. Funeral services will be held Monday morning.

JULIA HOYT, ACTRESS, A BRIDE

Marriage to Louis Calhern Takes Place at Noroton, Conn.

By the Associated Press.

NOROTON, Conn., Sept. 17.—Mrs. Phillip Lydig Hoyt, known on the stage as Julia Hoyt, and Louis Calhern, who appeared with her in "The Dark" in New York last year, were married in the Noroton Presbyterian Church this afternoon by the Rev. George Montgomery.

Mrs. Hoyt before her marriage to Philip Lydig Hoyt in 1914, was Julia Wainwright Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Robbins of New York. She obtained a divorce in Paris in 1924. Her first stage appearance was in 1921, with William Faversham in a revival of the "Squaw Man."

POPE TRIES OUT NEW AUTO

Car Built in Milan Will Replace One Used for Years.

ROME, Sept. 17.—Pope Pius today tried out in the Vatican Garden the new automobile which was constructed for him in Milan, and all the conveniences of which were made at his suggestion. The machine supplants one which has been used for several years and which the Pope had noticed had difficulty in climbing the small hills in the gardens when carrying himself, his personal valet, a chauffeur and an attendant.

The Pontiff greatly admired the new car and jokingly said it fulfilled his requirements so well that some day he would learn to drive it himself.

LABOR RESOLUTION OPPOSES PACIFISM

Workers for Peace Are Enemies of Wage Earners, Convention Says.

A resolution decrying pacifism in America, was adopted unanimously at yesterday's session of the Illinois Federation of Labor convention, in East St. Louis, after the resolution had been approved in speeches by John H. Walker and Victor Olander, president and secretary, respectively, of the organization.

The resolution protested vigorously against these enemies of organized wage earners of America," as pacifists were styled.,

"The right of national defense is in essence the same as the right to strike for the maintenance of decent living standards," the resolution stated, "and the unholy alliance of international bankers is intent on the creation of vast international industrial combinations, employing cheap labor, with the self-acclaimed idealists who, under various disguises, propose the submergence of America into an international capitalistic combine.

Says Pacifism Harms Labor.

"The so-called peace movements are inimical to the welfare of the American wage earners and lead to the destruction of nationality and leveling of the living standards of the American people to the plane of international coolieism and peasantry.

"The doctrines of these peace movements would make it possible for the vital interests of American wage earners and their social and cultural status and the standards of living to be subjected to the judgment of other people.

"Great endowment funds left by notorious oppressors and exploiters of American labor are devoted to the propagation of doctrines which undermine the national integrity of Americans and threaten the prospect and hope of our people for continued betterment of their economic, educational and other opportunities enjoyed by the wage earners of the nation."

Two Oppose Resolution.

Beulah Berozheimer and James A. Meade, school teacher delegates from Chicago, pleaded against the resolution, "in the name of the children who would suffer if the spirit of militarism possesses the labor movement of the country." They said that, inasmuch as the Federation had been unable to indorse a definite peace program, it was unjust that the organization should go on record for militarism which, they said, had been the enemy of working classes of all ages.

No votes were cast against the resolution when it was adopted.

IRISH GOVERNMENT FAILS TO GET DECISIVE MAJORITY

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Sept. 17.—Latest returns tonight—still incomplete—from the Free State Parliamentary elections gave the following results: Government, 38 seats; Fianna Fail (De Valera party), 34; Labor, 9; Farmers', 3; Independents, 7; Redmonites, 2; Workers' Union, 1.

Although a large number of seats still were unsettled, it seemed there was little chance now that the Government would obtain a decisive majority in the new Dail.

The most striking feature of the election thus far has been the poor showing of the laborites and farmers who held 22 and 11 seats, respectively, in the old Dail.

Thomas Johnson, labor leader, who would have succeeded President Cosgrave had the latter been beaten in the recent confidence vote, has been defeated in the County Dublin election. Cosgrave, on the other hand, had possibly his greatest personal successes in Cork City his poll of "first preferences" was the highest on record and more than double the quota needed for election. He repeated this success by heading the poll in Carlow with 13,950 votes.

COMMUNITY FUND PREPARES FOR ITS ANNUAL CAMPAIGN

The special gifts division of the Sixth Annual Community Fund campaign, to be held Oct. 24 to Nov. 3, is the first unit to complete its list of captains, according to the report of Alfred Fairbank, campaign chairman. The special gifts division will present the Community Fund appeal to givers in St. Louis and St. Louis County who have hitherto subscribed $250 or more. The list includes approximately 2500 names.

The division is headed by Ingram Boyd, president of the Boyd-Richardson Co. Preliminary work of interviewing those who expect to be away during the campaign is already under way, and a subscription of $4000 was obtained from a business man who left for Europe yesterday.

Directors of other divisions are expected to name their captains next week, after which team workers, of whom approximately 4000 will be needed for the campaign, will be listed.

Bishop S. M. Griswold Very Ill.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Bishop Sheiden M. Grisworld of the Episcopal Church was reported today in the most serious condition since he was operated on for acute appendicitis several days ago. Physicians said the crisis would be reached late today or tomorrow. Clergy in the Chicago diocese were asked to offer prayers for his recovery tomorrow.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

G. A. H.—The Lonely Club meets at Italian Fraternal Hall, 626 N. Vandeventer avenue, on Saturday evenings.

READER OF P.-D.—Your question as to certain winners relates to an alleged lottery about which newspapers do not publish information because of postal regulations.

MISS BALTIMORE. — Grant's cabin on the Gravois road is on private property and is not open to visitors at all times. It may be seen well from the road.

E. F. AND READER.—Your question is about an alleged lottery on which newspapers do not publish information because of postal regulations.

IGNORANT.—There is no rule for the pronunciation of proper names other than to pronounce them according to the wishes of those who have the names. The name Campbell is generally pronounced as if spelled the same as camel.

MISS K.—Visit some of the buildings where the offices are occupied mostly by doctors and dentists and make inquiry in the offices for the position you want.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association)

S. H.-S. H.—No property is exempt from seizure for taxes assessed against it.

I. C. A.—If you win the house on which you speak of taking a chance you must pay Federal or city income tax on the house.

A. S.—You do not have 60 days in which to make payment, but must pay when your note is due, and if you fail you can be sued at once.

LIZZIE.—We hold legal advice for you, for which please send your address. The name does not correspond with any name on envelopes sent.

YOURS TRULY.—If the man beats his abuses you, complain to the Police Department. Tell him you will not work for wages unless you can spend the money yourself. This answer is in reply to the question which has the postscript "Please help me to solve the problem."

A. B. C.—A "tenancy by entirety" differs from a "joint tenancy" in that a tenancy by the entirety is one between husband and wife, while a joint tenancy may exist between strangers.

TROUBLED.—If you are sure that she has done nothing wrong and the woman she is infatuated with it would be better to overlook what your wife says about him for the sake of the children. If you could prove that she is in love with another man you could get a divorce on that ground and keep all of your property. A wife has no right to check on her husband's bank account without his permission as long as he supports her.

NOT GUILTY.—You could make a private communication to the Prohibition Enforcement Officer by writing him at his office, Eighth and Olive streets, or direct to the Prohibition Administrator, Title Guarantee Building, Seventh and Chestnut. The offices have telephones and are listed in telephone directory under "U. S. Government Offices."

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

H. E. W.—It is safe to assume from what you say that the menopause in your case is practically finished.

J. L. P. JR.—The substance you name is made from a patented, private formula and I do not know of what it is composed nor can we advise concerning its merits.

WM. G.—Tuberculosis is not hereditary. Children of tubercular parents are often of low vitality and resistance and hence more liable to contract the disease than others, with the added disadvantage of being intimately associated with tubercular parents.

FRANCES W.—Less mistakes should be made by the inexperienced we do not advise concerning the dyeing or bleaching of the hair, feeling that his should be done only by those trained in such work.

PLEASE.—A tonsil stone is an accumulation of earthly salts that form in the ducts and follicles of the tonsil and often operate as a foreign body, setting up local irritation. Under such circumstances they are decidedly injurious to health.

WORRIED MOTHER.—All authorities agree that the prognosis is favorable since the vast majority of cases of the condition we mention recover. We think, however, that all such cases should be under the care and treatment of a reliable physician for safety and best results.

E. R.—The treatment for burning feet which you refer to may be the following one: A hot foot bath is given night and morning to which add a tablespoonful of the following powder: Alum, one ounce; rock salt, two ounces, borax, two ounces; mix, and make a powder and use as above. After drying thoroughly dust on the powder made by mixing equal parts of chlorinate lime, prepared chalk, and powder starch.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my dear daughter Cathrin Comerford (nee Colfer) who died Sept. 19 1924: The deaths of sorrow we cannot tell so well. Sadly missed by mother and brother.

In memory of Vernon Hatton, who passed away Sept 17 1926:
His smiling ways and pleasant face are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each, and died beloved by all.
MR AND MRS. R. HATTON. (c)

In loving memory of our darling grandson and nephew, Frank Velten, who died six years ago, Sept 17, 1921, age 5 years, 10 months.
Sadly missed by his AUNT KATE and all who loved him.
Gone but not forgotten.

In memory of our dear mother, Johanna Zulauf, who departed her life one year ago, Sept. 19, 1926:
Dear mother, you are not forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more;
Still in memory you are with us,
As you always were before.
Sadly missed by her CHILDREN

More and more this day I miss you,
Friends may think the sorrow is healed
But they little know the sorrow
That within my heart concealed.
In loving memory of my beloved sister, Mary F. Schapperr (nurse), who departed this life Sept. 19 1925.
Sadly missed by her sister,
GEORGIA COWLES. (c)

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our darling boy, Lloyd R. Lickiss, who passed away at Great Lakes Training Station, Sept. 21, 1918:
The pain is gone, He sleeps today
Beneath love's feebie gift of flowers.
"He's all right now!" we strive to say.
But, oh, what loss is ours!
Sadly missed by
FATHER AND MOTHER.

In loving memory of our dear father James Moore, who passed away two years ago Sept. 17, 1925:
We are lonsome, yes for father,
In the years that passed away.
And we know he'll always guide us
Till we meet again some day.
He is handy enamled
With his pal our Mother dear
In that beautiful isle of somewhere
They await their children there.
Sadly missed by his LOVING CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of our dear son and nephew, Henry Uhlending Jr., who died Sept. 16, 1926.
Of the treasures God has given
That bring to us peace and rest,
He has called them unto heaven,
The one that our hearts loved best.
FATHER, MOTHER, AUNT. (c)

ADMIRAL HUTCHINSON DIES IN THE EAST

A Native Missourian, He Formerly Was Chief of Naval Operations.

By the Associated Press.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 17. — Rear Admiral Benjamin Franklin Hutchison, 59 years old, died today after an illness of several months. He had been living at his summer home here since June, when, at his own request, he was relieved as commandant of the navy yard at Washington. He formerly was assistant chief of naval operations.

Rear Admiral Hutchison was born at Boonville, Mo., Feb. 12, 1868. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1889. Two years later he was made an ensign, after having served as private secretary to Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans. He became a lieutenant commander in 1896, commander in 1910 and captain in 1915. Four years ago he was made Rear Admiral.

During the famous round-the-world cruise of the United States fleet in Roosevelt's second administration, he commanded the battleship Wisconsin and at the time of the Panama Exposition was in charge of the U. S. S. Birmingham, which took a special commission to South America.

Admiral Hutchison commanded the battleships Kansas and Mississippi during the World War. After the signing of the Armistice he served as administrator of floating equipment in New York harbor and later became chief of staff of the Pacific fleet.

He is survived by his widow, Helen Seymour Weaver, a native of this city.

WOMAN SUES FOR $73,800 OVER REAL ESTATE TRADE

Mrs. N. C. Hill Alleges She Lost $23,000 in Series of Transactions in 1925.

Mrs. Mary Hill, wife of N. C. Hill, 4212 West Pine boulevard, yesterday filed suit in Circuit Court for $73,800 against Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Goodman, Stanley Epstein, realty dealer at 904 Chestnut street; Jacob A. Pastel and Henry J. Gifford. Of the amount $23,000 represents what Mrs. Hill says she lost in a series of real estate transactions in 1925. The remainder is a claim for punitive damages based on alleged "willful, malicious and wrongful acts" of the defendants. The suit was filed through the law firm of Laughlin, Frumberg, Blodgett & Russell.

Mrs. Hill formerly owned a residence at 4566 Washington boulevard. Her petition relates that through the advice and representations of some of the defendants, she entered into a real for a 12-family apartment house at Page boulevard and Temple place, and later, when that venture had been unsuccessful, traded her interest to certain of the defendants for equities in a flat at 4337 Laclede avenue, and for the premises she now occupies on West Pine.

This trade also proved a disappointment to her. Pastel said he had known of no intent to defraud or mislead Mrs. Hill.

ROME, Sept. 17.—Pope Pius has granted the petition of Cardinal Billot of France to be permitted to resign his Cardinalship because of advanced age. The Cardinal said he wished to retire to private life in order that he might prepare himself for death. Louis Cardinal Billot was 81 years old last January. He is a native of Lorraine.

WOMAN INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION; HUSBAND ARRESTED

Man Working in Downtown Street Struck by Machine—Driver Held.

Mrs. Delia C. Clark, 32 years old, of 2317½ North Broadway, suffered internal injuries and fractured ribs early yesterday when an automobile driven south on Broadway by her husband, Raymond, collided with another at Olive street. The driver of the other machine, Mrs. Thomas Carten of 310 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, was uninjured. Clark was arrested.

While working in the street in front of 618 North Ninth street Friday afternoon, William Bolhen, 30 years old, of 6000 Maple avenue, was struck by an automobile driven by John I. Pickering, 67 years old, of Springfield, Ill. Bolhen was taken to city hospital suffering from concussion of the brain and internal injuries. Pickering was arrested.

Air Meeting at St. Joseph.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 17. — Porter Adams, president of the National Aeronautic Association, and his staff arrived here today from Washington for the sixth annual convention of the association which opens here Monday. Adams announced he carried a letter from President Coolidge, outlining the administration's stand on aviation, which he will read at the convention Monday. The board of governors of the organization will meet tomorrow night. The sessions will close with the election of officers Tuesday.

MAN KILLED BY FALL FROM SECOND-STORY WINDOW

Family Thinks That, Oppressed by Heat, He Raised Screen to Get Air.

Joseph H. Simon, 56 years old, a retired carpenter, was killed yesterday when he fell or jumped out of a second-floor window of his home at 4410A Louisiana avenue.

Simon got out of his bed at 5:10 a. m., walked to the window, and pulled up the screen, falling or jumping to the stone steps below. He had found difficulty in breathing because of the excessive heat, and members of his family think he put his head out of the window to get more air, and fell because the gangrene condition of his foot had weakened it so it would not support him.

U. S. AID TO 4 STATES AGAIN

Comptroller General Withdraws Order Withholding Welfare Funds.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Four States—Tennessee, North Carolina, Louisiana and Montana—from which Federal funds for maternity and child welfare work have been withheld several weeks will receive payments, as in the past, under a new decision by Comptroller General McCarl.

The ruling modifying a recent one of the Comptroller General which held that Federal aid should be withheld until the States had settled their obligations to the Federal Government, was communicated to the Labor Department. In advising the Department of his new ruling, McCarl did not give his reasons for it. Davis had urged him his old ruling.

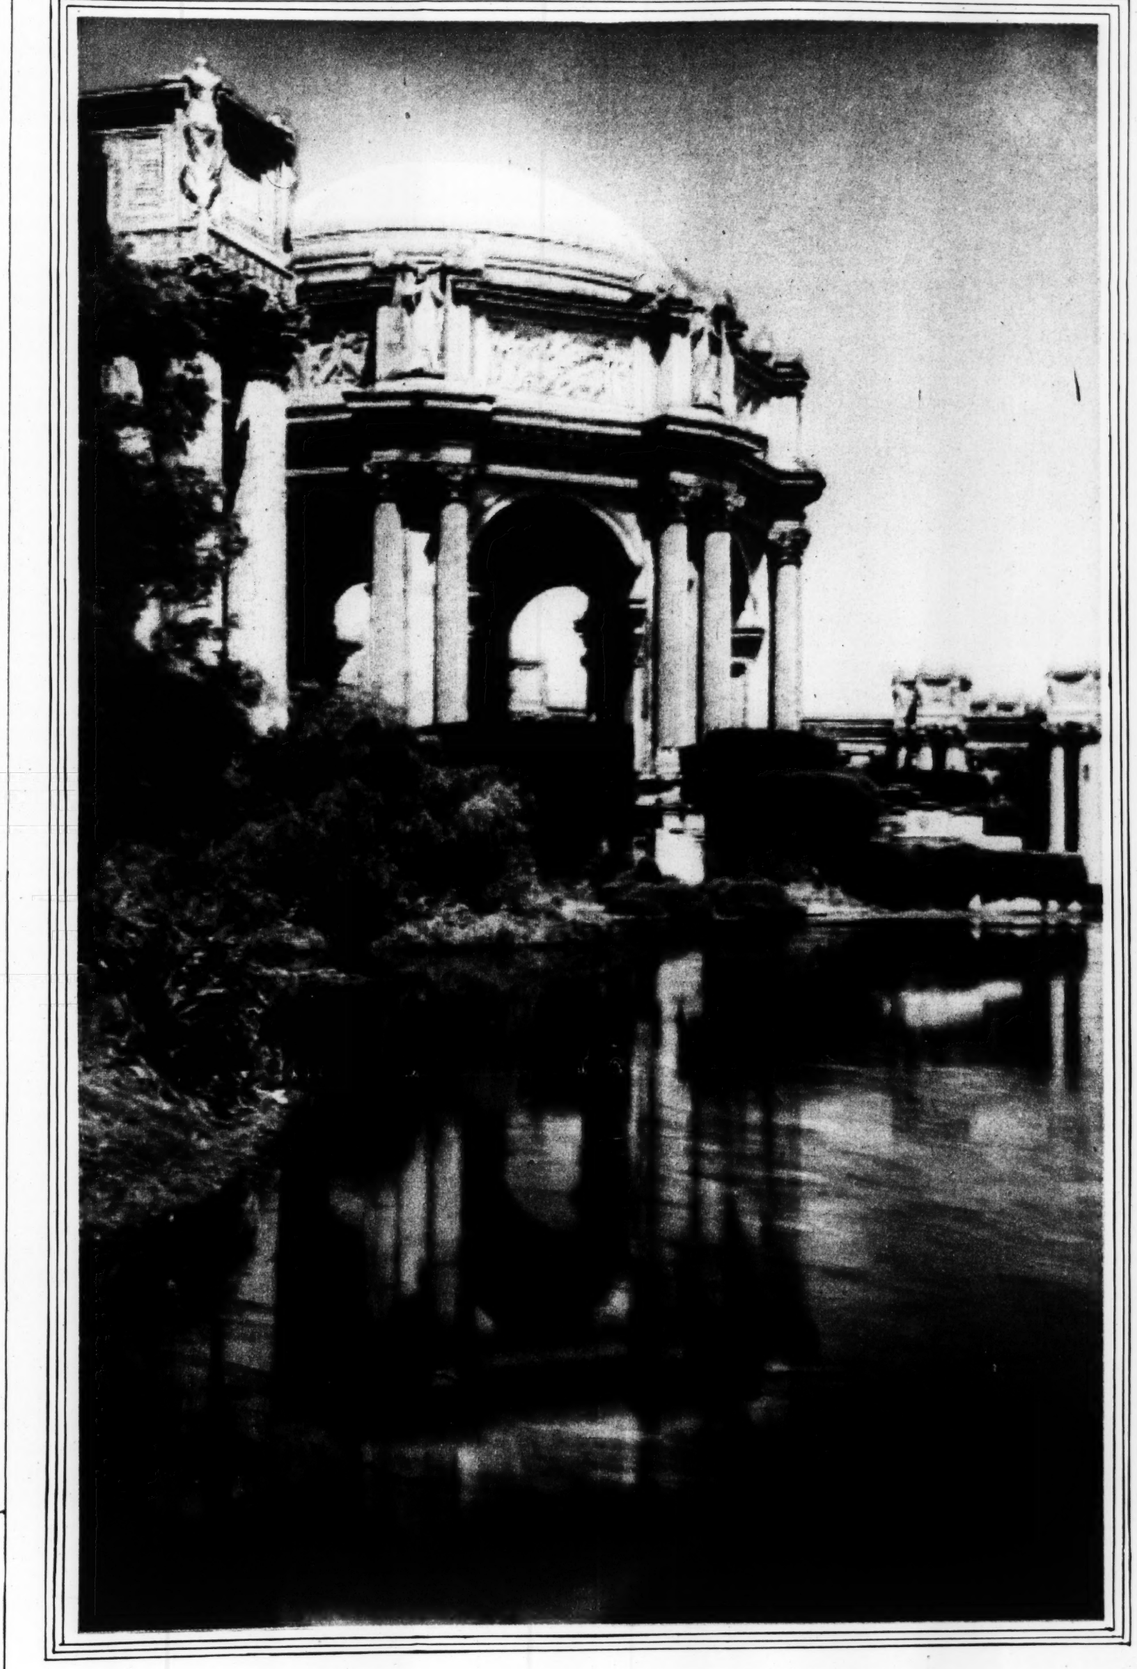
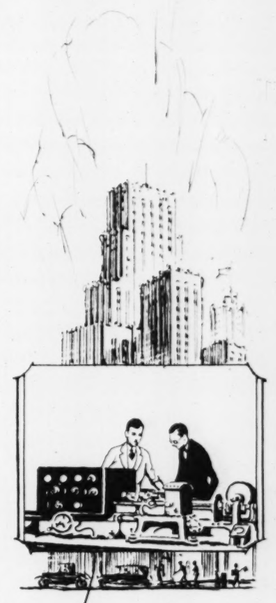
ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Magazine

The Palace of Fine Arts, San Francisco





Transmitted by telephone from San Francisco to St. Louis through the courtesy of the Direct Color Photo Co. of San Francisco. This is the first colored photograph ever received over the wire in St. Louis.

Colored Photograph Wired from San Francisco to St. Louis

BY MEANS of a process that seems almost magical until its essential simplicity is disclosed, photographs or pictures in color may now be transmitted by wire from one city to another even though they be separated by the span of a continent. Moreover, every subtlety of coloring is preserved in the process.

The electrical impulses that speed the picture on its way across desert and mountain in a time that varies for the entire transmission process from an hour to an hour and a half are as faithfully exact as the lens of a camera. There are now eight cities linked by telephoto stations of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

The color photograph shown above of the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco is the first to be transmitted to St. Louis. It is the second ever to be sent by wire. The New York World previously received a color photograph of a motion picture actress by wire from San Francisco.

The telephoto machine, to put it in its simplest terms, is a long distance telephone that transmits variations of light and shade instead of variations of tone and sound.

In the ordinary telephone there is a plate which is sensitive to sound, so sensitive that the slightest variation of sound is transmitted as an electrical impulse of corresponding strength which travels over a wire to a similar plate in the receiver of another telephone so magnetized as to give a corresponding sound vibration.

In the telephoto machine, instead of a plate which is sensitive to sound there is a cell which is sensitive to light. When different intensities of light are focused on this cell it transmits these as electrical impulses, correspondingly strong or weak, to a receiving machine where they are again translated into light and shadow and focused on an ordinary film such as is used in any camera.

The process by which color photographs are sent was a later development of that by which black and white photographs are wired from city to city. The latter process has been employed since 1924, when a photograph of the Republican National Convention at Cleveland was first sent over the wire.

In brief, this is the way in which the photograph of the Palace of Fine Arts reached the Post-Dispatch office in natural colors over the wire:

When it (the original photograph was made by the Direct Color Photo Co. of San Francisco) was brought to the telephoto station in San Francisco it was in turn photographed three times—once with a mat or filter which would obliterate everything that was not blue or a shade of blue, once for the red and once for the yellow. The three resulting negatives, which, like all ordinary negatives, showed what was white in the picture as black and vice versa, were photographed so that the order would be exactly reversed on a "positive" negative—negatives, in short, which showed what was black as black and what was white as white.

The picture in its three parts—the blue, the red and the yellow—was then ready for transmission to St. Louis. One of these negatives, that showing all objects of red and shades of red, say, was first fastened in the telephoto sending machine so that it formed a hollow cylinder. This hollow cylinder—formed by this "positive" negative—was revolved about the photo-electric cell while a beam of light was focused upon it. The beam of light is so adjusted as to be always focused on the sensitive "eye" of the photo-electric cell. In the course of its revolutions, together with a slow forward movement, the entire negative was passed beneath the beam of light and the differences of black and white were recorded by the photo-electric cell, which passed them on as electrical impulses of varying intensity.

These electrical impulses, magnified many, many times to enable them to travel 2000 miles, were received at the offices of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company in St. Louis and converted again into light. This was done by the receiving machine which is, essentially, like the ordinary camera. A ribbon made of metal corresponds to the shutter of the camera on which light is focused. This metal ribbon is so sensitized that it moved in correspondence with the electrical impulses transmitted from San Francisco, admitting light to the negative accordingly. In seven minutes' time the transmission was completed.

Similarly the negative showing the blue objects and that showing the yellow were sent to St. Louis. These three negatives were delivered to the Post-Dispatch and a print made of each one. These prints were in turn transferred by an etching process to the copper cylinders by means of which printing in color rotogravure is done.

In sending ordinary black and white photographs only one negative is made, of course. All kinds and types of black and white pictures are sent by telephoto.

The transmission of financial advertising ranks first in volume. Next comes the transmission of news photographs, and after that, probably, ordinary advertising copy.

On such occasions as the Lindbergh flight the transmission of advertising copy proved particularly practicable. Then oil and gas companies desired to have identical advertisements appear in a number of papers throughout the United States on the day after the flight. This would have been impossible without the telephoto process.

Stock certificates and bonds, fashion pictures, signatures, legal documents and letters, finger prints and other aids to criminologists, bathing beauties and movie stars, plans for buildings and accountants' balance sheets, all have been relayed over the wires successfully.

Several rooms in the Southwestern Bell Building here in St. Louis are given over to the telephoto station. There is a camera room where the negatives are rephotographed and connected with it by a "dark-room trap" is the room containing the sending and receiving apparatus. The "dark-room trap" permits passage between the two rooms without admission of any light, a necessity, since one or the other of the two must often be in darkness.

New Developments in Training the MINDS of MONKEYS

Experiments Show That Apes Have Constructive Intelligence and Scientists Hope They May Be Taught To Speak in the Manner of Men.

The chain of photographs reproduced herewith were made in the laboratory of Mrs. Ladygin-Kohts in Moscow and were taken from Dr. Robert M. Yerkes' book, "Almost Human." They show the outward evidences of an ape's emotional responses.

Reflective.

Sad.

Joyous.

Tearful.

Angry.

Excited.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

UNDISMAYED by the unflagging efforts of the late William Jennings Bryan to shake all monkeys out of his family tree, scientists in increasing numbers are turning directly to exhaustive study of living primate types to discover the exact differences and similarities between man and the anthropoid apes and to teach them, if possible, to talk much in the manner of man and act as helpers of the human race.

While there still may be a great many who doubt man's kinship with the anthropoids, more are turning to the view of the evolutionists as they observe repeatedly the human traits exhibited by chimpanzees, orang-utans and gorillas. Instances galore are cited by owners, trainers and observers which go to prove the immense resourcefulness of the apes in unusual predicaments and many of these anecdotes have lately found their way into print in scientific and semi-scientific literature.

So far, science has not been uniformly successful in teaching chimpanzees or orang-utans how to use their vocal apparatus in such a way as to shape and utter common words of human speech. But it is definitely known that apes are able to communicate with their trainers by certain characteristic sounds; that certain species of apes possess 20 or 30 emotional cries of their own, and that in rare instances trainers have been able to teach individuals the way to use such simple words as "papa" or "cup" much as a small child would use them.

ONE eminent scientist who has devoted many years to study and experimentation with the anthropoids is Professor Robert M. Yerkes, psychologist, of Yale University. Recently he has published under the title, "Almost Human," a book recording the results of his observations and the observations of Mme. Rosalie Abreu, who, for the last two decades, has kept several apes on her tropical plantation at Havana, Cuba, so that she might study more closely their habits and emotions.

Communication, explains Professor Yerkes, does not necessarily imply speech. Only when an individual utilizes his vocal apparatus in a rather complicated way to express sounds having some idea of content or significance, some feeling or emotion, or both idea and emotion, can he be said to talk. However, he may communicate in other ways. Considering the fact that chimpanzees always seem bubbling over with something to talk about, he observes, it is all the more surprising that they should have no vocal outlet for their thoughts and emotions beyond the 32 emotional cries which Mrs. William S. Learned, a co-worker, has discovered to exist among anthropoid apes. There is no obvious reason, the professor claims, why chimpanzees and other apes do not and should not talk. It is nevertheless significant, he thinks, that these 32 cries are mostly associated with the animal's desire for food and drink.

Contrary to the conclusions reached by earlier workers, Professor Yerkes does not believe that the speech of apes and man is basically the same. He admits, however, he finds increasing suggestions for experiments in the work of the older scientists. Both Professor Garner and Doctor William H. Furness, another scientist, whose work is described by Professor Yerkes, seem to have been more successful in teaching animals to speak than the Yale psychologist was. In explanation of this comparative failure, however, Yerkes admits that his method was faulty and that he lacks the patience and persistence which the other scientists brought to their task. He finds no reason to suspect, he contends, that his pet apes, Chim and Panzee, are any less intelligent or capable than Moses, employed by Garner, or the orang-utan employed by Doctor Furness.

IF THE records reporting the achievements of these two scientists are accurate, and there seems to be little question regarding this point, their achievements, Doctor Yerkes believes, are an indication that, with continued persistence and patience, apes can be taught to talk. Doctor Furness, he recalls, taught an orang-utan to say "papa" and later to say "cup." The ape appeared quite interested in acquiring this rudimentary vocabulary and several amusing incidents developed out of its accomplishment.

Because the word "papa" is made up of two syllables which are common to ape language, Doctor Furness' orang-utan, it is pointed out, was faced with an accomplishment not entirely doomed from the start. Nevertheless, it took six months and frequent bribes and rewards to teach his pet to say this word. When he taught the animal the word "cup," he attempted to associate the object in its mind with the sound of the word. After some preliminary difficulties it absorbed the significance of both words, as experience later showed.

Ioni, one of Mrs. Ladygin-Kohts' apes.

Is asked to match a color and does so.

Doctor Furness was in bathing one day with his pet, according to a published anecdote, when suddenly the ape was plunged waist deep in water. If there was cause to seek protection, here it was. Accordingly, like a child who fears cold water, the ape climbed to his master's shoulders, screaming the while, "Papa! Papa! Papa!" as loudly as it could.

This episode was followed some time later by another. Dr. Furness was sleeping as usual one night when awakened by a cry of "Cup! Cup! Cup!" Repairing to the cot where his pet lay sick, he found her in need of water. These occurrences are thought to indicate both intelligence and an ability to assimilate the ideas normally connected with the words used.

Professor Yerkes cites still other instances indicating insight, intuition or instinct on the part of the apes he has studied. Many of them were noted by him during his stay at Quinta Palatino, the estate of Mme. Abreu in Cuba. One interesting anecdote related by her was of an incident which occurred at the birth of one of her anthropoid pets called Lita. When Lita was born, Professor Yerkes relates, she showed all the characteristics of a still-born ape. No breath passed through her lips and her heart, evidently, was not beating. Realizing this condition, the mother ape immediately cut the umbilical cord of her offspring; then began to breathe through its nostrils and to work its arms up and down. All this she did without aid or assistance from outsiders. Soon Lita began to breathe and the older ape seemed satisfied. She cleaned the child and shortly afterward began to nurse it.

"Daisy the Demon," the most savage ape in the London Zoo, but who treated a rat that entered her cage with respectful and friendly curiosity. The rat escaped unhurt.

Was not this intelligence, the professor asks?

"The great apes and, indeed, also the monkeys appreciate kindness and develop varied ways of expressing themselves," Dr. Yerkes writes. "We may consider especially those of the chimpanzees. In these animals, love and sympathy, resentment, fear and delight and joy are registered by facial expression, attitude and action. The chimpanzee smiles and also laughs, thus clearly indicating even to the casual observer his satisfaction.

"EXPRESSIONS of joy are most common in play; yet the animal may smile or laugh when tickled or when offered food to which it happens to be especially partial. Any day at Quinta Palatino one might register in memory or on a photographic plate the facial and bodily expressions of several of the principal tender emotions."

The larger apes, it was also noted, express affection by embracing and caressing much as humans do. Writes Professor Yerkes:

"The courtship behavior of the great apes has been observed at Quinta Palatino, both when the animals are in adjoining cages and when they are together. The male chimpanzee is frequently seen to caress the female, and Madam Abreu has even seen a straw used by the male to stroke the female through the barrier of netting between them. Kissing among these animals is, like many other acts, almost human in its essentials."

A number of scientists whose work is described by Professor Yerkes have endeavored to test the intelligence and resourcefulness of apes in such a way as to eliminate imitativeness and methods actually taught them. Among these is Doctor Wolfgang Koehler, whose favorite device was that of hanging a bunch of bananas or other fruit from the ceiling out of reach and permitting the chimpanzee to get it only by the use of his ingenuity. Sometimes he would leave in the cage a stick, too short to reach the fruit, and place a longer stick outside the cage. He found the ape would use the short stick to drag the long stick closer and with it would knock down the fruit.

In another test he placed in the cage two short sticks which could be fitted together, fishing rod fashion. Finding the end of one stick slightly too large to fit into the joint, the animal chewed off enough to meet requirements, and then used the elongated pole to reach the prize.

GEORGE VIERHELLER, superintendent of the Forest Park Zoo, is skeptical of the ape's ability to learn to talk. In the complicated mechanism of mind and muscle necessary for producing speech, he declares, something is lacking in the anthropoid. However, he points out, the three chimpanzee performers in the zoo—Mike, Henry and Duffy—express fright, hunger, joy and anger by characteristic sounds. Startled by the sight of a horse passing the window, they will run to any familiar figure, try to clutch him through the bars and warn him of the strange visitor by chattering. Caught in mischief, they will grasp the keeper's legs and beg not to be whipped, appearing meanwhile much ashamed of their conduct.

In their exhibition cage, Mike, Henry and Duffy act much as playful boys. They scuffle and romp and play pranks on each other. Sometimes one pinches too hard or plays too roughly, and his playmate loses his temper. But he doesn't remember the grievance long. Something else diverts his attention and the quarrel is forgotten.

These three chimpanzees, more alert and intelligent than the neighboring orang-utan, as well as more expressive of emotion, are easily the most popular of all the zoo's inmates. Daily hundreds of children (and grown-ups, too) gather in the Monkey House to watch them at their antics. On Sundays they give four separate performances, attracting a total attendance of something like 5000 persons. They perform difficult feats on the trapeze, walk the tight rope, dance, ride tricycles, play basket ball, wrestle, eat at a table with knives and forks, drink out of cups and even play a toy piano.

According to Vierheller, the skeptics who visit the zoo with the idea of holding out against the theory of evolution are mostly won over by the performance of Mike, Henry and Duffy. After an hour or so before their cage the doubters are either entirely converted or at least are left "on the fence."

WILLIAMSON, West Virginia.

IT LOOKS peaceful enough, lolling there in the sunshine. So far as the stranger can determine from outward appearances, this little mining city of 10,000 enjoys a truce with the world and with itself. Quiet broods over the hovering hills in which the town is pocketed. Death Rock Mountain, blue and somnolent, stands at the outskirts like a sleepy sentinel, forgetful of the tragedies enacted in its shadow.

On the opposite side, the Tug River, which ran red with blood during the mine war of 1920, now winds along its sluggish course, black with the wash from the coal mines. No longer is heard the staccato rattle of machine guns from the Kentucky hills on the west bank. The Hatfield-McCoy feudists, too, have put away their knives and firearms. And the visitor learns with some gratification that sometimes one can stay in town a week without hearing a pistol shot or seeing a weapon drawn from the holsters which lurk under about half the coat tails of the community.

For Williamson, metropolis and county seat of "Bloody Mingo," even the appearance of peace is something. Sanguinary traditions of the place do not justify even that. But appearances, after all, are only appearances. Look beneath the unruffled surface and there is seen a cauldron of hatred, boiling and seething. Place an ear to the ground and the rumble of civil war is heard.

The civil war, long smoldering, erupted openly in a brief outburst a few weeks ago. When the smoke had cleared, two policemen lay dead in the street. And two others, members of a rival force who did the killing, were clamoring at the jail doors for protection against a gathering mob of infuriated townsmen.

In a dispute over authority to "tag" a milk truck, parked on the wrong side of the street without lights, members of the two rival forces had met and shot it out in the gray hours of the morning. It was a clash which had been brewing for weeks and which had awaited only such a flimsy excuse as that afforded by the truck.

D. WILEY DEERFIELD, father of eight children, and Harve McGuire, both veteran peace officers with excellent records, were the victims. Julius Lawson and James Kirkpatrick, patrolmen of a new and "unrecognized" force, were the slayers. Though they won the argument, they did not go entirely unscathed. When Kirkpatrick ran for the shelter of the jail he took a bullet wound along with him in the flesh of his left leg. Another Civil War in "BLOODY MINGO"

As Harve McGuire dropped to the ground, he pulled his gun and fired one shot.

WILLIAMSON, West Virginia.

IT LOOKS peaceful enough, lolling there in the sunshine. So far as the stranger can determine from outward appearances, this little mining city of 10,000 enjoys a truce with the world and with itself. Quiet broods over the hovering hills in which the town is pocketed. Death Rock Mountain, blue and somnolent, stands at the outskirts like a sleepy sentinel, forgetful of the tragedies enacted in its shadow.

On the opposite side, the Tug River, which ran red with blood during the mine war of 1920, now winds along its sluggish course, black with the wash from the coal mines. No longer is heard the staccato rattle of machine guns from the Kentucky hills on the west bank. The Hatfield-McCoy feuds, too, have put away their knives and firearms. And the visitor learns with some gratification that sometimes one can stay in town a week without hearing a pistol shot or seeing a weapon drawn from the holsters which hang under about half the coat tails in the community.

Williamson, metropolis and county seat of "Bloody Mingo," even this appearance of peace is something. Ordinary traditions of the place do not justify even that. But appearances, after all, are only appearances. For beneath the unruffled surface there is seen a cauldron of hatred, passion and seething. Place an ear to the ground and the rumble of civil war is heard.

A civil war, long smoldering, broke openly in a brief outburst two weeks ago. When the smoke cleared, two policemen lay dead in the street. And two others, officers of a rival force who did the shooting, were clamoring at the jail door for protection against a gathering mob of infuriated townsmen.

It was a dispute over authority to "tag" a truck, parked on the wrong side of the street without lights, between the two rival forces had met and fought it out in the gray hours of Saturday morning. It was a clash which had been brewing for weeks and which only awaited only such a flimsy excuse as that afforded by the truck.

WILEY DEERFIELD, father of eight children, and Harve McGuire, both veteran peace officers with excellent records, were the victims. Julius Lawson and Frank Kirkpatrick, patrolmen of a force called "unrecognized" force, were the slayers. Though they won the argument, they did not go entirely unscathed. When Kirkpatrick ran for shelter of the jail he took a bullet through and along with him in the flesh of his left leg. Deerfield had been shot through the heart and died before he could draw his weapon, but McGuire, sinking to the pavement with a dozen wounds in his abdomen, dragged his revolver from its holster and drew blood of the enemy as he fell.

D. W. Deerfield, who was killed before he could draw his gun.

Citizens ran from their beds a moment later to find him there, riddled with bullets and still clutching his weapon. They saw Kirkpatrick and Lawson running for the jail.

These two are in jail yet, and so far haven't even asked for bail. It is what they want least. Freedom on bail, in the opinion of the town's best informed citizens, would mean death within 24 hours. The prisoners are making no statement, offering no explanations. General opinion is that they have none to offer.

In shooting it out, Lawson helped to kill two inoffensive men who once had been his boon companions. Formerly he served on the regular police force.

IT WAS politics, on pretty well defined party lines, that brought about the present state of civil war in Williamson, and instead of sobering the contending factions, the recent killings have served rather as a bellows to the flame. Hatreds have grown deeper and alignments are being more openly acknowledged through defense or condemnation of the slayers. Still, except for the unusually large number of State police in town since the killing, there is little evidence of impending trouble for the outsider to observe.

Except for policemen walking their beats, most of those vitally concerned in the feud keep close to their homes at night and the streets are left to those who habitually supply Williamson's night life. These are principally the miners who wash up and dress up and come in from the surrounding settlements, and the younger men and women of the town. They walk about the streets in pairs or groups, doing not much of anything. Other residents and visitors head their cars in at the curb and from the shadowy vantage point of parked machines find amusement, or appear to do so, in watching the passersby and witnessing now and then a bit of amorous intrigue. Nobody knows who may be lurking in those darkened machines, and so the principals in the fight bow to discretion by giving them a wide berth.

AS MIGHT be expected in a first-class West Virginia feud, this one has its Hatfield. A Hatfield is leader of one faction and the central figure in the drama. It was over him and his growing popularity that the trouble started. This is Wirt Hatfield, Mayor of Williamson and grand-nephew of the famous "Devil Anse." It isn't according to tradition that any Hatfield should stand for bulldozing or be frightened by gunplay, and that is as true of Wirt as it was of his illustrious kinsman in the days when "Devil Anse" Hatfield marshaled his faction and plunged into a 50 years' war with the McCoys.

Anywhere from 50 to 100 persons lost their lives in that mountain struggle, which, starting about 1881, became the most famous in the history of this country. It is still recalled as a classic among feuds, but it is ended now. "Devil Anse," who defied McCoy marksmanship until he was past 80, is dead. The surviving feudists are scattered, but the line of "Devil Anse" was prolific and the woods are still full of Hatfields. So are the political offices of the State.

The family taste has ever run to politics. Hatfields have been Mayors, Sheriffs, Congressmen and Governors. Wirt, who is a nephew of former Governor H. D. Hatfield and a son of former Sheriff Greenway Hatfield of Mingo County, happens to be a Mayor—but it is hardly correct to say happens to be. He is serving his third consecutive term now, having been elected by an increasing majority at each election. Personally he is popular, as testified by the fact that in the last election, which, for the most part, went Democratic, he won by a majority of 707 on the Republican ticket. He was the first Republican Mayor the city ever had.

He is a quiet, courteous, soft-voiced man, who speaks with a Southerner's drawl and means every word he says. He seems still a little youthful perhaps for a Mayor's job—he is about 33—but the town's leading citizens and the two local newspapers cast aside party affiliations to declare he is the best Mayor Williamson ever had.

EVEN to his enemies he is known as strictly honest. Among the various and sundry charges they made, it is significant that the charge of grafting is not to be found. His increasing hold on Democratic votes, irking the beleaguered Democratic "courthouse ring," is said by persons familiar with local politics to have been the factor behind appointment of the new, "irregular" police force and the resultant outbreak. According to half a dozen representative citizens of the town—doctors, hotel proprietors, miners and newspaper men—here is how it happened:

Williamson, to begin with, is governed by a bi-partisan commission. Every two years, three Republicans and three Democrats are nominated at the party primaries. Nomination assures a seat on the commission, but at the general election the candidates are voted upon for the mayoralty. The one receiving the highest vote is Mayor and the candidate of the opposite party receiving the second highest vote is City Clerk.

For a long time this plan did not work successfully. Party lines were so rigidly drawn that the commission, most of the while, was in a virtual deadlock. However, when Hatfield became Mayor the second time, City Clerk Lafe Ward, a Democrat, switched over and supported the administration. This gave the Republicans four votes in the commission against two and broke the deadlock. A number of important improvement measures were put through and everybody except the courthouse ring was pleased. At the last primary the Democratic ring fought Ward for his errancy, but enough Republicans voted in the Democratic primary to give him the nomination. They did this in the belief he would continue to support Hatfield.

Immediately upon receiving the nomination, Ward launched a campaign against Hatfield for the mayoralty, and at the same time he switched his vote in the commission back to the Democratic side. Instead of a supporter he now suddenly became Hatfield's bitterest enemy, and just as suddenly the political flavor of the commission turned from Republican to Democratic. Blain Harman, a Republican piqued at his party's failure to renominate him, started voting with the Democrats, so that there were now four votes against the administration.

THE general election was held on June 2. Hatfield easily won over Ward for the mayoralty, but Ward was re-elected City Clerk. One new Democratic member had been elected to the commission and one new Mayor Wirt Hatfield, grand-nephew of "Devil Anse" Hatfield, the famous feudist.

Republican. Another deadlock was in prospect, so the old commission made one last attempt to perpetuate its will before succumbing. At the last meeting before expiration of their terms, four members voted to dismiss the old police force and Superintendent of Streets and appoint new officers in their places. This movement was led by Ward and supported by the other two Democrats and by Blain Harman, the Republican who had jumped the fence. Mayor Hatfield and one commissioner, Wynn Lilly, opposed the action, but were outvoted.

Hatfield's friends declare—and Ward's adherents do not deny it—that the ousting of the old police force was simply a maneuver to embarrass the Mayor in his forthcoming third term and to block the execution of his policies. Anyway, no charges were brought against the six police officers and the Superintendent of Streets. All were fired without a hearing.

But they refused to stay fired. City Clerk Ward refused to sign their pay checks, but they stayed on without pay. At the same time Mayor Hatfield refused to recognize the new force and instructed his men to refuse to surrender their keys. Thus, since June 30, the city has had two police forces, both serving without pay—the uniformed, or "regular," force and the new, ununiformed "irregulars." The question of their authority is now in the hands of the State Supreme Court.

The prisoners refuse to discuss the shooting beyond asserting they fired in self-defense. As to this, however, circumstances tell their own story. Patrolman Deerfield, widely known as a fearless officer who never drew a gun, was killed by a shot through the heart. His pistol, unfired, was found in its holster. A witness said he had turned to walk away when Lawson fired upon him. According to this same witness, Lawson then directed his fire upon McGuire, standing a few feet away. At the same time McGuire became a target for Kirkpatrick. Caught in this cross-fire, he had just life enough left to fire one shot.

Both bodies were taken to the Deerfield home, where a widow and eight children, the eldest 17, the youngest 2 months old, awaited their coming. McGuire also left a widow, but no children. The double funeral was the largest in Williamson's history.

LEFT with their home unpaid for and with only one child, a daughter, old enough to help support the family, Mrs. Deerfield faces a plight which has been the lot of more than one mountain woman of her community in recent years. The hills hereabouts are dotted with lonely graves which mark the mountain feudists' trail of suffering—a trail of suffering principally for their families.

Williamson itself is a city of scars. Every landmark recalls some tragedy, a tragedy of feud, of industry or personal strife. For instance, there is the dominating feature of the landscape, visible from nearly every point in the city. Half way up the mountain stands a group of shacks, a coal tipple and an expanse of blackened ground. "What is that?" inquires the visitor casually, seeking relief from the recurring note of disaster.

"Oh, that's the old Randolph mine," replies the native. "That's where Jim Childress was blown to bits when the powder house exploded. It busted every window in town."

More Trouble for the Incubator Baby

Unkind Destiny That Has Pursued Marian Bleakley Since She Burst Into the Limelight at the World's Fair in St. Louis Now Wrecks Her Married Life.

Mrs. Marian Bleakley Brown.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

TOPEKA, Kansas.

THE unkind destiny that has pursued "the incubator baby" almost from the moment of birth has again cheated her of happiness. This time it is an action for divorce to terminate a marriage of less than two years that brings the name of Mrs. Dewey Brown, who as Marian Bleakley was the center of a legal battle waged in three states, into the headlines again.

Fought over in the courts, kidnaped on several occasions, Marian Bleakley's life contained but few periods of calm and happiness. When, in 1925, she married Dewey Brown, a young clothing merchant of Holton, Kansas, all her friends were very pleased. They saw the conventional fadeout and the customary caption, "And they lived happily ever after."

But Mrs. Brown has returned from her home at Holton to live with her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Bleakley, in Topeka. She brought her six-weeks-old daughter with her. Mrs. Brown has filed suit for divorce against her young husband, alleging extreme cruelty.

MARIAN BLEAKLEY'S remarkable history had its inception when she was born in the early part of 1904 in a St. Louis hospital. Her mother and father had quarreled at their home in Lawrence, Kansas, several weeks previously, and had parted.

At the same time a baby daughter was born to Edith Stanley, a little-known actress. One of the babies died. The other was not expected to live. Mrs. Bleakley was told it was her child which was dead.

The actress-mother disappeared, and was never heard from again. The child, which was supposedly hers, had slight chance to live. An incubator concern, which wanted to advertise its products in a novel way at the World's Fair, then in progress in St. Louis, asked and obtained permission from the hospital authorities to place the baby in one of its incubators, then on exhibit at the Fair, and in this way attempt to save its life.

The baby was placed in the incubator. Curious thousands watched it in its battle to gain health. The entire nation was interested in the experiment.

After several weeks the battle was won. The child lived, through the benefit gained from its foster mother, the incubator.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Barclay of Moline, Illinois, felt sorry for the little waif, and decided to give it a home. They wished to adopt it. But the adoption laws of Missouri required that one parent, if living, must sign the adoption papers, to make them legal.

Edith Stanley, the actress-mother, was believed to be alive, but could not be located. Then a clever scheme was hit upon to get around the law. Why not pretend that it was the Bleakley baby which had lived, and have its mother sign the papers? This would satisfy the provisions of the law, and everyone would be satisfied.

So a lawyer went to Lawrence, to which Mrs. Bleakley had returned, and told her of the matter. Still grieving over the supposed death of her own little daughter, she was glad to be of assistance. She signed the necessary papers and, in doing so, signed away all rights to the child, as its mother.

The baby lived with Mr. and Mrs. Barclay happily in her new home for eight months. Then a nurse in the St. Louis hospital declared a mistake had been made. She said that it was the baby of the actress which had died. A rigid investigation was made. The hospital officials became convinced that her story was true, and Mrs. Bleakley was notified.

She at once left for Illinois to claim the child. Her demand was refused. She began suit in the Illinois courts.

Mrs. Bleakley maintained that the adoption papers she had signed had been obtained through fraud. But the other claimants argued that no fraud existed, at the time, as all parties then were acting in good faith. The Circuit Court held that the adoption was invalid, and ordered the baby turned over to Mrs. Bleakley. The order was obeyed.

THE Barclays appealed the decision of the Illinois Circuit Court to the Illinois Court of Appeals and, pending its decision, came to Kansas and started suit for the baby's possession in the Douglas County (Kansas) District Court. The adoption was declared valid by the Douglas County Court, with the ruling that the baby be returned to the Barclays. Mrs. Bleakley retained the child and appealed to the Kansas Supreme Court. But the Kansas appellate body refused to take action, on the ground that the matter already had been decided in Illinois.

That left the situation greatly confused. The Illinois court had declared the adoption invalid and given possession to Mrs. Bleakley, while the Kansas District Court held the adoption was valid and ordered the baby turned over to the Barclays. Then the Illinois Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the Circuit Court and also ruled the adoption valid. The courts of both states were in accord. Mrs. Bleakley had to give up possession of the disputed child.

The Douglas County Court now ordered her to give the baby to the Barclays at once. She asked the court for permission to take the little girl home and dress her so she would be ready for the trip to Illinois. This permission was granted. Mr. and Mrs. Barclay expectantly awaited the return of the infant. The whole court waited. An hour passed. Two hours. Three. But Mrs. Bleakley never came back. Later it was learned that with the aid of students in a fraternity house at the University of Kansas, in Lawrence, she had made her escape with the child.

Search was started. But neither mother nor baby could be located. The Barclays employed private detectives. After a search of several months, Mrs. Bleakley and Marian were discovered in hiding at Elgin, Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Barclay displayed their papers, claimed legal custody of the child and took it from Mrs. Bleakley. Citizens of the town gathered in the latter's defense. They halted the Barclays and refused to let them leave with the child.

A COMPROMISE was reached. The foster parents agreed to turn the child over to four men, to be held by them until the next day, until a Judge could legally give possession to the Illinois claimants.

But the next day the baby could not be located. Mrs. Bleakley was gone, too. Neither of the four men could shed any light on the situation. They did not know what had become of the child, and disclaimed any knowledge of its disappearance. Private detectives again were put on the trail. The Barclays again brought suit for its possession, this time in the United States District Court. But Federal Judge John C. Pollock ruled that the Government had no jurisdiction, and, anyway, nobody knew where little Marian was.

The Barclays, balked at every turn, now ceased for a time their efforts. Lulled into a false sense of security, Mrs. Bleakley moved to Topeka and lived openly with the child. Then a long series of attempted kidnapings began. Strangers would appear in the neighborhood of her home and try to lure the baby away.

On one occasion a man came to the house when Mrs. Bleakley was gone, stated he was the baby's father and attempted to take it. On another occasion a man claiming to be a detective came after it, but did not obtain it. These attempts became so numerous that every evening Mrs. Bleakley rocked little Marian to sleep with a gun in one hand. A special steel cage was made, and each night the child was locked in this, to prevent her being kidnaped.

But in 1909, when Marian was 5 years old, came an attempt which could not be balked. One morning, when Mrs. Bleakley was away and had left the child at home in the care of her mother and of Clarence Belknap, a relative, two men entered the Bleakley home. They slugged Belknap, overpowered Mrs. Bleakley's mother and escaped with the child.

They ran down an alley to a waiting carriage, which was driven frantically to a point two miles west of Topeka. Here a change was made to another buggy, and the party rode rapidly back into another section of the city. A car, occupied by Mrs. Barclay and a chauffeur, had been waiting several hours on a side street. The kidnapers changed into this, and began a rapid drive.

They slugged Belknap, overpowered Mrs. Bleakley's mother and escaped with the child.

THEY sped away toward Atchison, 50 miles to the northeast. Pursuit was rapid. At Atchison guards were stationed at the Missouri River bridge to halt them. It was believed that the kidnapers intended to enter Missouri, where they would be safe from Kansas officers.

The guards made no effort to stop the kidnapers' car, as they had been told to watch for one of another make, and in the meantime the escaping party had changed to another machine.

At St. Joseph the car was abandoned and a train was taken for Kansas City. Police learned they were on the train and, as the party stepped off at Kansas City, officers arrested them. Mrs. Barclay and the baby were taken to the police station, along with the men.

Then another suit for the baby's possession was begun in the Jackson County (Missouri) courts. Judge E. E. Porterfield ruled against Mrs. Barclay and gave the child to its mother. During the trial the girl was kept at the home of C. J. Trigg, Clerk of the Court.

Although only two men had taken part in the actual kidnaping, a third man was implicated. They were brought back to Kansas and criminal charges were lodged against them. The three were convicted of kidnaping, and were sentenced to the Kansas State Penitentiary at Lansing.

Mrs. Barclay was brought to Topeka for trial on the kidnaping charge. She and Mrs. Bleakley met. They became reconciled. Mrs. Barclay surrendered the deed of adoption. Action against her was dropped. Since then they have been friends. The Barclays now live in Buffalo, New York.

Mrs. Bleakley was a school teacher. She sent Marian to the public schools. She went through grade school with high marks. She developed into an attractive young girl. She continued her schooling, was graduated from high school and attended college for two years.

Her mother worked hard for the girl. Nothing was too good for little Marian, who had gone through so much. But a school teacher's pay was not large, and Mrs. Bleakley had a difficult time.

AT THE end of Marian's second year of college she dropped out for a year in order to earn some money and help her mother. She took a position as teacher in a school at Holton, where she met Dewey Brown, a young man in the clothing business. The two began to "date" together regularly.

A warm friendship developed. Before the year was up they had come to an understanding that they were to be married. But Marian was to finish her college course first.

She came back to Topeka in the fall and started her third year in Washburn College. But school was irksome. Young love would not be denied. The couple came to the conclusion that two years longer was too long to wait. In November, 1925, Marian dropped all her school work and went to St. Joseph, where, in the presence of both families, the two were married.

She was happily married at last, everyone said. All that remained would be a placid life with her husband.

Six weeks ago a little daughter was born to Marian. Shortly afterward vague hints of trouble began to come from the Brown household. Then Marian left Holton, came to Topeka and began living with her mother.

On August 3 she filed a petition for divorce, alleging extreme cruelty. The dream was shattered. Brown, however, is not believed to have been cruel to his wife. That allegation was made merely because it is the statutory ground for divorce in Kansas. Rather the case seems to be one of incompatibility, of dispositions that do not match.

The divorce probably will be granted. A few days ago Brown came to Topeka to see his wife and try to patch up the differences. But she would see him only in the presence of a lawyer and witnesses.

Whether or not the disturbing adventures of Marian's childhood have anything to do with her present unhappiness is an interesting question. Her mother is inclined to scoff at the theory advanced by psychiatrists that such experiences as "the incubator baby" underwent at a most impressionable age would tend to make an emotional nature deviate from the normal. They point to the importance of a quiet and secure environment for the child if it is to have a stable emotional nature. And certainly Marian's early environment was anything but quiet and secure.

It is probable that she will go back to teaching, as did her mother, or she may finish her university course. She has given no indication of her future plans.

IN A blue Rolls-Royce limousine Hor rode away from Maidstone Prison Rode away, after five years of pen his great estate in Sussex.

His homecoming was like that hero, not a convict. It was a sur had gotten a parole for the last tw seven-year term.

The shiny big car glided up to doors, the solitary passenger dre lounge suit and a soft gray hat. He sprang out and towards the entrance, pausing to greet an old e grounds. Then the door was swung open and Mrs. Cohn, his daughter, flung her arms around her father's neck. Just behind was Mrs. Bottomley, tears streaming down her cheeks.

The old employe rushed into the village—the village that is really Bottomley's village for it is attached to his estate—shouting, "The Guv'nor's come home." A sheep dog from one of his tenants' farms, a favorite of Bottomley's, recognized him and with a joyful bark bounded up.

Over the portico of the great house there soon floated the Union Jack, and in little cottage gardens down a leafy lane nearby were flags and bunting. Children from the village paraded up and down the roadway in front of the house, waving flags. At the farm opposite were displayed Bottomley's racing colors.

"He looks at least ten years younger," the villagers said jubilantly. They planned a torch-light procession for the evening. Bottomley had come home.

Hero, scoundrel, rogue, the arch-crook of the last 50 years, friend of the people, savior of the nation, robber of widows and orphans! They have called Bottomley all these things and more.

To the masses in England Bottomley is "John Bull." He was the editor of a weekly periodical of that name and he looks strikingly like the cartoons of "John Bull" that appear in American newspapers. Massive, solid, short, slightly bandy-legged, whenever he is photographed he gives the appearance of being firmly planted on the little island that succeeded in spreading its rule over an empire.

There is something immensely shrewd about the look of his face, about the quizzical expression of his eyes. He gives the impression of knowing just what he is about.

HE CERTAINLY knew what he was about when he edited "John Bull." His were the methods of popular journalism, magnified several hundred times. He outdid Lord Northcliffe and the circulation of "John Bull" and of his illustrated Sunday paper mounted accordingly.

In "John Bull," Bottomley, as "defender of the people," attacked nearly everybody and everything. He was the thorn in the side of the church, the Government, the nobility—in short of almost everyone who was at all sensitive to thorns.

Libel and slander suits worried him not in the least. Being a skilful lawyer, he was his own defender. These suits were wonderful circulation builders for "John Bull."

"Criticism Without Rant or Cant, Fear or Favor," ran the caption on the front page, coupled with a verse in the right hand corner:

"The world is a bundle of hay,
Mankind are the asses that pull.
Each pulls in a different way.
The greatest of all is John Bull."

One occasion that brought Bottomley into court was at a time when the church was making a nation-wide temperance campaign. Many prominent divines had been loud in decrying the liquor traffic. Bottomley got busy.

He obtained lists from a government department of the names of the stockholders of numerous breweries, distilleries and saloons. He culled from these lists the names of the clergymen who had been loudest in their demand to abolish the liquor traffic. Bottomley then devoted the columns of "John Bull" to long lists in heavy type of the names of these clergymen, followed by the names of the breweries, distilleries and saloons in which they held stock.

The Ministerial Alliance sued him for subjecting its members to public ridicule. When the case came to trial, Bottomley, in his own defense, asked the court as to whether it was a question of "apparent intent." The court ruled that it was. He then confined himself to the unique defense, "If your honor please, it was not my intent to speak in derogation of the cloth, but merely to show how respectable the brewing, distilling and saloon business really is." Bottomley won out.

Bottomley at Large Again

Irrepressible Horatio Steps Out of Prison Looking "Ten Years Younger" — and Now More Storm and Strife Is Reported Impending.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

IN A blue Rolls-Royce limousine Horatio Bottomley rode away from Maidstone Prison the other day. Rode away, after five years of penal servitude, to his great estate in Sussex.

His homecoming was like that of a conquering hero, not a convict. It was a surprise, too. He had gotten a parole for the last two years of his seven-year term.

The shiny big car glided up to the heavy oak doors, the solitary passenger dressed in a gray lounge suit and a soft gray hat. He sprang out and walked swiftly towards the entrance, pausing to greet an old employe in the grounds. Then the door was swung open and Mrs. Cohn, his daughter, flung her arms around her father's neck. Just behind was Mrs. Bottomley, tears streaming down her cheeks.

The old employe rushed into the village—the village that is really Bottomley's village for it is attached to his estate—shouting, "The Guv'nor's come home." A sheep dog from one of his tenants' farms, a favorite of Bottomley's, recognized him and with a joyful bark bounded up.

Over the portico of the great house there soon floated the Union Jack, and in little cottage gardens down a leafy lane nearby were flags and bunting. Children from the village paraded up and down the roadway in front of the house, waving flags. At the farm opposite were displayed Bottomley's racing colors.

"He looks at least ten years younger," the villagers said jubilantly. They planned a torch-light procession for the evening. Bottomley had come home.

Hero, scoundrel, rogue, the arch-crook of the last 50 years, friend of the people, savior of the nation, robber of widows and orphans! They have called Bottomley all these things and more.

To the masses in England Bottomley is "John Bull." He was the editor of a weekly periodical of that name and he looks strikingly like the cartoons of "John Bull" that appear in American newspapers. Massive, solid, short, slightly bandy-legged, whenever he is photographed he gives the appearance of being firmly planted on the little island that succeeded in spreading its rule over an empire.

There is something immeasely shrewd about the look of his face, about the quizzical expression of his eyes. He gives the impression of knowing just what he is about.

Horatio Bottomley, at left, photographed as he was leaving Maidstone Prison.

HE CERTAINLY knew what he was about when he edited "John Bull." His were the methods of popular journalism, magnified several hundred times. He outdid Lord Northcliffe and the circulation of "John Bull" and of his illustrated Sunday paper mounted accordingly.

In "John Bull," Bottomley, as "defender of the people," attacked nearly everybody and everything. He was the thorn in the side of the church, the Government, the nobility—in short of almost everyone who was at all sensitive to thorns.

Libel and slander suits worried him not in the least. Being a skillful lawyer, he was his own defender. These suits were wonderful circulation builders for "John Bull."

"Criticism Without Rant or Cant, Fear or Favor," ran the caption on the front page, coupled with a verse in the right hand corner:

"The world is a bundle of hay,
Mankind are the asses that pull.
Each pulls in a different way.
The greatest of all is John Bull."

One occasion that brought Bottomley into court was at a time when the church was making a nation-wide temperance campaign. Many prominent divines had been loud in decrying the liquor traffic. Bottomley got busy.

He obtained lists from a government department of the names of the stockholders of numerous breweries, distilleries and saloons. He culled from these lists the names of the clergymen who had been loudest in their demand to abolish the liquor traffic. Bottomley then devoted the columns of "John Bull" to long lists in heavy type of the names of these clergymen, followed by the names of the breweries, distilleries and saloons in which they held stock.

The Ministerial Alliance sued him for subjecting its members to public ridicule. When the case came to trial, Bottomley, in his own defense, asked the court as to whether it was a question of "apparent intent." The court ruled that it was. He then confined himself to the unique defense, "If your honor please, it was not my intent to speak in derogation of the cloth, but merely to show how respectable the brewing, distilling and saloon business really is." Bottomley won out.

He enjoyed nothing more than taking the ecclesiastic prelates to task in "John Bull." In one week's issue the Bishop of Southwark, a London diocese, and the Bishop of St. Asaph's, a Welsh diocese, were called to account.

The Bishop of Southwark had been given a costly automobile by the people of his diocese, which includes portions of the poorer section of London, such as Whitechapel and Soho. The Rt. Rev. Bishop had also decried the practice of the slum people in putting flowers in pickle jars and corn beef cans and placing them on the graves of dead relatives and friends in the churchyards. Bottomley averred that the Bishop had declared this to be a desecration of holy ground.

"There must be reasons for such a costly gift by such poor people," Bottomley wrote. "I can divine only two reasons—either the Bishop is not doing his work sufficiently well, or the people want to see less of him." Commenting on the Bishop's attitude toward decoration of graves, Bottomley shot a double barb. Chastising the prelate with one of his anti-American jibes, he said, "Evidently the Bishop does not look at these receptacles as being only as the body is to the soul; at the spirit that prompted these poor people to place these simple, but sacred, tokens to the memory of their dear departed. I hear," said Bottomley, continuing his jibe, "that my Lord Bishop is a collector of antiques. Why, even the Egyptians of old buried with their dead some relics of the days in which they lived. Then why deny these poor people that privilege even if such is only a reminder of the Chicago canned meat horrors?"

THE Bishop of St. Asaph's was quoted by Bottomley as having visited a certain Welsh parish for the purpose of dedicating a new schoolhouse. When the Bishop arrived at the place, according to Bottomley's account, he learned that in the company assembled was a woman, a school-teacher, an earnest parochial worker, beloved by all for her work, but who had a "past." It was said that this woman had had a love affair with a married man, a friend of her girlhood, but realizing the error of her ways she sought to redeem herself." Bottomley asserted that the Bishop, on hearing of her presence in the assembly, said if the woman did not leave he would. The editor of "John Bull" wound up his tirade with a recital of Christ and the woman taken in adultery at the Feast of the Tabernacle. Slyly Bottomley hinted that possibly the Bishop had not read this part of the Scripture.

This sort of thing won him a great popular following. He succeeded in getting himself elected to Parliament. But the war was Bottomley's big opportunity.

He was the loudest patriot in England. He enunciated the "pull together, boys" policy and he gave frenzied patriotic addresses—at so much per. The war accentuated, too, his anti-American view. He had always held a fundamental belief that Yankees were the real dollar chasers.

America's neutrality, according to Bottomley, was a calculated policy to "scoop the pool" while old England and the rest of Europe weltered in blood. Uncle Sam, in the eyes of the editor of "John Bull," was, if anything, pro-German. He viciously lampooned President Wilson.

AND above all he championed the Tommies in the trenches. He came to have an enormous influence with the men at the front. He was for hanging the Kaiser early in the war and he favored collection of a $10,000,000,000 indemnity when peace was made at Berlin. So strong did his influence with the soldiers become that the government was at last forced to send him to the front and later to Scapa Flow, the naval base, to preach "sticking it" until the Germans had been conquered and peace made in Berlin.

Meanwhile, toward the close of the war, Bottomley began the promotion, through his newspapers, of Victory Bond Thrift Clubs, urging the poor to put their pittances into war bonds, purchased through his clubs. The response was immediate. Hundreds of thousands of dollars began to flow through Bottomley's hands. To give the investment an added attraction, lotteries were also run in connection with the clubs.

Horatio Bottomley as he appeared on the day of his conviction five years ago.

With the close of the war Bottomley began to display an unprecedented prosperity. He bought two newspapers; he acquired country estates and a racing stable. People began to wonder.

Even then all might have gone smoothly for a much longer time if it had not been for Bottomley's nemesis, a racetrack figure, Reuben Bigland, known as "Telephone Jack." Bigland had been his friend and confidante until some quarrel, the origin of which is not known, caused a definite break between the two. In a little paper of his own, the weekly "Truth," Bigland urged an investigation of the war bond lotteries and clubs.

Going further, Bigland sponsored the circulation of a pamphlet entitled, "A Record of Horatio Bottomley's good deeds and achievements on behalf of ex-service men, wounded soldiers, sailors, cripples, widows and orphans since his election as a member of Parliament." It contained a few blank pages only. Again hawkers appeared on the Strand freely selling a pamphlet, "Downfall of Horatio Bottomley," issued by Bigland. "Downfall of Horatio Bottomley, Bottomley the Crook!" the hawkers called.

Shortly afterward Bottomley brought suit for libel against his former associate. The case was farcical. At the crucial point, on a technical plea for a delay, Bottomley's attorney argued that his evidence was not yet ready. The suit was thrown out of court.

FOUR days later the Public Prosecutor issued a summons, charging Bottomley with converting to his own use $25,000, part of the property of one Victory Bond Club. At the trial that followed, the elaborate structure that he had erected came toppling down. It was charged that he had dictated who was to win the lottery prizes. Several hundred thousand dollars of the money that had gone into the bond clubs could not be accounted for. And Bottomley was given a seven-year sentence, persisting in his plea of innocence, claiming that he was a martyr at the hands of his persecutors.

"I have been made the victim of an appalling error of justice," Bottomley said in a letter which was read before Parliament. But despite his protestations his fellow members voted to oust him.

A remarkable scene occurred outside the court after sentence had been pronounced. A crowd surrounded the Old Bailey, and surged after the van which was conveying Bottomley to prison. They were all curiously silent, many held their hats in their hands. Strong police measures were required to quell the demonstration.

Now he is back. And apparently his popularity has not waned greatly. In the days immediately following his return numerous motor cars passed slowly by the gates of his estate, hoping to catch a glimpse of him, and crowds loitered at the entrance hoping to see him come or go.

He is a little sad and pensive, his friends say. Otherwise prison seems generally to have benefited him. It is reported that he is financially defunct but there are no evidences of this.

It is reported, too, that he has acquired a new paper and will again open fire on his old enemies. The church and the government stir uneasily at this prospect. Bottomley himself has said nothing about his plans for the future. But there is not the least indication that the short squat little man is any less belligerent, any less shrewd and ambitious than on the day on which he entered Maidstone Prison.

Neither is there any indication that he has changed a single one of his views, even though these views, as many of his enemies claim, were advanced merely as circulation builders for "John Bull."

There is just one humiliation in his parole. The people's hero must report to the constable in the village nearest his Sussex estate, Upper Dicker, once a month until the period of his sentence has expired. There is a certain irony in this, for Bottomley owns almost the whole of Upper Dicker. He is called, in fact, the "father" of the village. But this will not long concern the irrepressible Bottomley. With freedom, anything is possible for him.

Legend of Mysterious and Uncharted Wind Currents Revived When Hawaiian Flyers Are Added to the Long List of the Great Ocean's Victims.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE legend of mysterious and uncharted wind currents in the Pacific, that reach out to pull ships down to impenetrable oblivion, has been revived again. With the disappearance of six aviators and one woman in the Dole airplane race and its aftermath, ancient superstitions of the evil forces that have blotted out many a craft are again on the lips of seamen and navigators. Some scoff. Others believe, but they are reticent about their beliefs. They hint at winds almost supernatural in the swiftness and mysteriousness of their destruction. And they cite case after case of ships that went down to the sea and never were heard of again.

Navigation experts go only so far as to say that the trade winds of the Pacific are much less regular in their limits than those of the Atlantic, and this irregularity extends over a much wider area in the case of the southeast trade wind than in the case of the northeast. The greater number of islands which, especially in the hot season, disturb the uniformity of atmospheric pressure by local condensations is given as the reason.

From earliest times there have been superstitions about the Pacific. It seemed to the first explorers and navigators that in that vast expanse of water almost anything was possible. And it is a fact that almost everything is possible, from sudden typhoons to seemingly interminable calms. "Monsters dwell in the Pacific Ocean," Vizcaino wrote 335 years ago.

TO the long, long list of ships "reported missing"—the most tragic entry in Lloyd's Register—must be added two of the airplanes that participated in the Dole flight and the one rescue plane, Dallas Spirit. And to the human toll must be added the names of the six young aviators—Gordon Scott, Jack Frost, J. A. ("Augie") Pedlar, Lieutenant V. R. Knope, Captain William Erwin and Alvin H. Eichwaldt—and the one woman, Miss Mildred Doran.

Two victors over the inscrutable Pacific, Ernie Smith and Martin Jensen, participants in the Dole flight, recently gave encouragement to those who have always had faith in the ancient legends.

"Somewhere out there are malevolent wind currents that twist a speeding plane," the two flyers said the other day.

They were discussing the fate of Captain ("Lone Star Bill") Erwin and Alvin Eichwaldt, flying in the monoplane, Dallas Spirit, to the rescue of the planes Miss Doran and Golden Eagle. Erwin and Eichwaldt fell while radio men on land heard the final sputter of their chopped-off S O S.

Tale upon tale the seamen are recounting of tragedies that have no explanation. The official records carry simply the word, "missing."

There was the Rio de Janeiro. She was swallowed up inside the Golden Gate, sucking 131 souls down in her maelstrom and not a splinter of her has been found since.

Art Goebel and Lieutenant Davis, winners of the Dole race.

During the war the naval tug Bahada sailed out from San Francisco Bay. The story was smothered by censorship at the time, but the Bahada and her crew are still missing.

Since the close of the World War, 25 ships have sunk on the Pacific coast of North America, with a loss of 479 lives.

Every device then known to navigation was in use to safeguard the Rio de Janeiro. She was no Spanish galleon to be lashed to bits by a mythical monster. She was a big steamship.

No one can tell what happened to that ill-fated ship. These, the bare facts, are all that ever came to light. They were told by the few survivors, members of the deck watch:

On the morning of February 21, 1901, the Rio de Janeiro, with the P. M. S. S. Company's house flag fluttering from her masthead, was anchored off the entrance to San Francisco Bay. Shortly after 4 a. m. she got under way to enter the harbor.

She was expected at quarantine and at her slip. But when she steamed toward the harbor entrance, a midwinter murk cast a heavy screen over what was soon to be the theater of an appalling disaster.

THE ship jogged along at a nine-knot gait on a northeast course. From where she had cast anchor it was only three and a half miles inside the heads.

Then, as now, a system of lights, horns and bells made the Golden Gate safe, as seagoing safety is reckoned, even in thickest weather.

Yet that ship, the Rio de Janeiro, was never seen again. Her disappearance was complete. During the intervening 26 years not so much as a splinter of her wreckage has been recovered. And this despite the fact that at no spot on that brief cruise was the water deeper than 23 fathoms. The area where the three airplanes are believed to have fallen is from 300 to 500 fathoms deep.

"A rock gashed the hull from stem to stern. She sank."

That was all the survivors knew. It is believed by some that the Rio de Janeiro hit a jutting headland at Fort Point, but there is no evidence for this belief.

Only three theories have been summoned to explain the loss. They are:

1. Errant currents.
2. Compass deviations.
3. Unknown peril.

As for currents, San Francisco Bay currents are well known at all tides and all seasons and are so charted. Compass deviation was not a matter of concern if a ship was traveling by land points and soundings. Thus speculation all narrows down to something approximating what landsmen scoffingly term "superstition." That is, "unknown peril."

J. A. Pedlar, Mildred Doran and Lieut. V. R. Knope.

The disappearance of the big Helen of Troy is one of the most baffling of unsolved mysteries. Two separate crews were swallowed up by that monster, "unknown peril," on the Great Circle course, in the identical area where the three planes flew into an oblivion that seems destined never to be penetrated.

SEAMEN, speculating on the unknown perils of the Pacific, are asking whether or not Alvin Eichwaldt, navigator of the rescue plane, sensed some dread terror in that moment when his radio sputtered its final S O S, hovering as he was over that lonely waste of water that had swallowed up the crews of the Helen of Troy.

The brig sailed from San Francisco at almost the same time of year that the Dole air race began—August 1, 1871. She was bound for New Bedford but, after the custom of sailing ships of that period, scooted westward on the Great Circle course until she hit the region of the southeast trades.

Captain Amos Miller commanded the Helen of Troy. He was accompanied by his wife. The brig Thorobred followed her out of the Golden Gate a few days later, under command of Captain James Harding.

In the usual order of events the two vessels would not have sighted each other until a little short of the Horn, where vessels often beat back and forth for days, awaiting favorable winds to carry them through the narrow straits.

Alvin H. Eichwaldt and Captain William Erwin.

But to Harding's astonishment, he came upon the other brig a few days later off the California coast. The Captain was puzzled.

YET there the Helen of Troy rode, under a full spread of canvas, yards backed and stays strumming in the wind. But she acted queerly. Signals went unanswered. So Captain Harding lowered a boat and boarded the other vessel.

The boarding crew, fearful at the silence of the deserted decks, were reluctant to investigate. They wanted to return to their own ship. But the mate thrust them down a companionway. The sight that met their eyes below was more confounding than that above the decks.

A fire burned merrily in the galley. The table was set and food still steamed in the dishes. But not a soul sat at that bewitched table.

Terror stricken, the men fled to the decks. Driven by the mate, they explored every inch of the ship. They found all the ship's boats in place. There was no sign of a struggle of any kind. But from stem to stern and keel to topgallants not a living thing was aboard. Even the galley cat was missing.

There was a napkin found in a companionway, where a diner might have dropped it in going on deck. That was all.

So Captain Harding put a watch in charge of the Helen of Troy and convoyed her back to San Francisco. There, after much effort, a "Barbary Coast" crew were cajoled aboard the jinx ship. Had they known what was in store, no power could have compelled them to set foot on those doomed planks. Because the sequence to the disappearance of the first crew was more baffling still.

After much delay, 16 men sailed out of the Golden Gate on the next and last voyage of the Helen of Troy. From the time she slipped over the horizon rim, she was never seen again. Her fate is as great a mystery today as it was 56 years ago.

Many and fantastic are the theories advanced about the vanished ships. Some are more picturesque, more highly colored even than those that were current at the time that Columbus sailed, when the majority of mariners believed that if a ship sailed too far into the west she would drop off into a pit of boiling water, where devils were ready to destroy her crew.

One of the most persistent theories to explain the many disappearances is piracy—a particular master pirate who has never been apprehended. There are those who argue that a new style Captain Kidd operates with swift modern vessels on the vast expanse of the Pacific.

These theorists attach some importance to recent reports of a derelict submarine about 1500 miles from Honolulu. However, not even Jules Verne had so much as thought of submarines when the Helen of Troy was swallowed up in abysmal midocean wastes in 1871.

Admiral C. S. Williams, commander in chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, radioed the official navy report on the mysterious undersea craft as follows:

"ABANDONED submarine sighted on the afternoon of August 6, 1927, 1592 miles west by north from Honolulu, in latitude 27.15 north 173.55 east longitude. The submarine was marked on both sides of the hull under the conning tower in white paint on green with the insignia 'O-2.'

"Length, estimated, 200 feet. Condition excellent. Interior heavily shored. Hatches battened down. Towing light in the rigging. Obviously prepared for a long voyage under tow. Either being constructed or dismantled. All conning tower plates removed. Machinery apparently removed. Torpedo tubes fore and aft not of American type. No name or marks on plate visible. Boarding party opened hatch endeavoring to obtain information. Chief engineer partly asphyxiated. Darkness intervened and halted investigation.

"Left hatch open so the first storm will sink it. Exceedingly dangerous to navigation. No sign of passengers or crew."

Those who hint of grisly terrors in the Pacific say that the submarine's crew must be added to the long list of missing men, victims of "unknown peril." The list that contains the names of an untold number of seamen and to which must be added, it now seems inevitable, the six young aviators and pretty Mildred Doran.

There is just one fact which remains a fact despite conjecture and speculation: The Pacific Ocean is a very big ocean—a fact which many tend to lose sight of in an age of airplanes and transoceanic flights.

IT IS always embarrassing to dine publicly with one of those stormy petrels who inevitably scrap with the waiter. I am one of those devotees of Emily Post who believes in not being elemental in restaurants.

One of the most persistent theories to explain the many disappearances is piracy—a particular master pirate who has never been apprehended. There are those who argue that a new style Captain Kidd operates with swift modern vessels on the vast expanse of the Pacific.

These theorists attach some importance to recent reports of a derelict submarine about 1500 miles from Hopolulu. However, not even Jules Verne had so much as thought of submarines when the Helen of Troy was swallowed up in abysmal midocean wastes in 1871.

Admiral C. S. Williams, commander-in chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, radioed the official navy report on the mysterious undersea craft as follows:

"ABANDONED submarine sighted on the afternoon of August 6, 1927, 1592 miles west by north from Honolulu, in latitude 27.22 north 173.55 east longitude. The submarine was marked on both sides of the hull under the conning tower in white paint on green with the insignia, 'O-2.'

"Length, estimated, 200 feet. Condition excellent. Interior heavily shored. Hatches battened down. Towing light in the rigging. Obviously prepared for a long voyage under tow. Either being constructed or dismantled. All conning tower plates removed. Machinery apparently removed. Torpedo tubes fore and aft not of American type. No name or marks on plate visible. Boarding party opened hatch endeavoring to obtain information. Chief engineer partly asphyxiated. Darkness intervened and halted investigation.

"Left hatch open so the first storm will sink it. Exceedingly dangerous to navigation. No sign of passengers or crew."

Those who hint of grisly terrors in the Pacific say that the submarine's crew must be added to the long list of missing men, victims of "unknown peril." The list that contains the names of an untold number of seamen and to which must be added, it now seems inevitable, the six young aviators and pretty Mildred Doran.

There is just one fact which remains a fact despite conjecture and speculation: The Pacific Ocean is a very big ocean—a fact which many tend to lose sight of in an age of airplanes and transoceanic flights.

FIGHT ETIQUETTE

What Sullivan and Four Others Did to a Waiter

IT IS always embarrassing to dine publicly with one of those stormy petrels who inevitably scrap with the waiter. I am one of those devotees of Emily Post who believes in not being elemental in restaurants.

It is a different question at home, of course, and when the eggs have been boiled a half-minute too long no one will more quickly seize a skillet and beat the cook. I use a rubber skillet. A person beaten with a rubber skillet does not show the marks of the assault. Detectives beat prisoners with rubber pipes for the same reason. Suppose I am taking my cook to the opera tonight, but at dinner she serves mashed potatoes, which I abhor. I can beat her severely with the rubber skillet and yet take her to the opera without there being any telltale contusions or abrasions to cause the diamond horseshoe to buzz with the gossip that Sullivan beats his cook.

There are so many ways of dealing with waiters without putting on the boxing gloves. Take the night of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight. There were five of us and we were in a hurry to get to the fight early. We told the waiter that and ordered dinner. Twenty minutes later he appeared with soup—the wrong soup. Twenty-five minutes later he appeared with the wrong entree. Having had a good deal of time for meditation, I had an idea.

"See here, garcon," I told him, "what would you say if I gave you this?"

He drew back instinctively and shielded himself with his tray.

"No, no," I told him; "fear not. What would you say if I gave you this?"

And from the recesses of my wallet I drew a long oblong cardboard, good for admission to a ringside seat at the fight.

"Can you go to the fight?" I asked him. "Could you accept this?"

"Gee!" he gasped. "You really mean it? Mebbe I can, at that. Mebbe the captain'll let me off if I tell him. Wait till I find out."

He sped off at a rate that amazed us.

Back he scooted in childish glee.

"I can go!" he cried. "Goody, goody; I can go!"

He got the coveted pasteboard.

After that there was no trouble. Dish after dish of succulent, well-cooked victuals appeared as if by magic. We had to tell him not to serve the food so fast. The trouble with the American business man on his way to a fight is that he is apt to eat too fast and get nervous indigestion. He said he couldn't help it; he didn't want to be late for the fight, and we would oblige him greatly if we hurried also.

"Otherwise you'll be late, too," he reminded us.

That gave one of my friends an idea.

"Say," he asked me; "you gave him your ticket. How are you going to get in?"

"By George!" I exclaimed. "That's right. I never thought of that."

There was a poser.

"Maybe we could ask him to give it back," I suggested, grasping at a straw.

That suggestion met with a series of mocking guffaws from my companions.

There was silence for a few moments. Then one of the crowd suddenly popped into animation.

"I have it!" he exclaimed.

"What? Tell us! Quickly!"

"Is he listening?" queried he who had it.

We peered cautiously about us and looked under the table. The waiter was not around.

"We must act quickly or it will be too late," said my friend.

Shortly after that we slunk out surreptitiously, much in the manner of persons rebuked by a head waiter.

That suited our purpose. I got my ticket back.

But the police never found out the identity of the five well-dressed men wearing masks who assaulted Benito Peronio, 35, waiter at the Hotel B—, and robbed him of his ticket to the Dempsey-Sharkey fight as he was leaving the servants' entrance of the hostelry on his way to the fight.

PARADISE REGAINED

One of the Sixteen Prize Short Stories of the Year Selected by a Group of American Editors.

By HAROLD W. BRECHT

There was a hail of blows, but so blind was his rage that he felt nothing, saw only through a kind of red mist this boy he hated.

RALPH was of the type of those queer boys who are good in school and fond of books. In the gay society of the children of Beulah road he was distrusted as a sissy, and it was only during the past summer that they had let him play with them. Prestige, in that society, depended largely on a history of successful combats, and each of its male members felt confident of being able to lick Ralph. This was partly because, perhaps, he was not very tall for one almost 13 and rather thin—slender, his mother put it. His mother said that he reminded her most strongly of Cousin Foster, his father's cousin, who had also been slender and pale (the Sumners were always pale), but he had filled out wonderfully. And Ralph was just such another dreamy child, and she was glad he had got in (at last) with some boys of his own age.

Ralph never thought now of those dreary, unfilled days before that society had permitted him to be one of them. His major happiness was playing with them. In the evenings they raced madly up and down the pavement, their footsteps flying, their voices high and shrill, while their parents sat on their porches and remarked, as they recognized voices in the tumult, "That's Ralph," or "That's Tommie," or "That's Betty." "Hide and Seek," "Kick the Wicket," "Run, Sheepie, Run," "Prisoner's Base," were some of the games they played, and when they became tired of running they lay on their stomachs in the grass, kicking their legs in the air, discussing which of the games they liked best. Ralph preferred "Prisoner's Base," though he was passionately fond of all of these games in which he could take so ardent and happy a part, unlike baseball or football, in which his lack of skill forced on him the ignominious role of an unnoticed spectator. Often at supper he was too excited to eat, and his father or mother would have to say, "Ralph, you've got to eat better'n that, or you don't stir out of the house tonight," before he would cram the unwanted food in his mouth, his blue eyes wide with fear that he would be deprived of this so great pleasure.

IF YOU had watched him playing, his high, merry voice clear above the others, his cheeks finally as ruddy as his friends', you would have thought him the gayest and most carefree in that society in which all were so gay, so reckless of worry. Yet during the past few days he was playing on the brink of a certain disaster, beneath the menace of a fear which was dire and changeless in the background of his mind. He shrank from admitting it, even to himself. In words, it was that he was afraid. He was only a sissy, and his friends would find out.

He was a sissy because he was afraid to fight. On Thursday last week, going to the other end of Ventnor on an errand, he had met Charley Livingston and another boy. Charley had dared him to fight, and he had been afraid. Charley had said that he was a sissy and when he got him he would smash his face. Charley was after him, and there was one street in Ventnor down which he dared not walk.

When his friends found out . . . The thought was worst as he lay in his dark, silent room, just before he went to sleep. Involuntarily he would open his eyes, not seeing the oppressive blackness but what would happen when Charley came finally to Beulah road to get him. Charley would appear when he was playing with his friends and, at sight of him, threatening and sinister, he would smile like the rest and say, "H'lo, Charley."

"Now I got you, you sissy," Charley would reply, scorning this mild propitiation. Then, amid the surprised silence of his friends, Charley would hit him, and he would smile, as if the blow were but a joke of Charley's.

"He's yellow," Charley would say, scornfully; "he's scared to fight. Go on, beat it, yellow belly, before I hurt you."

He would beat it, amid the faint jeers of those who had been his friends. After that, in the evenings when the rest played their mad games, he would have to watch them from a window, an outcast, or stand in the safety of his own yard, disconsolate, like Sidney Cohen.

That society of children would not accept Sidney Cohen because he was a Jew and because he could not be induced to fight. They called him "Izzy." When other games grew tiresome through the long summer evenings they would gather in a taunting semi-circle in front of Sidney's house, daring him to come out, shouting "Izzy Cohen, dirty Jew!" in their young, laughing voices. Sometimes Mrs. Cohen came on the porch and cried, in her harsh voice, with its foreign accent, "Go away, insolent children. Shame!" At her appearance all but the boldest dispersed into the shadows while these answered her with mock politeness until some other member of the family led her, protesting, into the house.

AFRAID to offer more than the passive protest of a noncombatant to the will of the majority, Ralph usually stood silent or slipped away unobtrusively when the rest gathered in front of Sidney's house. He was sorry for Sidney because he was like him, he felt, and it was only by the uncertain whim of fate that he, like the little Jew, was not also banned and an outcast. If Sidney would only turn and fight any one of his tormentors—but he was afraid and they all knew that he was afraid. Sidney didn't dare, any more than he, Ralph, dared to fight Charley Livingston.

His friends—they would not be his friends when they found out. He had had other worries before, such as whether he had lost his fountain pen or left it at school, whether he had been caught copying in the arithmetic examination. These had had a quality of variation; or with the passage of time became insignificant, so that he was almost disposed to regret them now, beneath the menace of this fear which was unchanging, and whose harshness time did not soften. Even when he thought of the favor shown him by his friends, of a girl in that society who was always on his side, no matter what the game, and who wrote him notes at school signed "Love and xxxx, Betty," his thoughts, no matter how wide their range, always returned, fettered with the shame of his cowardice, to his impending disgrace. The shadow of that dread was a somber background that could be relieved only ineffectually; and for a little while. They would couple him with Izzy, Izzy Cohen and "Sissy" Sumner.

But the days slipped past and he did not see Charley. Yet he had no hope that Charley had forgotten; it was only a postponement that he was enjoying, not an escape. In the evenings he played with an almost nervous fervor, as though each moment held a final, precarious pleasure, to be snatched before the arrival of certain disaster. Never, he thought, had the evenings been as happy as these, any one of which might end with Charley's coming and his ostracism. Reckless in the face of calamity, when his friends recounted their personal triumphs he added imaginary victories of his own (over Charley), though he never could feel that they were anything but—madeup.

AT SCHOOL it was not hard to avoid Charley, who was only in the seventh grade. Ralph went to school by a roundabout way, which he called "Route No. 3," like the Automobile Blue Book. In the morning he would say to himself, "I'll go by Route No. 3," as though he were starting on a tour.

Betty and her girl friend also took this route. (In the notes she wrote him the x's were for kisses). She would saunter ahead, her arms around her girl friend's neck, as though she were content with this affection, and Ralph, interested and wondering, could only follow, watching them giggle together. Sometimes, subtly irritated, he would chase them, grabbing at Betty's short flying hair until she turned her indignant face to him and cried, "Now you stop, Ralph Sumner." Or she would beckon to him. "Come here, I gotta secret to tell you." But at his approach she would usually laugh and pirouette away, her bare knees flashing. She was a pretty little thing, his mother said, and seemed a nice little girl, too, which was a wonder, with her mother gadding about the way she did, and painting her face, at her age.

One afternoon in school he was caught whispering to Betty and kept in. "Ralph," Miss Sensenderfer said, "this is the first time you have been kept in since school opened." He only smiled, in bravado, for in that society it was considered an admirable thing to raise heck in school. Miss Sensenderfer liked him and sometimes, when she asked him to help her after school and no one else was there, she called him "my dear." He hoped that no one in that society would ever get to know that. This afternoon he had to do a long-division problem, but she let him go before he had got it to come out even.

He went home by Route 3. As he approached Beulah road he saw, with a sudden sick sensation, a little knot of his friends on the curb. They had found out.

"How long'd she keep yuh?" Walter Meredith demanded.

They didn't know. He smiled. Tommie Cochrane, leader of that society, was writing with chalk on the pavement. Betty tried to stop him, rubbing with her foot at what he was writing, but he pushed her away. "G'wan," he commanded, "you know you said it."

"I did not," Betty declared.

Tommie drew a heart, and in it he wrote, "Betty Martin loves Ralph S." There was not enough room in the heart to write "Sumner." "Oh, Ralph," the boys and girls cried, laughing, "Betty's your girl."

Ralph felt shamed, irritated a little. "She is not," he disclaimed hotly.

"Oh, yes she is. Oh, Betty, who's your fellah?"

Betty stood defiant, rubbing the tip of her left slipper on her right leg. "Shut up, you make me tired," she said shortly, tossing her head. She walked away, with a flounce of her short skirt.

Ralph watched her, his irritation fading in a pleased, proprietary smile. Tommie Cochrane covered the pavement with descriptions of more of the amours of Beulah road. The other boys, sitting on the curb, began to boast of the girls, and Ralph, sitting beside them, clasping his knees in his arms, was finally proud to add his boast of Betty.

That night, playing "Kick the Wicket," they hid together under Ralph's front porch. That was a good place to hide, though it was hard to get out of in a hurry. You had to crawl under the lattice, which could be lifted a little, and inside it was dark, with an earthy smell. "Children," Ralph's mother said, "you'll get all dirty."

"Ssh!" they answered. Ralph helped Betty wriggle under, though she usually managed capably by herself. They lay on their stomachs, side by side, supporting their chins on their hands. He could just see her in the faint light which sifted through the lattice. But the tickle of her hair on his face and the feel of her body pressed against his gave him a strange, pleasant, almost frightening sensation. In the gloom, with the cool, earthy smell, he had the feeling of being completely removed from the world, from Charley, of release from the bitterness of his fears.

To them floated the voice of someone who had been caught: "Kick the wicket, and let me out." "Ralph," Betty said, "you didn't mean that, what you said this afternoon"——

"No, I didn't mean it," he interrupted. "I was just kiddin'. Look what I got for yuh." With difficulty from his pocket he drew a gold ring, from a nickel peppermint stick.

She was delighted. She put it on her finger, though it was too big. On the ring he swore that he would be her fellow and she that she would be his girl—forever.

THE next night, of that society which would soon fill the air with their laughter and the sound of their flying footsteps, Ralph was the first on the street. He was often first, not only because he was anxious lest a moment of their common gayety be wasted, but because he liked the street for its own sake. Tonight he was not quite so eager, for even as he ran down the echoing steps and out of his own yard he could not help remembering what had happened that afternoon in school. Charley had found occasion to whisper, while the classes were passing in the corridor, "Tonight, I'll git yuh." Tonight. He paused a moment on the pavement, stuffing his mouth with the fig cake that had been dessert, thinking of Charley. His fear was so keen that his mouth became dry and the cake almost choked him. Tonight. Yet as the houses and the double row of trees exercised over him their familiar spell it seemed to him that here was a sure refuge into which no alien figure could dare penetrate. It was so long ago that Charley had threatened first, so many evenings that he had not come. Deliberately he dismissed thought of Charley, as though over this thought he were complete master, surrendering himself to the familiar bright pleasure of the street's influence.

He thought now he would not wish to express his pleasure to any one of his friends, except to Betty. He began suddenly to run, playing a sort of gigantic hop-scotch with the shadows underneath the trees, leaping from dark place to dark place. Past Betty's house. From the dining rooms of all the houses shot ineffectual oblongs of light, and through the windows he could catch glimpses now and then of a boy or a girl in that society, lips moving in an animated fashion, as though talking.

It was odd for them to talk without his being able to hear them, to see them and not be seen. He had again the strange sensation of the previous evening, as though he were in a different, removed world. In the other world was Charley, and underneath the trees, the light caress of the wind on his cheeks, the thought of him had faded like an unpleasant dream, almost forgotten. He looked at his legs in their colored stockings with turn-over tops, at the low shoes his mother had bought for him, and he felt that the legs and feet were not a part of him, Ralph Sumner. They, like Charley, like his worries, belonged in the world behind the trees, inside the houses. There it was noisy and light. Here it was quiet, and in the darkness he was alone, but in his mind were bright dreams.

NOW doors were slamming on the street, and voices pierced the gloom. "Hi, Walter, where's Tommie?" "Hi!" "Is Tommie out yet?"

Ralph started to run toward the arc light that was their meeting place. He began to yell with sudden gayety at the top of his voice, "A-i-i-i!"

Suddenly he stopped, for underneath the arc light was a squat, sinister figure. Charley. Turn around. Go home.

Too late. "Hi, Ralph," one or two of his friends said. With dragging steps he walked into the circle of light. "Hi, sissy," Charley said.

Silence, while the ring of young, bright-eyed faces watched him expectantly. He could hear his heart beating. He looked, with hunted, imploring eyes, at the lit circle, at Charley's menacing, contemptuous figure.

"He called you a sissy," said Tommie Cochrane.

"We don't want no"—began Walter Meredith.

"Shut up," commanded Tommie, unhurried. Perhaps Tommie was on his side, perhaps he would say he didn't have to fight. "He says you're scared to fight him," continued the calm, inexorable voice.

"Sure he is," interposed Charley. "See." Charley shouldered him roughly and Ralph tried to smile, as though this were a private joke between Charley and him. "Don't you laugh at me," ordered Charley harshly, drawing back his fists as though to hit him. He cowered, raising his hands to shield himself from the blow. "What'd I tell yuh?" Charley laughed, and there were smiles on those lit faces. "Go on, beat it, yellah-belly, before I hurt yuh."

RALPH wanted, with words, to forestall or prevent the irrevocable finality of their judgment, but he could think of nothing to plead but "Let me stay," and he did not dare speak for fear he would start to cry. One last look at these boys who had been his friends. It was as though he were a stranger for whom they felt only malice. They regarded him with indifference and amusement.

"Beat it," Tommie Cochrane said.

He turned away from the lit circle into the dark street. He could hardly realize what had happened, but when one or two of the boys yelled "yellah-belly" after him he understood that his worst fear had come true. Like Sidney now. From now on he was the target for their ridicule and abuse, from now on, forever. Never, any more, would he be permitted to be a member of that society, but from that paradise of games completely an exile, utterly an outcast, he would have to be only a looker-on of their pleasure. Not even that if they noticed him. Beat it. Play, that was what he wanted to do, what he liked best in the world, and now he was only like Izzy. There was no one who would play with him. Every evening he would have to sit on the porch with his father and mother, waiting for the dull hours to pass while his father and mother said, "Ralph, do be quiet," or, "Ralph, go to bed." The next day would be like that, and the next, in each no fun, nothing to do. Before him was nothing but the gray prospect of those interminable days.

Unnoticed, his feet were leading him down to one end of Beulah road, where there was a vacant lot which was one of the properties of that society. Each part of it—almost each foot—had been for him its happy memory. Here was the cave they were digging when the said first, three months ago, that they could play with them; here was their hut; here was their furnace, where they roasted potatoes and, seeing himself forever barred from further share in any of these glories, he sank face downward in the tall weeds and sobbed openly. His worst fear—Charley had come after him to his street. They all knew, now. He would like to hurt Charley, hit him till he screamed in pain and begged for mercy, make him cry before the others. His hands were clenched as he wiped the tears from his own eyes. But he couldn't. He couldn't fight Charley. Charley was so strong. He could lick him easily. He was the one who would scream in pain and cry for mercy. He did not dare offer himself as a mark for those fists. He was afraid. Even here, by himself, he was afraid of Charley. To this alien figure who had so lightly spoiled his happiness he had done nothing, except to try to propitiate him, and Charley had done all this to him. Worse than that. Now all the boys would have in him a convenient butt for their cruelty. They'd chase him, shouting names, instead of Sidney. In the sport of persecuting a new victim Sidney would escape, a little. He was the one they'd follow to school now. "Yellow-belly." they would call him. "Sissy Sumner."

THERE was a rustle in the weeds. He started to his feet, he had no right by the hut now, and a feminine scream of simulated fear greeted him. "Ooh! Ralph! Where have you been? I been lookin' everywhere for you."

Betty. Disregarding his publishable shame, she had come to find him. Though he was only a sissy, she was still his girl. He thought, with humiliation, that of all that society it was only a girl who remained his friend.

They sat down with their backs against the hut, and the weeds, as tall as they were, brushed his cheeks and hands with their cool, damp touch. He hoped that in the darkness she could not see that he had been crying. She hunched up her legs, and her bare knees had a quality of pale light in the gloom. He had, oddly, a desire to touch them. She tried to pull her skirt over her legs. On her finger the ring wabbled, almost came off.

"Look what I got for you," she said gayly, taking from the pocket of her skirt a crushed piece of candy, as though the purpose of her coming had been to give him that, and not to share his disgrace and grief.

"I don't want it. You eat it."

"Go ahead, take it. It's good. It got a cherry inside. They cost a dollar a pound."

He put it in his mouth, and the surprising amount of juice it contained spurted on his chin. They laughed. He had thought just now, that it would be a long time before he would laugh again.

it. Play, that was what he wanted to do, what he liked best in the world, and now he was only like Izzy. There was no one who would play with him. Every evening he would have to sit on the porch with his father and mother, while his father and mother said: "Ralph, do be quiet," or, "Ralph, go to bed." The next day would be like that, and the next, in each no fun, nothing to do. Before him was nothing but the gray prospect of those interminable days.

Unnoticed, his feet were leading him down to one end of Beulah road, where there was a vacant lot which was one of the properties of that society. Each part of it—almost each foot—had had for him its happy memory. Here was the cave they were digging when they said first, three months ago, that he could play with them; here was their hut; here was their furnace, where they roasted potatoes and, seeing himself forever barred from further share in any of these glories, he sank facedownward in the tall weeds and sobbed openly. His worst fear—Charley had come after him to his street. They all knew, now. He would like to hurt Charley, hit him till he screamed in pain and begged for mercy, make him cry before the others. His hands were clenched as he wiped the tears from his own eyes. But he couldn't. He couldn't fight Charley. Charley was so strong. He could lick him easily. He was the one who would scream in pain and cry for mercy. He did not dare offer himself as a mark for those fists. He was afraid. Even here, by himself, he was afraid of Charley. To this alien figure who had so lightly spoiled his happiness he had done nothing, except to try to propitiate him, and Charley had done all this to him. Worse than that. Now, all the boys would have in him a convenient butt for their cruelty. They'd chase him, shouting names, instead of Sidney. In the sport of persecuting a new victim Sidney would escape, a little. He was the one they'd follow to school now. "Yellow-belly," they would call him. "Sissy Sumner."

THERE was a rustle in the weeds. He started to his feet, he had no right by the hut now, and a feminine scream of simulated fear greeted him. "Ooh! Ralph! Where're you been? I been lookin' everywhere for you."

Betty. Disregarding his published shame, she had come to find him. Though he was only a sissy, she was still his girl. He thought with humiliation, that of all that society it was only a girl who remained his friend.

They sat down with their backs against the hut, and the weeds, as tall as they were, brushed his cheeks and hands with their cool, damp touch. He hoped that in the darkness she could not see that he had been crying. She hunched up her legs, and her bare knees had a quality of pale light in the gloom. He had, oddly, a desire to touch them. She tried to pull her skirt over her legs. On her finger the ring wabbled, almost came off.

"Look what I got for you," she said gayly, taking from the pocket of her skirt a crushed piece of candy, as though the purpose of her coming had been to give him that, and not to share his disgrace and grief.

"I don't want it. You eat it."

"Go ahead, take it. It's good. It's got a cherry inside. They cost a dollar a pound."

He put it in his mouth, and the surprising amount of juice it contained spurted on his chin. They laughed. He had thought just now, that it would be a long time before he would laugh again.

She pretended that his chin had to be wiped off. She wiped it off with her handkerchief, smelling faintly of chocolate, her short hair brushing his cheek. He remembered that in "Drop the Handkerchief" she al-

Fired at a Bird—Killed His Friend

A Strange Story of the Sea and a Bullet That Ricocheted.

By Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

GALVESTON, Texas.

A TALE as weird as any tale that has ever come from the sea has been told by the skipper of the Edgemore, touching at this port of call. It is the story of a bird as strange as the albatross of Coleridge's Ancient Mariner. A bird that came like destiny itself to bind in tragedy the strong friendship of two men of the sea.

One of those men was Captain Hansen, skipper of the Edgemore. The other was Olaf Sundgat, as able a seaman as ever walked the decks.

This is the story the Captain told when the Edgemore put in here the other day:

"I was in port at Genoa, Italy, during the Christmas holidays of 1919. The crew was ashore celebrating. Two Italian watchmen and myself were the only men aboard. At 2 a. m. one of them came to me with word that a dead man was in the engineer's room. I dressed and went down, finding a bloody mass that was a man. Realizing an operation was necessary, I began work, and sewed up scores of slashes in the man's body.

"I washed the man's face and saw he was not a member of my crew. I put him in the ship's little hospital, and two days later, despite his wounds, he was at work. Ah, Olaf Sundgat really was a man of steel. There never was a more perfect specimen of man. He was as good a seaman as ever slept in a hammock."

FOR eight years Captain Hansen and Olaf were shipmates in the United States Shipping Board service. Olaf had waived rights for promotion as navigator "to swab decks for the skipper, even if it was a canoe."

"He told everybody he owed his life to me," said the Captain. "But he didn't. He would have come out of the trouble at Genoa as he had come out of trouble at other ports. He was known from ocean to ocean as a man."

Homeward bound from Rotterdam, the Edgemore was in Florida Straits, July 30, off Sombrero Lighthouse.

On that day the queerest bird that anyone on board had ever seen flew over the ship. Members of the crew told the skipper, who was a crack shot. The strange seabird circled, ever circled, the ship as it cut a track through the still, coppery waters.

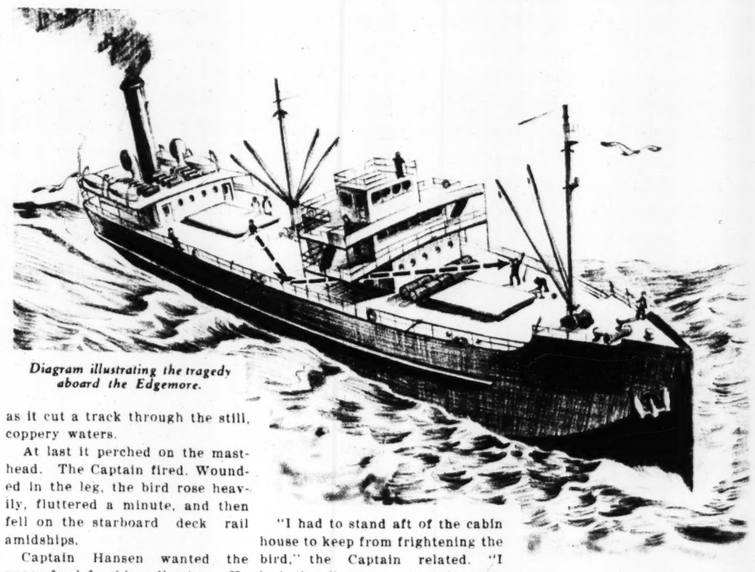

Diagram illustrating the tragedy aboard the Edgemore.

At last it perched on the masthead. The Captain fired. Wounded in the leg, the bird rose heavily, fluttered a minute, and then fell on the starboard deck rail amidships.

Captain Hansen wanted the queer fowl for his collection. He took two cooks and a fireman and went aft to the midship cabin for another shot.

"I had to stand aft of the cabin house to keep from frightening the bird," the Captain related. "I had the fireman go to the rear with a full view of the passageway to warn anyone coming from the for'd deck. The cooks were directly behind me.

"'Is the starboard passageway clear?' I asked. 'Aye, sir, the starboard passageway is clear,' came the answer.

"I fired and missed, and the bird fluttered up again. There was no hum of the bullet. I walked around the portside, where we thought the bird had flown."

And there the skipper found Sundgat lying on the deck, a bullet hole in his right temple. Captain Hansen sent a radio to the Coast Guard cutter station at Key West for medical aid, but Olaf died two hours after being shot.

GOVERNMENT investigators found the death of Olaf Sundgat to be one of the uncanniest happenings of the sea.

Sundgat had been separated from the spot where the Captain fired by six cabin walls of one-inch steel. The skipper was 12 feet from the rail of the ship and Sundgat was oiling the for'd deck another 12 feet away, on the other side of the cabin.

This is what happened, Government inspectors disclosed: The bullet from Captain Hansen's automatic pistol had ricocheted from a one-inch round rail, following a crazy course that it would be almost impossible to duplicate again.

The height of the gun when fired was four feet and eight inches. The rail was three feet and eight inches high. Olaf's temple at the time he was shot, as he bent down to his task, was four feet and eight inches from the deck, inspectors estimated.

A direct tangent from the point of the gun to the rail to the man's temple carried the bullet over this course, a distance of 36 feet from the point of the gun to the rail, decreasing in altitude exactly one foot. Glancing from the rail the bullet took an angular passage of 55 feet, increasing in altitude one foot, passing through an opening in the cabin walls eight inches square, between two winch pulleys, just back of which Olaf was working, and found its mark.

ANOTHER sailor working alongside Olaf saw him crumple. He was buried at sea.

He had no "kinfolks" and very few knew him well. It was said that he had done several "hitches" in the United States Navy.

"Olaf was a man of iron and steel," the Captain said. "He was closer to my heart than any member of my crew."

At a recent hearing before a United States Shipping Board Commission at this port, Hansen was cleared officially of any blame in the death of Sundgat.

"My Most Thrilling Air Experience"

By WALTER HINTON

(Editor's Note: Mr. Hinton is one of the early pioneers of aviation. He blazed the trail across the Atlantic piloting the NC-4 navy seaplane in 1919 and flew the plane on a tour around the coast of the U. S. on his return. His next big achievement was the flight from New York to Rio de Janeiro, and following that he flew a seaplane over 12,000 miles up the Amazon on the latest scientific expedition of Dr. Hamilton Rice. He is now teaching young aspiring aviators to imitate his own skill and daring in the air. This article is one of a series being published in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.)

AROUND the Christmas holidays of the year 1920 I sailed with two other naval men from Rockaway, L. I., for a trial balloon flight. A gentle breeze took us in a northwesterly direction and we floated over New York and up Fifth avenue, crossing the Hudson at Ninety-sixth street.

During the afternoon we passed through a little rain and just after nightfall we encountered a dead calm, with a light falling snow. Turning our flashlight on the bottom of the bag so we could be seen, we shouted to some people in the main street of the town below us and discovered we were over Wells, New York.

It was ideal flying weather, and we decided to reach a higher altitude and find a breeze that would take us westward and keep us going all night. That would be good experience for us and add that many flying hours to our records. Throwing out sand, we climbed more than half a mile, where we were surprised to find a blast of air that buffeted the basket about like a small ship in a big sea. We were picked up in the grip of a mighty wind, thrusting us through a welter of clouds, and before we knew it were riding in the lap of a winter hurricane.

The balloon bounced around like a ball—snapping us up suddenly with the speed of an express elevator, only to stop short, nearly breaking our necks. We could see nothing—it was inky black. Terrified and wondering if and when it was ever going to stop, we were suddenly plunged into a tree and all sent tumbling to the bottom of the basket, dazed and helpless.

BUT again the bag bounded up, dragging us clear of that tree and into another. This time it struck with such force that we thought surely it would break in pieces and let us out. There was a bag of sand—some 25 pounds of it—open on the floor of the basket, and when this was thrown out by the force, the balloon shot straight up in the air again for more than a mile.

I knew we weren't riding the air currents according to theory and I climbed up on the load ring to examine the bag. I found that it had shifted in the net so that it held our basket out to one side. We plunged into rain, then snow, and the little clothing we wore was soaked.

Walter Hinton.

Every method we could think of to land would have meant suicide at the speed we were making—the Weather Bureau reported that the wind velocity registered from 55 to 72 miles an hour in that region on that night. About 1 o'clock in the morning we spotted several lighted huts in a thick wood. We shouted and the doors opened. In answer to our shouts, all lights were extinguished and we could hear the noise of the doors shutting.

THE compass needle was wriggling all over, and it was impossible to check up our general direction. It commenced to snow heavily, and it gathered on top of the bag. This necessitated our heaving out sand in order to remain up. It was turning colder quickly, and the storm grew worse. There were no signs of habitation—nothing but snow and trees, and the wind was still blowing a gale. We had to throw out all the ballast we had left to stay in the air, and this sent us up above the clouds. The air was clear and the sun warm, and it melted the snow on top of the bag, giving us more buoyancy, and we shot up still another mile.

We knew that the sun would expand the gas and we would keep on ascending, which was not what we desired, as our aim now was to reach shelter, for we were all in. We thought we were somewhere over New York State, but were far from home. However, we knew we had to land soon, even though there had been nothing in sight but trees and snow since daybreak.

We had just taken a vote and decided to cut loose the basket, when we heard a dog barking. That meant that human beings must be in the neighborhood, and we prepared to land. We immediately valved out the gas and dropped steadily from 6000 to 1200 feet. Then, jumping on the edge of the basket, one of the others grasped the valve cord, and I took the rip-panel cord, and we pulled together. The bag ripped instantly and we dropped, struck the ground a terrific blow, rebounded and, after a long lunge, landed against a big pine tree, where the balloon hung.

Climbing out of the basket, which barely touched the ground, we fixed the direction from which we had heard the dog. It was far below zero weather. We tramped and tramped, fighting sleep when we stopped at nightfall and enduring untold misery for four days, when we found a frightened Indian, who finally led us to Moose Factory, Hudson Bay, Canada, and safety. We stayed there a week to "thaw out" and then started mushing the trail back to New York.

On a brief flight of 25 hours we had been blown from New York almost half way to the North Pole, and it took us 31 days to return, and what we went through is almost impossible to describe.

"I like you an awful lot, Betty. better'n anybody, I guess." The avowal trembled on his lips, and he tried to lower his eyes, but her eager gaze held his, her face brilliant with pleasure.

"I like you, too, better'n anybody."

They sat in silence for a little while, noises of the night surging around them, broken now and then by shouts and laughter from the boys and girls playing on the street. "I guess maybe you'd rather be with them," he said at length, mentioning with difficulty that society from which he was an exile, "instead of just sittin' here."

"I would not. I hate that little Charley Livingston. I think he's horrid."

"I could 'a' fought him if I wanted to."

"I wouldn't dirty my hands if I was you."

CALMLY she accepted the lie, making a virtue even of his cowardice. He moved his hand over the rough stuff of her skirt until it reached, as if by chance, her leg. The cool, bare skin was as though surrendered and waiting for his hesitant touch, as though fulfilled and made valuable only by his contact. "Stop," she cried, "you're ticklin' me." Her little hard fingers attacked his ribs. Gayly they scuffled, almost wrestled together, seizing handfuls of weeds and trying to poke them into each other's mouths.

"Oh, Ralph," she said, spitting out fragments of grass, "you're awful ticklish."

He said that, if you held your breath, it was impossible for anyone to make you laugh, unless you wanted to.

Panting and disheveled, they sat in silence again. She had come to him when he was despised and forsaken, content to share his loneliness. He would never forget that, he thought. He wished that there were some danger from which he could heroically rescue her, save her from a fire or a robber. But there was nothing he could do. He did not even have words to express his feelings.

THE gay voices on the street sounded nearer. He stirred uneasily. He had forgotten for the moment that his disgrace had been proclaimed, that he was only a sissy, barred with contempt from happiness. Like Izzie now. If they found him here with a girl. He had no right here, by the hut he had helped to build.

"Let's go up to my house and sit on the steps," Betty said.

"Awright." He followed her through the tall grass and weeds toward the pavement.

"Here comes Sissy Sumner! Oh, here he comes." A little knot of boys was on the curb, as though waiting for them. They stood up and danced around him. "Oh, see the ol' sis," they yelled with delight. "Yellah-belly, scared to fight," Walter Meredith said. Others seized on this and made it into a kind of chant, adding, "Out with a girl, out with a girl," laughing immoderately between the lines.

He darted hunted glances around him, looking from one derisive gleeful face to another.

"Come on, Ralph," Betty said, disdainfully tossing her head. "Take no notice."

Contemptuously Charley Livingston made his way to the front, and stood before them, blocking their way. "Well, Sissy Sumner," he drawled insultingly, "where d'yuh think you're goin'?"

"Just you get out of my way, Charley Livingston," Betty said.

"He gets a girl to fight for him," a boy remarked, laughing.

"Just you get out of my way," Charley mocked her, his voice falsetto. She pushed forward. He grabbed her flying hair.

Ralph saw her wince with pain, saw the boy he hated grin at her. Suddenly he forgot everything but his hate. He leaped forward on Charley. There was a hail of blows, but so blind was his rage that he felt nothing, saw only through a kind of red mist this boy whom he hated. He was going to kill him. "Ow, ow, give up!" A scream of pain. "Give up!" Charley was in the gutter and he was on top of him, hitting him in the face.

Someone pulled him off and held him. They had to help Charley to his feet. He was crying. His face was twisted with pain. His nose was bleeding, and he kept both hands over one eye. The boys tried to see his eye, but he pushed them away. "Boy, that's a beaut," they said; "that'll be a beaut tomorrah."

"WHEN you get home, put a piece of raw beef on it," Tommie Cochrane said. It was Tommie who was holding him. Ralph could feel himself trembling.

"I guess our ol' Ralphie ain't some little fighter," Walter Meredith said.

Tears and blood were mingled on Charley's face. Suddenly he turned and started to run up the street, limping a little. The boys shouted derisively after him. "Better stay home where you belong." "Hurry up, Ralph'll git yuh."

The boys gathered round Ralph, congratulating him. They said that they had known all along that he could lick Charley. They were glad, because none of them liked Charley. They discussed Charley's eye and how it would look next day. "Oh, boy," they said, laughing, "it'll be black." They said that Ralph was some little fighter. "I hope to tell yuh," Tommie Cochrane said. "I thought you was gonna kill him till I pulled yuh off." They discussed whether or not it had been a fair fight, since Ralph had hit him after he was down. They decided that it was all right to hit someone when he was down if he had not said, "Give up!"

They all talked excitedly at once, pointing out to one another where Charley had lain in the gutter, mimicking how he had cried, but Ralph heard them only vaguely, hearing instead a gay voice in his brain which was singing, "I licked him, I licked him." He wanted to dance and shout, let this paean of joy fill the air as it filled his mind. "I licked him." Over the worst of his fears he was conqueror. Charley's face, smeared with tears and blood. He had given him a black eye. He had not been afraid. Izzie would have been afraid. There was nothing about him like Izzie any more. Izzie was a coward, scared to fight. He was not. He could lick Charley the next day. Charley had called him a sissy. He would make him take it back, go after Charley to Charley's street.

He almost swaggered toward Betty, as though drunk with the intoxication of his prowess. "I licked 'em," he said.

"How d'ja give him that black eye?" one of the boys was asking.

"OH, WITH my left hook, I guess." He showed the boys how he used his left hook. He looked at their intent, admiring faces, knowing that wordlessly they were welcoming him back to that society, that they were glad he was their friend.

"What d'yuh want to play, Ralph?" Tommie Cochrane asked.

A little later they were in a taunting semi-circle in front of Izzie's house, chanting in their high, childish voices, "Izzie Cohen, dirty Jew." In the front was Ralph, his high, merry voice clear above the others.

Mrs. Cohen appeared on the porch and most of them scattered into the shadows, but Ralph, with one or two of the boldest, held his ground. "Shame, insolent children," she cried. "Shame on you!"

Gayly he led the jibes that greeted her. He dared to bandy words with her, an adult, adapting a sort of profane hymn:

Missus Cohen gave a party,
Nobody came but a big fat
darky

spurred on by the laughter and admiration of his friends. Betty was at his side, his girl. He was supremely happy.

CAN you believe your eyes? Note the actual photographs above. The same wonderful demonstration on your feet, free if it fails.

No wonder pedodyne solvent has caused the whole world of foot specialists to turn their attention from surgery to the miracle of chemistry that gently but surely dissolves the growth.

So far as the painful part of bunions is concerned, you may forget it from your first day with pedodyne—for relief is almost instant.

Actual reduction of the enlarged growth takes a little time. Two weeks or more. Isn't it wonderful that you can absolutely do away with the malformation and be wearing a smaller, trimmer shoe by the time you need new shoes again?

Trial FREE

The pedodyne process is scientific, and cannot be explained here. But the full treatment guaranteed to bring complete results may be yours to try—if you'll only clip this special coupon and mail it today.

Iso-Vis Cushions all Frictional Surfaces

Sound lubricating practice calls for an oil that maintains a cushioning film of oil between all moving parts. This oil must be neither too thick nor too thin, but must maintain its body within a relatively narrow range.

Iso-Vis, the new constant viscosity motor oil manufactured by this Company, meets every one of these requirements. To allow the lubrication system to function properly it is necessary with this oil, as with all others, that the oil gauge be checked every one hundred miles, and the crankcase kept at least three-quarters full at all times.

If this is done, draining once each thousand miles is all that is necessary. If your car is new and equipped with effective oil filtering devices, draining once in each two thousand miles is sufficient.

Let your mind go back to the days of old type oil and contrast motoring from Chicago to Harney Peak and return without changing motor oil, with the old practice of draining and flushing your crankcase three or four times on such a trip.

Then you will have a clear perception of the benefits of using Iso-Vis, a new oil manufactured by the Standard Oil Company [Indiana] to meet the newest theory of scientific lubrication.

Iso-Vis maintains its viscosity. The body is the same at the finish as it was in the beginning. Constant viscosity means constant lubricating efficiency and constant smooth motoring—dilution troubles at an end—engine running quietly on cushion of oil—protected, contented, well cared for.

Try it and you will be convinced. Buy the grade of Iso-Vis recommended for your car. 30c per quart.
At any Standard Oil station and at licensed garages. ISO-VIS "F" FOR FORDS.

If you don't "TAKE TO" spinach

YOU hear the question frequently wherever women gather: "How can I make the children eat spinach?"

Grown-ups, too, have the same difficulty.

We should eat spinach. The doctors are quite right about it. It contains valuable mineral salts and it does help to regulate. But it, alone, won't regulate. No matter how valuable a food spinach is, you can hardly eat it as often as you need an intestinal "regularizer"—three times a day.

Eat spinach when you like. But to insure complete, prompt elimination, physicians are telling people to eat a simple food: Fleischmann's Yeast, one cake before each meal.

As fresh as a newly picked garden vegetable, Fleischmann's Yeast keeps your whole intestinal tract clean and active. It trains and strengthens the intestinal muscles. It promotes more regular, complete elimination. You feel alive, a new person.

Hundreds of thousands of people have regained health by making Fleischmann's Yeast a regular part of their diet. Relieving them from constipation, Yeast has cleared their blood of impurities, improved their digestion, brightened their complexions, brought a new vigor to their whole systems.

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one cake before each meal or between meals. Eat it plain or drink it dissolved in water, cold or hot (not scalding). Or any other way you prefer. Order from six to ten cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast at a time from your grocer and keep it in any cool dry place. Send for our latest booklet on Yeast in the diet. Dept. N-942, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

Everett, Mass.

"There are so many interesting and worth-while things to see at a Food Show. It is just about a year ago, at the Boston Food Fair, that I had my first taste of Fleischmann's Yeast, at one of the demonstration booths there.

"Interested, I decided to give Yeast a trial. I was troubled with constipation, dizzy spells and indigestion. I was really miserable.

"Well! I must say the results from the daily use of Yeast were far beyond my expectations. Today I am absolutely free from my old troubles. My skin is clear and so pink and white that my friends often ask my secret of health—to which I reply, 'Just eat Fleischmann's Yeast every day.'"

Nine times out of ten, mental and physical "let-downs" are due to overstrained nerves or digestive unrest—or both.

Delicious Ovaltine instantly overcomes this trouble. This is why:

FIRST—It digests very quickly. Even in cases of impaired digestion.

SECOND—It supplies your system with certain health-building essentials which are often missing from your daily fare. One cup of Ovaltine has actually more food value than 12 cups of beef extract.

THIRD—Ovaltine has the unusual power of digesting 4 to 5 times its own weight of other foods you eat. Hence digestion goes on speedily and efficiently. Quick assimilation follows which is restoring to the entire body. Frayed nerves are soothed. Your mind clears and your body responds. You become alert, both mentally and physically.

Doctors recommend

You will like the flavor of Ovaltine. Unlike any drink you have ever tasted. It contains no drugs. It is the special food properties of Ovaltine—and absolutely nothing else—that bring its wonderful results and popularity. In use in Switzerland for over 30 years. Now in universal use in England and her colonies. More than 20,000 doctors recommend it. Not only as a quick "pick-up" beverage, but because of its special dietetic properties, they also recommend it for sleeplessness, nerve-strain, malnutrition, backward children and the aged.

A 3-day test

Drink a cup or glass of Ovaltine whenever you feel low or nervously tired. See how quickly it picks you up. There is a new zest to your work—to all your daily activities.

That is the experience of most Ovaltine users.

All druggists sell Ovaltine in 4 sizes for home use. Or they can mix it for you at the soda fountain. But to let you try it we will send a 3-day introductory package for 10 cents to cover cost of packing and mailing. Just send in the coupon with 10 cents.

The Last Dance Over-Vivacity Gone

An evening of good dances . . . but you're tired with the dancing, the sparkle has fled from your eyes. Your mouth is weary from laughter. Your face feels tired.

How can you relieve this facial fatigue?

This Cleansing Treatment relieves Facial Fatigue

BY MADAME JEANNETTE DE CORDET
Beauty Specialist

JUST to kick off your shoes, and sink down on the bed—but that wouldn't rest your tired face.

Pompeian Night Cream smoothed over your face in a generous creamy layer is cleansing and restful. Pompeian Night Cream has a dual purpose. It is at once cleansing and nourishing. Because it is a rather heavy cream, it needs to be massaged into the pores. Because it is a nourishing cream it needs to be left on the face—a half hour, an hour—all night if you can. In the morning, how clean and gloriously youthful your skin feels.

This soothing away of all traces of weariness from your face each time you are tired—after a shopping expedition, or an afternoon of sport—this gentle cleansing of your skin with Pompeian Night Cream means a fresh and youthful face in the years to come. No fagged lines to show that you have led a busy life, but a complexion that shows intelligent care.

The forehead... Remove lines from forehead by massaging in Pompeian Night Cream with swift up-and-down and slow outward-pulling strokes.

The eyes... Weariness around the eyes is banished by firmly massaging Night Cream around the eye sockets and gently over the lids.

The nose and mouth... Take away the lines at the corners of your mouth and nose by massaging with slow outward strokes that curve far out to the ears.

The chin and neck... Beginning under the chin, stroke firmly upward and outward to the ears—this lifts the sagging muscles of the chin.

For a Powder Base
DAY CREAM

Pompeian Day Cream prepares your skin for a busy day. It is light and disappears instantly as it is applied—yet it gives a smooth, delicate finish to the skin. A little Pompeian Day Cream spread on your face the first thing in the morning makes powder dust on evenly, and stay on. Then through the day you are relieved from embarrassing face shine.

Because Pompeian Day Cream is slightly astringent it also has an enlivening effect on the skin.

Tired Eyes made Young

UNFORGETABLE eyes may soon be forgotten—if their lustre grows dull; if wrinkles, hollows or puffiness surround them.

Kathleen Mary Quinlan has shown innumerable fashionable leaders of New York how to retain the vital, glowing radiance of youth in their eyes. These secrets are now available to you. They are the Three Laws of Youth for Eyes, gleaned from nature's own laboratories: to cleanse the eyes carefully; to nourish the surrounding tissues; to tighten the skin.

For youthful eyes, employ these three preparations:

Quinlan Eye Bath, cleanses and soothes the eyes. $1.00, $2.00
Quinlan Vah-Dah Eye Cream, smoothes out wrinkles and nourishes the tissues. $1.00, $2.00
Quinlan Vah-Dah Eye Astringent, banishes puffiness, tightens tired muscles. $3.00, $5.50

Ask for Miss Quinlan's brochure, "Youth for Tired Eyes," at the leading department stores, where you also will find her famous preparations for eyes, skin and hair.

3661 imitations but only one "Canada Dry"

THERE are so many imitations of "Canada Dry" on the market today that you must watch carefully if you want to make sure of getting the original.

Most of the imitations are sold in green bottles similar to those used by "Canada Dry." Some of them have copied our name and our label so closely that it has been necessary for us to take legal steps to prevent what is palpably a fraudulent practice.

We are doing this for your protection as well as our own. For you are certain to be disappointed when you pay your good money for one of these imitation beverages.

Only in "Canada Dry" will you find the real "Canada Dry" flavor. Only in "Canada Dry" will you find the outstanding purity and quality that have made this fine old ginger ale so popular in Canada and in this country.

Common sense in buying shoes for boys and girls

WHAT are the things you look for in children's shoes? Good looks are one. . . . Yes, but any red-blooded youngster can make the most costly shoes look like "thirty cents" in almost no time.

Endicott-Johnson shoes have fine style and appearance—yet they are not high-priced. You can buy four pairs for what two to three expensive pairs cost. And with good looks you'll get good wear for the money you pay.

Endicott-Johnson make good shoes for boys and girls, to sell at reasonable prices, because our production is the largest in the world. Our efficiency is probably the highest. We operate under a "partnership" arrangement with our workers. Our factories are concentrated in one locality. We keep down overhead. We eliminate many middle profits by tanning our own leather and making practically everything ourselves that goes into our shoes. Thus controlling our supply of materials and keeping the quality to our standards means a lot—to us and to you.

When you buy a pair of Endicott-Johnson shoes you buy value in footwear. You get the benefit of rigid manufacturing economy. And the skilled workmanship of shoemakers who regard your steady patronage as the soundest rock upon which their prosperity can be built.

By BILL CONSELMAN and CHARLIE PLUMB

Ella and Blackie are still rolling high over the deep on their way to New York—

I DON'T GET ANY FUN ON THIS SHIP EXCEPT WATCHING SEASICK PEOPLE—AND EVEN THAT CAN BE OVERDONE!

YOU'VE GOT THAT LITTLE MAGNET—SEE IF THAT WON'T ATTRACT SOME AMUSEMENT!

HEY—YOU SHORT-CIRCUITED A MOTOR! TAKE THAT MAGNET AWAY BEFORE I STRAIGHTEN IT OUT AND BEND IT AGAIN ON YOUR BEAN!

WISH I WAS ASHORE—I DON'T LIKE WATER ANY PLACE—ON THE EARS, NECK, OR UNDER SHIPS! NOBODY'S ORDERED ME OUT OF ANYWHERE FOR FIVE MINUTES—GUESS I'LL GET UP HERE WHERE I CAN'T BE IN ANYTHING!

GRAB HOLD HERE, ADMIRAL, AND HELP ME STEER THIS BANANA BARGE! ONLY, DON'T LET ANYBODY SEE YOU—OR THE OCEAN'LL BE WAVIN' YOU GOODBYE!

YOU CAN TAKE THE REST OF THE DAY OFF, SAILOR—I'LL STEER THIS FRUIT FRIGATE!

THIS STEERS A LOT EASIER THAN MY EXPRESS WAGON AT HOME!

THE MAGNET

ONE HOUR LATER

ACCORDING TO THIS, THE SUN IS OFF ITS COURSE!

BY THE GREAT HORN SPOON—KNIFE, FORK, AND DISHES, TOO! NO WONDER WE'RE SAILING CIRCLES—THIS MAGNET HAS THROWN THE COMPASS INTO REVERSE! IN THE NAME OF ALL OF NEPTUNE'S NIT-WITS, WHOSE IS IT?

DO YOU BEGIN TO REALIZE WHAT YOUR INFERNAL MAGNET HAS DONE—AND THAT I OUGHT TO HEAVE YOU IN THE BRIG FOR A HUNDRED YEARS AND THEN START TO PUNISH YOU?

A DELAYED MESSAGE FROM THE BATTLESHIP PENNSYLFORNIA, SIR—IT SHOULD HAVE BEEN RECEIVED AN HOUR AGO—WARNING US TO CHANGE OUR COURSE BECAUSE THEY ACCIDENTALLY DROPPED A LOADED MINE DIRECTLY IN OUR PATH!

WELL, YOU REALLY OUGHT TO FAN THE BREEZE FROM A YARD-ARM, BUT AFTER ALL—IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR YOU AND YOUR MAGNET, WE'D HAVE SAILED ON OUR RIGHT COURSE, HIT THE MINE, AND BEEN DISTRIBUTED LIKE AN EDITION! YOU'RE A GREAT LITTLE FELLOW, AND AFTER WE GET ASHORE, I'M GOING TO BUY YOU A WHOLE GROSS OF MAGNETS—TO STAY THERE!
